President Speaks Of College Size

Advantages of Various Sized Institutions Stated In Chapel.

"I, myself, think strongly that the present size of the college is good," said President Blunt in her chapel talk yesterday morning, "as do most of the members of the administration."

She continued to say that although there are a very few more, she has concurred for a number of years that between seven and eight hundred students is the maximum number which must be considered at this time before the college can expand. That is the size of the student body, for it is impossible to build the future, and it is, of course, unknown what the successors of the present administration will do.

When the college of fifteen hundred and those of a college of five hundred or less, in the larger institution there is, of necessity, more members of the faculty and more student contact. That is the moment of the small college, for it is impossible to build the future, and it is, of course, unknown what the successors of the present administration will do. It is the advantage of the college of fifteen hundred and those of a college of five hundred or less that the student can have more contact with his professor, more contact with his faculty, more freedom from little petty gossip. A larger college allows more diversity in student contact. It is so.

In a small college, however, you can know more people, the friendship is greater than in a large group, and there is more friendship between the students, and you can have the stimulus of personal as well as classroom contacts with the faculty.

Miss Blunt places Connecticut as a medium to small college and has some of the advantages of the large and the small college. In conclusion, she asked that as alumnus, students "be proud of the change," and look upon them as the only wholesome state for a medium to small college.

Painting Presented By Famous Artist

Mrs. Frances Hudson Storrs of Hartford, one of the foremost flower painters of the country, has presented to the college one of her most colorful paintings to hang in the Library. The picture, which is pasted, as are most of her pictures, in Gloucester, Mass., where she goes frequently, is entitled "Spring." It was painted at the studio of the artist in his home in Gloucester, Mass., where he has resided for many years. It is a well-known fact that the artist, Mrs. Storrs, is a close friend of President Blunt, and her picture is a welcome addition to the college art collection.

The painting was chosen for the college by Miss Blunt, because it so perfectly suits the scheme of decoration, repeating and combining as it does practically all the colors of the room, and in this way helping to furnish it and draw it together.

Art Club Announces Show for Students

The Art Club is making plans for an exhibition of extra-curricular art work to be held next January. Hanging space is open to all students of C. C., and it is hoped that non-art students, as well as those painting courses are part of the creative work that has been done outside of C. C. classes.

This exhibition, which is under the direction of Palamna Williams, is designed for the purpose of showing pastel, etchings, prints, and sculpture which would not otherwise be shown in the department of Fine Arts. Open to C. C. students here is the one given by the art department in the Life Drawing class. The Life Drawing class is at the end of the year. Works of non-art students, and students who have never been shown at college, although there are many creditable paintings and prints on view.

Exhibition experience is immensely valuable. It is through exhibitions that an artist comes in contact with the lay audience. He finds out how people react to his works and (Continued on Page 4, Column 3)

“Followship”

Extensive as the English language is, it lacks many needed words. In contrast with the word “leadership” we could coin a new word—“followship”.

We bear much about leadership and the qualities which make for executive ability, but little is said about “followship” and the qualities which make for good followers. We should be one of the first to say that being a leader is not the same as the other. Without an able leader, great groups are without a goal. Without a good group of backers, the leader is powerless.

We can’t all be presidents. It is the few that guide and the many that I3re guided. And these last are groups and people.

Students to Act—At Last!

For years you have probably come away from lectures, discussions, feeling how terrifically inadequate we as students are to do anything about the events going on in the world at the present time. Always we go home with a feeling of the futility of such discussions. They arouse definite resentments in each of us, yet we feel powerless to do anything about them.

We have no club, no activities, clubs, we choose our several leaders to guide the remaining students. Would that we could raise our “followship” more to the level of our leadership.

Reviewers Points Out Invaluable Books Of Past, Present

By Mary Elizabeth Baldwin '39

This week I would like to do something a bit different with this column. I am going to address my remarks chiefly to those who have any interest in the literature of past and present who may know of the many books that have been written that are such a great help and pleasure. I hope to cover at least a few of the many that have been done, so let me call your attention to some of those which have proved invaluable.

You all know Palgrave’s “Gold en Treasury” but do you know that there is a similar collection of the important American poetry, from its beginning to the beginning of this century, “The Golden Treasury of American Songs and Lyrics,” edited by F. L. Knowles. For a complete collection of poetry in English, written in either language for the last hundred years, with a brief commentary on each poet and his works, Untermyer’s two volumes, “Modern British Poetry” and “Modern American Poetry,” are invaluable, particularly in the latest edition, which includes many more poets and their works. Another fine book is Leslie Stephen’s “Hours in a Library,” which is a series of very readable scholarly group of essays on many of the important writings since Chaucer. Most of the authors are English, though a few Americans are included.

For the Shakespearean students, you have read “Shakespeare’s Imagery” by Caroline F. E. Spurgeon. The author has been associated with the University of Paris, the University of Michigan, and is Emeritus Professor of English at the University of London. In her book, she interprets Shakespeare in the light of his imagery. The book is an altogether fascinating and enlightening work, and is fine for both a refresher and a guide.

Then there are several books which we should all own in addition to the above works. At hand we must have good guides. There are general and specific guides. Start with one of them and then go on to get good grades:

1. Be prompt to classes.
2. Cut no classes.
3. Sit in the front row, this is extremely important.
4. Always go to class fully prepared. Study each lesson as if you were the only one in the class and were sure of being called on to recite the whole of it.
5. Keep a notebook. Write out every thing the teacher emphasizes but don’t take too many notes.
6. When you study an assignment take notes on it. Then clinch it by reviewing the notes. You can get more out of reading it once and taking notes than by reading it five times without taking notes.
7. Make your written assignments neat.
8. Before a quiz or examination make an outline of the ground to be covered and memorize the outlines.

Dear Editor:

1. Do you get sick of putting on a hat to go to New London? I certainly am. At home, we went and placed place without one, and then you come to a town with a tenth of the population you wear one. It seems as if they’re trying to make a mountain out of a mole-hill (the mountain being new London). Who cares whether you wear hats or not? If it’s that they want girls to look sedate, they’re defeating their purpose. It’s human nature to stick a hat you don’t care about on to a place you don’t care about. If that’s what they want the girls to look sedate, they’re defeating their purpose in that, too. People certainly don’t look sedate in those old grey hats stuck on the back of their heads. So I can see no purpose at all in wearing hats to town.

Hat Hater.

Dear Editor:

1. May I take this opportunity to tell you what I know about the situation so deplored in ’39’s letter of last week, the increasing size of the college.

In the first place, my sister ’39, where did you get your uniform? I was told that the administration and have reliable information to the effect that that such increase in anticipated. Rumors have a way of growing somewhat in the way of a snowball rolling downhill—that, I am told is mob psychology.

This last will lead to serious consequences and perhaps this situation will serve as an example of how we can get people to sit up and take notice. If it is reasonably positive what are the true facts at the root of the matter.

The whole point of this rambling notice is to set your minds at ease. There is no truth to the rumor which has shown signs of upsetting the student body.

Thanks for the chance to express my sentiments.

Athen ’39

Dearest Daughter:

You said in your last letter you were sure you would getPhi Beta Kappa. You won’t if that’s your attitude.

It is because you don’t study, or because you don’t know how to study? I went through college not knowing how, but in my graduate study I found out that this is the way to get good grades:

1. Be prompt to classes.
2. Cut no classes.
3. Sit in the front row, this is extremely important.
4. Always go to class fully prepared. Study each lesson as if you were the only one in the class and were sure of being called on to recite the whole of it.
5. Keep a notebook. Write out everything the teacher emphasizes but don’t take too many notes.
6. When you study an assignment take notes on it. Then clinch it by reviewing the notes. You can get more out of reading it once and taking notes than by reading it five times without taking notes.

Fly-by-Night Shops
Subject of Meeting
Industrial Girls' Group, American Student Union
Discuss Together.
Giving a discussion of the methods and purposes of "Runaway" or "Fly-by-Night Shops," one of the latest forms of labor unionism, the labor committee opened the joint meeting of the executive committee of the American Student Union, the New London Y. W. C. A. and the C. C. chapter of the American Student Union, Wednesday evening in Fanning. Her talk was followed by a short and prompt discussion by Dr. Hutson.

Many of the attendant college girls then asked questions of the New London girls about working conditions in New London, and experiences with "Runaway" shops. To be vital, effective, the leaders must be able to communicate with their personal contacts with this type of institution.

College girls as a series of discussions which will be held throughout the year will give the place of men in the labor movement between the college and the Y. W. C. A. The suggested subject for the next meeting is "Actual working conditions, especially in the textile industries.

It is hoped that this group will help each other to understand the labor problems. It is possible that we can give the other the practical viewpoint; the other, the theoretical standpoint.

There were approximately forty people who attended the meeting, and as one of the members from the Industrial Girls' group and the rest from the Y. W. C. A., it is evident that the Industrial Committee from the Y. W. C. A. also attended.

Editorial

They are actions that are not remote, and it is effectual. Here in America, where educational programs are much more advanced, we still make no place for action.

It is an eye to this inadequacy, a national student assembly is being called at Oxford, Ohio on the grounds of Miami University for the purpose of organizing students into a united group. This is the first time that such a group has been formed.

The purpose of the group, which will include students from all the colleges in all corners of the United States, is to somehow come to point of view as regards of the situation, both national and world importance. Upon this agreement, the step to direct action follows.

It is a new thing—one which can be seen. The leaders of tomorrow are probably in our colleges to-day, but are powerless to make their opinions felt—in effect when time comes to act.

Students must organize. And as part of the college youth of America, Connecticut is invited to send four delegates to the conference, to organize and to set up a national assembly of students.

What do you propose to do about it?

After a picnic lunch in the woods, the group continued north, and spent the afternoon looking for a better place to hike, which was a successful day for the group.

Mr. Marsh Discusses Merit System For Civil Service

Speaking on the subject of the Merit System in civil service, Mr. Harry Marsh, Personnel Director of Connecticut State College, outlined the structure and evolution of the Merit System. He began by pointing out the advantages of the Merit System over the Civil Service System. He explained that the Merit System was designed to improve the efficiency of the government and to ensure that the best qualified person is appointed to each job.

Mr. Marsh emphasized the fact that the government protects people's rights and that the merit system is an important tool for ensuring fairness and efficiency. He also mentioned that the merit system is a popular one among the public. Mr. Marsh concluded his talk by encouraging the audience to continue to think about the importance of the merit system in civil service.

Four Students Sent To New England Conference

Held At Simmons College: Connecticut Sends Four To New England Conference

In answer to the call to a Boston Area Planning Conference of the New England Student Union Committee held at Simmons College last week, representatives from the University of Connecticut, the University of Vermont, the University of Maine and the University of Maine were invited to participate in the planning committee for the purpose of acting as a clearing-house for the various peace organizations functioning on the college campuses. The agenda was discussed, and the presentation of an effective and united peace program was considered.

In tentatively outlining a general plan of procedure for the year, emphasis was placed on the necessity for widening the scope of interest and the need for intercollegiate panels, peace depatures, and questionnaires; surveys, to the end that enthusiastic members of all peace groups might find some constructive outlet for their latent interests.

In the election which concluded the annual officers meeting, among the members was chosen the six elected to the Executive Council of the New England Student Union Committee. (N. E. U. S. C.)

Student-Faculty Forum Holds First Meeting

Student-Faculty Forum met Monday evening for the first time this year. The topic under discussion was the "oughts and ought nots" of the college student. It should be continued.

The chairman of the group, Faculty members of the committee are Dr. Lea, Dr. Haf, and Dr. Clauver, and the group will meet every Monday at 8:30.

Student-Faculty Forum was organized in order to gather up undercurrents of criticism and approval on campus in such a way as to enrich college life. The group does not make laws, but it can suggest improvements in both academic and extra-curricular matters.

Twice A Day We Risk Our Lives

"If there, Books, going for me. Be an angel and give mine for me, I can promise you it won't weigh you down."

I knew it, every time I venture a step towards the gym at this hour of the day, the thoughts of the box come to mind. Oh well, as well as might be.

"Well, what's the mailbox number?"

"I'll check for you. Here it is."

I always thought, let's see, it's about ten minutes. Well let's see, it's about ten from the bottom on the right hand side, I think it's up in the two hundred.

That certainly is definite! Guess it must be love.

Well, I'll make another dash for that popular place known as the Post Office. I discover, upon arriving, that the post office has the box untied. I wonder what's the matter with them. I'm a little bit worried."

But, boy, this isn't worth the trouble. I'm a little bit worried."

Exclamations of horror and joy echo from all sides. Some one is crying, "Look, Dad, it's the box."

I haven't heard from him in two days. Why?

T. E. Genuis, I can be so cruel, when he knows she's just working her poor head off, and all for me. But I'm going to tell her, when she's all worried, she has three other letters."

Guess they're only from the men.

Somebody is happy, I hear shrieks of delight."

Fox and Jane heard the box."

"That's the Light of Her Life came through with a bang.

I'm getting nowhere fast! . . . . . . . . . . . . .

At least, I've got a little nearer the box. Looks good! Can all those little white envelopes be for me?"

It's just terrible to share a box with such a popular girl. New to open the dark thing. Several jamps in the elbow aren't helping matters."

A," where are they? There you are, maybe in the course of the next ten years, you'll be the director of this fine little organization."

Yes, pretty soon, I suppose."

My dear!"

I start over again . . .

We have to write to one to the next through this bunch to find mine."

I wonder how many letters a week to anybody I know, just for the joy of receiving mail."

Surprise! Four letters come out of this fire trap, before I

First Yearly Faculty Club Meeting Held

The first meeting of the Faculty and administration took place Friday evening, October 22, 1937, at 7 o'clock.

Mrs. C. G. Woodhouse spoke on "Women in Music." Frances Herrin sang three songs, "Nocturne" by Gounod; "D'Hardelot's "Because," and "Birthdays," Huntington-Woodman, and was accompanied by Miss Alice Hope Richardson.

In conclusion Miss Gertrude Noves played three piano solos: "Theme with Variations" by Schumann; "Impromptu" by Reimbohl, and "Rigandor" by MacDowell.

Refreshments were served by Miss Chanev, who was assisted by Miss Oakes.

Free Speech (Continued from Page 2, Column 4) outline. This you will find not as hard as it at first sounds. Pay especial attention to lists.

10. Laugh at the teacher's jokes. 11. Study your teacher. Give him what he wants rather than what you think he ought to have.

12. Act in general as if you were interested in the subject.

As a matter of fact you will get along much better if you develop all interest in work for the sake of the subject itself apart from the desire to make grades.

Only about half of those who enter college graduate. The failures are due in large measure to not knowing how to study. Many girls as well qualified as you have been thrown out of college for poor scholarship. Many others have gone through a period of probation before they learned to get results from their work.

What are you going to do about it?

life needs prevalent on campus.
A. Individuals with joy and enthusiasm meet in expectation of building and growing together in a vital group, but despite these fine potentialities inertia sets in and the group becomes characterized by:
1. Mob psychology;
2. "Muck about nothing";
3. Irresponsibility.
B. From this group appear leaders who point out the advantages and opportunities to which the members of the group have become oblivious. The group at length comes to see and overcome its inadequacies and in harmony and with conviction go forward together, a cooperative, unified whole.
