Scholars Exchange Renaissance Notes

The tenth annual New England Renaissance Conference was held at Dartmouth on October 30. The conference, instituted by the American Council of Learned Societies, was attended by Miss Ruthven, Mr. Croiz, Miss Mon- seo, and Miss Tatum. The program, arranged by the host institution, included three or four scholarly papers and some form of related entertainment, this year a study of Baroque German architecture with colored slides of little-known Bavarian churches.

Of the three papers presented, the first concerned death imagery in medieval Spanish poetry and the second the development of polyphony through the 13th and 14th centuries. The third paper, presented by Paul Christeller was a report on research done on surviving manuscripts in Czech, Polish, East German and Russian libraries, of the condition of the libraries, and the difficulties of scholars working in them. Mr. Christeller has been associated with Mr. Christopher in the project.

Adding flavor to the discussion of old manuscripts, copies of the Renaissance chanson "Doe me right and don't make it written" in secretaries' hand and printed in music was given.

Connecticut has twice been host to the Conference in previous years.

Origin of U. S. Past

Disscuss in Talk
By Henry Conmager
The Search for a Usable Past was the subject of the Henry Lawrence Memorial Leckure last Tuesday evening in Pul-ter Auditorium by Dr. Henry Steele Commager, Professor of History and American Studies at Lambert College.

Dr. Commager asked the question of "how does a country, the United States, without a past, provide itself with one or get along without one?" He said that the Americans of the seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries did not want a past, as they were so sure of a future; however, confidence in a future is a thin string on which to build nationalism. He stated that when Americans stopped to think of it, we did have a past—the past of the whole western civilization. American citizens quickly provided themselves with antiquity: the
