Laughter Is A Fine Thing But—

Laughter is a fine thing, in the right places and at the right times, BUT . . . Quite often we’ve had outbreaks of giggling, tittering, and guffawing in the wrong places at the wrong times. Last week, at the Humphrey-Welchnick snickerling, and an hysterical giggle were emitted, for no particular reason, at a serious point in the program, when the enthralled audience was held in breathless silence. The pointless laughter was not only discourteous, but disconcerting. And if the performers had heard it, it might have destroyed their mood as much as it did that of the audience. A gentleman in the audience was heard to remark disgustedly, “Just as I’d like a bunch of dumb school girls!”

Another incident of a similar nature occurred at Analogum meeting during the series of serious hotel establishments for the Commencement Day campaign, so the great embarrassment of most of the students, who were enjoying the tableaux.

Of course there are times when seeing a friend on the street, or having a bit of fun, you want to have a good laugh. Just the thought of letting her know you recognize her sometimes causes this desire to titter, and we admit it’s hard to control at times. But it undoubtedly flustered the friend as she went out of the room, turned around, and often spoiled the whole performance for many people.

And who likes to be accused of being nothing but a bunch of “silly, giggling high school girls?”

A Stitch In Time

What can we do in the way of defense efforts? This is the question so often put forth in conversation and class discussion. The question is almost always left unanswered by anything that we should call a practical and down-to-earth solution. This is for no criticism as it is obviously difficult to answer. However, we do feel that right before us there is one practical answer; meet and surmise the Red Cross knitting question.

This “bit for defense” is so easy to perform that absolutely no complaint should be heard. A short walk to the chapel boiler room supplies ourselves with free yarn and instructions and we have concrete materials with which to work and help.

The ever-present complaint that one can’t find time to knit is a weak one. The time spent discussing matters in the various dorms could be utilized for Red Cross knitting. There is no doubt that every one of us spends time doing nothing but talking. We do not need a period set aside per se for review or merely doubling the use of this relaxation time, we could obviously accomplish as much. In other words, use such time, if you have it.

In looking around we find that the ones who do the most work are the ones from class preparation, the ones who really do the most work, are those who are doing the knitting. It is our opinion that the amount of knitting has lagged of late and we wish you to be aware of the fact that much has been said and written about “knitting for the Red Cross,” we’d like to remind you that the uniforms are due before Christmas vacation. For those of you who haven’t as yet started to meet the quota, we’re the time to start.

Critical Labor Situation

Last week was one of the most critical in regards to Labor. It justified what this implies has not been determined, but it is undoubtedly an emergency situation and we should prevent any transgression of the personnel of the university by any but also some powerful groups.

Even though the idea of a “red act” is not considered as an act of aggression, it is certainly in violation of the rules and regulations of the university, and possibly an act of insurrection against the government.

It is, therefore, important that we all do everything in our power to prevent any such action from taking place. The university administration has already taken steps to prevent any such activities, and we should all do our part in this regard.

BOOK REVIEW

By Marilyn Sworren '43

Threshold magazine, which made its initial appearance in October is the first non-partisan, non-religious intercollegiate journalism devoted to the publication of the best student output in the way of articles, fiction, verse, and reviews. Eleanor Roosevelt’s article entitled “If I were a Freshman,” and Max Lerner’s column, “The New Books,” are examples of Threshold’s attempt to create a greater understanding between the young and older generation through literary activity.

Threshold is endeavoring to create that unnatural cleavage between the politician and the student by making each campus to be a mirror that, therefore, covers a wide field of student interests ranging from China’s Triangular War, “Bennington,” and “The University as a Big Business,” to Civil Service operations, the Communist element in the Youth Movement, and a jazz review. Snappy cartoons, and short articles make for lighter reading.

International Student Service is a vital concern with the democratic ideals against totalitarianism, and espouse no further more specific, political or economic doctrines.”

The first Threshold is a candid, informative, concise, artistic, comprehensive, and witty publication. It is too early to pass final judgment on the magazine—five more issues are yet to appear within this college year. As an initial attempt, however, I think Threshold is a further step in 1944 publication. Although the first issue has not, perhaps, introduced a young Shakespeare or Milton, it embodies the spirit of Threshold has great possibilities of being the medium through which the talents and aspirations of youth can find expression.

Wesleyan Poll

How do we undergraduates feel about present world affairs? do we want real war or not? To find the answer to these questions the Wesleyan Poll decided to conduct a poll on October 20 covering as many students as possible.

The idea for the survey was conceived by John Ringe, 44, sophomore of the Wesleyan University. He wrote to the editors of the college papers at Connecticut, Williams, Trinity, New Jersey College for Women, Rhode Island State, and Springfield College asking them to submit questions pertinent to present day affairs. The problem was to sort out the questions and choose the most important ones for the poll. To accomplish this, he enlisted the help of Wendell Willis, Arthur Lucas '44, and the head of the polling committee.

Junior Phi Betes Disprove Popular Notion That Life Is All Hard Work And No Play

By Shirley Simkin

The most impressive and awe-inspiring character—and hardly human.

But quite the opposite. The popular notion has little in common with its flesh and blood counterpart. Witness for example three newly elected "key scholars," Frances North, Frances Nora, and Shirley Austin. They are really quite normal, lively human beings. And as if for nothing, like Phi Betes, Palmina and Frances say that they have never felt more dumb in all their lives and they are terrified of how they may "look like everyone's conception of a Phi Beta." Shirley's official reaction is, "I really feel pretti-silly!" But then she adds, "It's a great honors, but awfully hard to live up to."

Now let's take a more intimate glimpse into the private life of a Phi Beta. Palmina and Frances must have been a "dauntless and able" "we" for seldom do we see another without the other. The axiom that "the followers of friends are common" applies to everything but the boy-friend. Both are commuters and every morning Frances drives from Watertown over to New London to call for Palmina, and then chugs up the hill in faithful old Mathilda, a "fifty Ford. Both girls have double majors in Latin and Greek, and Palmina is minoring in Italian. Palmina intends to do graduate work next year, but Frances has not yet made any definite plans.

The study habits of these Phi Betes run quite contrary to popular opinion. Pallmina stays up later than 10 p.m., and Frances is always in bed by 9 p.m. (she has to get up at 5:30 in order to get to school in time for eight o'clocks).

Ye Olde Steady Dates Doing Steady Time As Selectees In Uncle Sam's Vast Army

By Bernice Kimmier '43

Miss leaves, ruffles, muffins, trampers, "kis," guard house, "it's all the rage at this point, you know." Well, we've got both. On the one hand, you'll find yourself vectoring second dates. On the other hand, you'll find yourself peripheralizing the various clubs. Each member of the council reported on the state of the various clubs last Wednesday's meeting with the other officers and the faculty advisors of each club. The reports were very encouraging and many of the activities have already been decided on this year's work.

A definite effort is being made this year to have club meetings handled, planned, and participated in by the council members. The regular bulletin of all events and meetings will be the next job of the Inter-club Council, and if the council members really try to work on joint projects within the school and within the school, more organizations will be formed.

The next meeting of the council will be held October 29 to elect the new Coop works.

Coop works may order records from the following outlets: where catalogues and order blanks have been placed.

President Blunt

The importance of being master of the day is often forgotten. President Blunt's Katherine Blunt's topic at her chapel talk, Tuesday, November 4, To be a master of the day is to be master of both.

That is, but it is possible to struggle along through life with little imagination. Imagina tion, however, can be cultivated. In science and history facts should be challenged. What of it? What is that? The problem the library was solved by facts plus imagination to plan the principles on which the research and teaching, and study methods would be affected. Major fields, likes and dislikes, the public affair as the facts of their want and the imagination to see what they are all about.

Council Plans To Revitalize Clubs

At the meeting of Inter-club Council, held on Tuesday evening last Wednesday, the council members with their genuine effort to do something definite about the existing clubs for the better. The purpose of the conference was to plan the principles on which the library was solved by facts plus imagination to plan the principles of teaching and study methods would be affected. Major fields, like and dislikes, the public affair was the facts of their want and the imagination to see what they are all about.

Mastery Of Vision And Fact Urged By President Blunt

President Blunt, speaking at the conference of the Association of Women's Colleges at the regional conference of the Association of American Colleges to be held at Wesleyan November 29 to 30. Dr. Marjorie Dilley, assistant professor of government, and Janet Sessions 43 will also represent the college.

The program at the conference, devoted to "The Role of the Liberal Arts College in the Defense Program," will consist of addresses by faculty, student speeches at luncheon, and panel discussions in the afternoon. President Blunt, President James McConaughy of Wesleyan University, and Professor Daniel March of Boston University.

Dr. E. S. Brightman Speaks Of Freedom At Vesper Service

"Know the truth and the truth shall make you free." Upon this quotation from the Gospel of Saint John, Edgar S. Brightman, professor of literature at Wesleyan University, based his vesper address, "Freedom," to the New London College students, Saturday, November 2 at 7:30 p.m. in Harkness Chapel. Freedom is built on a re- statement of the one great principle of freedom is, truth wholeheartedly or don't lie at all. Search for the whole truth or nothing. Unity and integration of our life is desired.

Professor Brightman continued by dividing freedom into two main types, the presence of speech and principles, and the principle of objectives for which it is worth striving.

"The very search for truth may prove very deadly for the individual. The unselfish free man is always to have a name which is not free and are not free," quoted Professor Brightman emphasized. Too often college students prove this point. They take up with a one-sided idea that is one specific kind of truth that they ignore everything else. They are not free within the scope of making two classes of seekers for truth. However, these classes are apt to be too narrow in their studies or seek the whole truth. The narrow naturalist who is free to make the world better. The narrow idealist is not free to be practical. They have their freedom. Professor Brightman revealed that real freedom comes only to truth seekers. "We must sincerely search for truth. Devotion to God is devotion to true freedom. To use a word, the real truth is everything. In all and the all the values," concluded Professor Brightman.

CANDIDS

By Patricia King '42 and Barbara Brengle '42

It is often very difficult to describe the people we know best, simply because so familiar are their faces, their manners, and their own particular idiosyncrasies, that our impressions become intangible and beyond expression. The problem becomes even more difficult, then, when the person is one when everybody knows best.

Of course Dean Burdick needs no introduction. From the very first day the freshman comes to Connecticut college, and throughout her four years within its gates, she is both proud and grateful in the knowledge that among the people whom she knows best is the Dean. Although there are few people whom we never seem able to know well enough, we may hope to find in the stories of their lives, interests, and aspirations an abundance of the knowledge we seek. Careful, then, but candidly, we will start from the beginning.

Miss Burdick was born and grew up on a farm in northeastern Pennsylvania. She refers to the little hamlet of Elkdale not as a town, but rather as a "condition," for it is so small that when her stepfather would reply to the query of a tourist, "Where is Elkdale?", he would merely point down the road a piece and say, "Just across the bridge." And the tourist would be utterly baffled when he reached the spot to find only brook, open fields.

Miss Burdick went to high school for two years near her home and then for two more years at the Wyoming school in Kingston Pennsylvania. After completing the next four years at Pennsylvania State College, she went on to study at the Boston School of Physical Education. Beginning at Pennsylvania State College as a philosophy major, she later switched to the school of education in the field of English. With ideas of teaching she discovered at the end of her four years in college that she was especially interested in medicine, not English. She had been minor- ing in zoology and had begun to consider the field of physiotherapy. Later she was attracted by the related field of physical education, and, following that interest, went on to study in Boston. In the fall of 1926, Miss Burdick arrived at Connecticut College, instructor in physical education and anatomy.

Then, in 1929, she took over the work of Dean of Students and in that capacity has served ever since, continuing also her classes in anatomy and hygiene.

casual, and you know how important that feeling is for a good weekend!

Because this was an extra special date, I was quite excited, buying a fireplace grate right here in New London. First I bought one of those darling floral covered biscuit tights (like the one Jean Pilling modeled in last week's issue of Vogue). It has a real full skirt elbow length sleeves, and the trickiest convert-ible short neck line you ever did see. I can wear it with a dicky, or presto change, without the dicky I have a sophisticated square neck line glamourized by the addition of those dowager-like long pearls. With my ultra-smart new "nut brown" shoes, and matching hat and bag, plus my new light trow Lana coat (trimmed with red leaves) I was the picture of LADIES' FASHION when I stopped off that train. (If I do say so myself!)

Then for the tea dance Saturday afternoon after the game I bloused out in my new red velvet, trimmed with lace around the neck and sleeves, with two perky flowers appliqued just above the lace. I have two more, and just below the lace border of the neck. I had the best time that afternoon and all because of that dress. I just know!

On Sunday morning I fooled them all, and arrived for brunch in another new outfit! This time I had on the latest two piece dress in that luminous hunter green shade. The skirt has literally hundreds of pleats, and the top is real long and smooth. It's one of those dresses you can wear for all occasions and will be dressed right. That's all for now, but I'll be back.

P.S. I almost forgot to tell you about the new Lana suit my roommate wore this week-end. She looked absolutely the best I've ever seen her, and that's saying something. It's a dark green twill, trimmed with rows of red leaves tumbling down the front of the jacket. Then she wore a Tyrolean hat, green with a red braid to match the suit. I saw a very smart outfit! That's all for now.

The program was the first of its kind at college. It was more than an exciting experience; it was educational and broadening. As a living art, the dance is able to communicate emotions and ideas in an expressive and effective way. This particular group of dancers portrayed most of its ideas in a refreshing and spirituous manner.

L. Lewis, who incidentally is a former philosophy teacher, played the piano with varied and interesting dynamics, setting the mood and rhythm for the dancers. More than one member of the audience has expressed a desire, however, to see the group work with a symphony orchestra, as they will probably do on their extended tour.

In one of those frequent gab sessions, the quality and virtues of furrs were being discussed and rubbd the wrong away. One of the girls was displaying an exquisite white fur evening wrap, much to the awe and admiration of the assembled crowd. Suddenly the owner of a sturdy, all-purpose backing court chirped, "Listen, if you ever showed that coat to a cat, it would jump!"

Two seniors in 1937 house were partaking of some California prunes, extra large, last Thursday, one of them became so engrossed that she swallowed a pit.
