Ordination of women priests at historic ceremony in Philadelphia

Going, going, gone...

by Pam Allioppis

Doesn’t the idea of celebrating New Year’s Eve on December 6th sound appealing? It is one of the numerous events being auctioned at tonight’s Faculty-Student Auction. Working in cooperation with the Community Fund, the Senior Class will be reviving an old Corn tradition as well as getting the community involved in a worthwhile project.

Fifty per cent of the proceeds will go to the Community Fund which will then distribute the money to various charities. The other half will support campus wide activities run by the Senior Class.

The two coordinators of the project, Trish Eifrod and Renee Baumblatt, remarked on the fact that “Faculty and student response has been extremely good.” They emphasized the importance of bidding in groups as many of the items are designed for six to twenty people. It will also be considered an infraction of the Honor Code if people offering services do not live up to their end of the bargain.

Some of the more interesting and unusual items up for auction include: a truckload of manure, a breakfast for twelve at the Amey, a tour of representative bars in New London, a spring canoe trip, and passes to all social events for spring semester.

Mr. Biscuiti, who is a professional auctioneer, will be doing the honors tonight at what appears to be quite an impressive operation. All checks are to be made payable to the Community Fund and all buyers have a week to pay for their items.

regulations

All items which are actually auctioned are subject to the following regulations:

1. Donors will be notified of the purchaser of his/her good or service. The two parties will then work out an agreement for the fulfillment of the contract.

2. Check or cash payment for goods and/or services can be made at the Auction or within a week to Renee Baumblatt, Box 91. Make all checks payable to Community Fund. If you cannot pay within the week contact Vicki Leeborn, Box 91, to arrange special contracts.

3. Failure to donate the promised service or good, as well as failure to pay the agreed amount, is subject to Judicial Board Action.

Please note if you have donated an object or service you do not have to attend the Auction. You will be notified by the end of the evening.

Remember groups and/or individuals can bid. Also please bring some kind of ID.

If you have questions relating to any aspect of the Auction, please contact either Renee or Vicki.

Latin honors: it’s final

by Frances Glannoupolus

Changes in the eligibility for Latin Honors at Connecticut College will become effective after May, 1975, starting with the Class of 1976. The scholarship standing for distinction in the Major field will be 3.50. The scholarship standing for cum laude will be 3.50, magna cum laude 3.67, and summa cum laude 3.80. These changes were voted upon by the faculty after long discussions and debates held last year by the faculty and many concerned students. The issue of steping back for modification was brought to interest by many professors who felt that Latin Honors were becoming meaningless due to the fact that an increasing number of students were acquiring them. When the issue was brought to debate the students expressed opposing views. They questioned the fairness of the changes and argued that they would cause problems for them when the time came to apply to Graduate School.

Despite extreme disagreement the changes were made and favored.

Hiatt to speak at Sunday service

The Reverend Suzanne Hiatt, one of 11 women ordained this past summer in Philadelphia to the Episcopal priesthood, will be the guest speaker at Harkness Chapel this coming Sunday morning at 11 a.m. worship service.

On July 21 four bishops of the Episcopal Church participated in a service of ordination for the first time in women to the Episcopal priesthood. The reactions to this event both within and outside the church suggest that it was truly an historic moment. In an emergency meeting in Chicago on August 14 and 15 the House of Bishops declared the ordinations invalid and asked that the issue be postponed until a definitive ruling could be made by the new General Convention of the Church in 1976. On Sunday evening, October 21, three of the women for the first time publicly celebrated the Eucharist in New York City, thus signalling their refusal to abide by the ruling of the House of Bishops.

Reverend Suzanne Hiatt, a native of Hartford, Connecticut, is a graduate of Radcliffe College, the Episcopal Theological School, Cambridge, and holds a Master of Social Work degree from Boston University.

She has been active in community organization and welfare activities of the Church in Minneapolis and Philadelphia, and was one of the founders of the Welfare Rights Organization of Philadelphia in 1968. From 1968-1970 she worked for the Episcopai Diocese of Pennsylvania with suburban churches in the Philadelphia area, interpreting urban problems and possible roles of the suburban communities in their solution. Currently she is a Consultant to the Episcopal Consortium for Theological Education in the Northeast, in connection with Women in Theological Education Project.

Faculty ok's student reps for tenure group

by Bill Looney

A resolution endorsing the inclusion of three students as voting members of a newly formed Academic Committee designed to investigate guidelines and procedures used in the awarding of tenure was approved by the faculty at its meeting last Wednesday.

A previous resolution, which would have granted only consultative privileges to student representatives on "a regular basis," was defeated by a vote of 55-25.

The faculty resolution was sponsored by Bonnie Le Ber, "Tenure is a matter of extreme importance to students as it is perhaps the sole determination of the right people who will teach, for how long and under what conditions."

The committee presently includes four faculty members elected by the faculty at large. Three more faculty members will be appointed by President Ames. In an interview, Ames said that the three had already been chosen, and that their names would be announced "very soon.

In a general overview of the tenure question, Ames referred to a certain lack of specificity. What we have now is not a very clear system, and the faculty information booklet is rather inappropriate for the criteria followed in awarding tenure. One of the functions of the committee, he said, is to try to "let this vagueness up."

More on Security

It has come to our attention that the example of less than instantaneous response by Security mentioned in last week's editorial did not contain all the relevant facts.

The calls to which Security did not respond were called in from a room phone, an outside line, and were directed to Chief O'Grady's office. The call to which they did respond with alacrity was sent from a dorm extension to the Guardhouse (ext. 379).

Our original point still remains valid, however. Security, and lack thereof remains and is a problem. Students cannot hold on to the guard when they are needed, it is as though there are no guards at all.

The Campus Directory DOES give the emergency numbers on page one, right inside the cover. But if a student schooled in research looks under "Security," they find the Chief's number. Why are the emergency numbers not cross-indexed? Why are they not included under "Security?" It would seem numbers that important to the College would be printed more than once. For it is under "Security" that the student who got no response

The communication system is one fault. We therefore recommend posting at all campus extension, and on all floors of dormitories prominent notices listing all emergency numbers and the hours they are manned. A guard on call is worth two in the guardhouse.

An apology

I wish to extend a sincere apology to the Classes of 1975 and 1977 for failure to include their ads in the last issue of COURIER. In a triumph of stupidity over good intentions, it slipped my mind just how important the ads were. Again, my apologies for the inconvenience and frustration I caused the organizers of the Student-Faculty Auction, and the Fall Jazz Festival.

To the Editors:

In your article "Dean Watson's Psa," Nov. 7, 1974, the writer failed to include the most important security extension 333 which is manned 24 hours a day and is an emergency number.

security

Dear Courier:

In reading the recent coverage of the crises evolving in the campus security system, I was somewhat amazed at the blindness of successive protagonists as to a possible solution that might very well be a decisive aid to the situation. Specifically, why is it that no one has even suggested the possibility of students on the security force?

The use of students in security positions has advantages and strong points that are amazingly obvious. First, I think of all those people expressing drudgery driven about the lack of community on this campus; enough lip service - here is a real service which can be provided by our own kind, a first step towards establishing a security system that is truly responsive to the community which it is designed to serve.

Secondly, it is painfully obvious beyond all the idealism of "community" that each day our lives and property are increasingly endangered by the presently flaccid system. Here I must more specifically direct the brunt of my attack, for I recognize that campus security is not one monolithic element, but rather an aggregation of varying components. The first component under question would have to be the Night-Pinkey forces. These men I have the least contention with, for they appear to be primarily the victims of circumstance. I have found for the most part that Night-Pinkeys are pretty cool guys; they are for the most part sympathetic and friendly, save perhaps for those moments of reckless abandonment when you decide to drive across the green or around the dorm. And while many of the complainers criticizing recently seem to pivot on unresponsiveness, I would have to think that much of this has to do with the size of the force; for the length of the campus and the number of functions that have to be performed, there just aren't enough people able to hold down all points as secure.

On the other hand, I hold much less sympathy for the Day-Pinkeys. To call them slow would be doing them a service; some of the heavy-bags write out a parking ticket in the time it takes to walk to Yellow Front and back again. They galavant around campus in an incredibly wasteful gas-gater, big enough to hold a session of the History of Film. Come on - if these guys are essentially playing Meter Maid, why can't they get a Volkswagen?

Much of this, I suspect, has to do with allegiances. The security force is obviously, not an extension of our own community, but rather another often cumbermadsome arm of the legion of paper-pushers and buck-passers that the forces of Planning Tower seem so parted to. Students are, after all, selfish and incompetent spoiled brats, whose prime purpose is to slob the campus and economically a system of debatable value. Gargantuan dishwashers and mobile leaf-suckers are, after all, much more important to the perpetuation of the system than students feeable or, heaven forbid, more courses.

Are students competent enough to be the same? I would have to say an emphatic YES! If there is a desire among students to assume positions on the security force, there would seem to be definite benefits to garner from the situation. Students are, I believe, relatively sympathetic towards their fellow students and more readily willing to be quick-moving in an emergency situation. We have no families to support and are numerous enough that it shouldn't impose that much of a temporal or economic strain.

And if it is of any importance to you, I have to say that I would urge that at least consider experimenting with a proven alternative.

Sincerely,
Jack Blossom

more security

To the Editor:

It was most unfortunate that the Courier by its editorial of November 14 about our campus security and its need to address its concerns in this unilateral manner rather than by trying to arrive at a solution and discussion first directly with Mr. O'Grady. We are still a community of inquirers and small minds to talk to each other. Such an article would have been justified only if all of our usual forms of communication and attempts to change a situation had failed. Morale of the security force was lowered by the implications of the editorial.

We all agree that a community of students living in close physical quarters is difficult to protect from theft, vandalism, and the intrusion by strangers who now move in and out of our building. Our security force of dedicated men attempts to protect the community by modern procedures of patrolling, communication devices, and clearing people and goods from our campus. The record of successful detection and prevention of trouble situations has been ex-

WORLDWIDE, sugar consumption has simply outpaced sugar production. The oil-rich Arab nations have helped inflate demand, bidding up prices on the international market to satisfy a newly developed sweet tooth. And poor crops forecasts around the world mean further increases in the future.

In America, sugar's outrageous price has consumers either boycotting or haggling for the product. Only dentists and nutritionists, it seems, are heralding the sugar pinch. The food experts have found that sugar is the only food without nutritional value. And the dentists, of course, hope that less sugar will mean fewer cavities.

GETTING TO KNOW YOU: President Ford travels to the Soviet Union this week with a head full of advice from State Secretary Henry Kissinger.

Kissinger gave Ford a favorable report on his secret 19-hour talks with Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev. The Soviet leader used cordial but cautious. Kissinger reported he clearly wants to continue the Russian-American detente. But Brezhnev made it clear that he wanted to get to know the new American President before substantive talks get underway. The first Ford-Brezhnev meeting may well set the stage for the two leaders to undoubtedly forge into some ticklish areas.

Ford, for example, is concerned about the Soviet buildup of mobile missiles. These missiles can be moved by train, truck or plane. They can even be fired on the move. It would be almost impossible, then, to set up an advance defense system. The dramatic test of the new Russian missile was conducted when Kissinger was in Moscow about a month ago. Now, Ford is prepared to warn the Soviets that they are risking a new round in the arms race unless the two superpowers agree on restraints. For once both countries start producing mobile missiles, even the most sophisticated satellite could not track the movement of how many mobile missiles the other side had, or where they were developed.

The Vladivostok summit, however, is unlikely to produce any major Soviet-American agreements. Rather, it will serve to calm the foundations of detente.

SHEIKHS AND STARVATION: The oil price squeeze has brought fabulous wealth to a few Arab sheikhs. It has also brought stagnation to millions of impoverished people.

High oil prices increase the cost of fertilizers and insecticides, which have a reduced food production. Yet an estimated 400 million, or twice the population of the United States, don't have enough to eat.

The United States is the world's greatest food producer. Unlike the oil producers, the United States has been generous with its surplus food. For 30 years, the United States almost alone has kept the impoverished from starving.

Half of the world's bulk food exports have come from the United States. Of this, a whopping billion dollar's worth of food is given away. An estimated $1 billion worth of food is being stored away.

In contrast, the reckless greed of the oil sheikhs is costing lives. They have been shown up at the world's pleasure spots scattering money like autumn leaves. Meanwhile, in places like Bangladesh and India, people are being turned away from the bread lines because they have no money for food. And in Africa, millions are starving because there isn't enough food to go around.

COMPACT CRUNCH: The four major auto manufacturers have spent $1 billion retrofitting factories to produce smaller cars. Yet transportation officials are having second thoughts about small cars.

It is true that small cars consume less fuel and, therefore, are more economic to operate. But private studies show that small cars get involved in more accidents and are more costly to repair. The average damage claim after a collision, according to the studies, is $506 for a compact car compared to only $433 for a full-size car.

A front fender, which cost $63 to repair in 1967, now costs $114. A rear fender, which cost $150 to repair in 1967, now costs $167. And a trunk lid, which cost $83 to repair in 1967, now costs $132.

Costs like these have started a move in Congress to regulate the auto repair business.

SLOGANS U.S.A.: In times past, Americans have been able to distill the cause of the hour into a phrase, a rallying cry, a stirring slogan to reaffirm our faith in America. A slogan is needed to capture the spirit of America past, present and future. It ought not to be the forced effort of an advertising executive, but rather should be the spontaneous outpouring of an average citizen.

Therefore, the Copernicus Society of America, in conjunction with the Bicentennial Commission, is sponsoring "Slogans, U.S.A." So far, the contest has been heavy and heartwarming. Slogans have poured in from around the nation. But more ideas are needed, so send your slogan suggestion to "Slogans, U.S.A., Box 787, Washington, D.C."

It's time to reaffirm the dream.
Library plan need re-thinking

by Bill Thompson

Construction has begun, but construction of what? How man in CON students are aware of the character of the interior and exterior spaces of the new library? And what about the unpublicly available plans of the building. I would have to conclude that the library lacks a sense of human scale. A library needs intimate spaces conducive to human use, whether for intense private study or for casual pressure reading. On the exterior, the definition of spaces should be recognized and space be appropriate to human proportions. The new library lacks these qualities, and in response to these deficiencies, I have built a model of a more effective use of the exterior spaces, as seen in the picture.

Barren Spaces

In the architects plans of the new library, the main entrance lobby is on the second floor and is arrived at by walking across a forty foot wide concrete ramp. This ramp extends over a courtyard that defines the ground level. I question what the architects intend to do with a forty foot ramp. What will it be like to traverse this barren space with little or nothing to look at but the huge square exterior of the new library? How tiny and insignificant the ordinary human will walk or sit along the walkways of this ramp. Equally out of scale is the unadorned courtyard below. The longest dimension of this terrace is over one hundred and sixty feet long. It doesn't take long to walk this distance, but to stand still in such a large empty space is to be swallowed up in a wind swept wasteland. Imagine walking across this unprotected terrace on a typically windy January day. This isn't New York City with its towering buildings and plains. We don't need a stone soccer field in front of the new library. Thus, in the model shown above, I have indicated one method of improving the cold and spartan spaces surrounding the library, without changing the present plans. I have tried to turn the blank exterior space of the library into an environment.

Sparkling Images

The library does not stand alone; it's meant to be placed in a human setting. In my plans, the ramp extends over a reflecting pool broken only by a large sculptured fountain. There is planting on the ramp with benches placed in between. Hopefully the student will want to sit and gaze at the fountain and water before entering the library. At night the pool will create a sparkling image as the lights in the library go off. On the main pool tumbles a four foot waterfall into a smaller, more intimate pool surrounded by planting and benches. Imagine yourself as a frustrated student working on a tough mathematical problem. How calming it would be to walk out from ground level and hear the rhythms of falling water and gaze upon the rippling surface of a small pool, or to walk around a larger pool more conducive to contemplation. The mathematical problem wasn't so tough after all. Was it? During the colder months of winter, the student would be able to relax by skating. Given the present plans, this is how I might try to improve upon them.

Yes, we are going to have a mammoth new library, but what a cold and unwarming sense experience it will create. How inviting? I think I'll study in my room instead.

Summer program in Israel

State University College at Oneonta, New York, in cooperation with Hebrew University, Haifa University, and Bar-Ilan University in Israel, is offering its ninth summer academic program in Israel for the summers of July and August, 1975. The overseas program will be for a seven week period and will award six semester hours of undergraduate or graduate credit to students completing the academic work satisfactorily.

"Modern Israel" is for students who desire an intensive study of Israel's economic, social, political, religious, educational, and scientific institutions; an opportunity for research on a particular aspect to the country; and a humanizing broadening contact with old-new Israel. Participation for both courses is limited to teachers, and undergraduate and graduate students who can meet the entrance requirements of the State University of New York, and who have a serious purpose for participating. There are no language requirements.

Dr. Yonah Alexander, Professor of International and Foreign Area Studies of the State University College at Oneonta, will be the Director of this program for the ninth consecutive summer. During the 1968-69 and 1969-70 academic years he was Resident Director for the full-year State University of New York programs in Israel at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem and the Tel Aviv University.

Persons desiring further information may write Professor Alexander at State University College, Oneonta, New York 13820 (Tel: 607-431-3369). As only a limited number of enrollments will be accepted, early application is recommended.

Minolta camera contest: summer in Europe

Want to hit Europe next summer, with a friend, and have $5,000 in cash to spend? This dream two months vacation can be all yours. No excuses to figure, either. Just take a picture which, in the opinion of judges, is worthy of publication in the Minolta College Gallery and is the best of all entries, and you'll be on your way.

The big camera company has come up with a big idea: The Minolta College Gallery, a special section to appear periodically in College Magazine and containing at least ten prize winning photos taken by students attending a college or university in the United States.

The top prize will be a two months vacation in Europe next summer for the winner and a friend. The company will provide all air transportation in addition give the big winner $5,000 in cash to pay for all lodgings, food, ground transportation and other expenses. Additionally, the two travelers will each receive Minolta SR-T 102, 35 mm reflex cameras.

Recommendations on J.B. appeals

To the Editor of the COURIER:

I believe the following portion of a letter from Mr. Wiles to the Administration Committee would be of interest to the student body, and I would appreciate your printing it in the COURIER.

Jewel Plummer Cobb
Chairman Administration Committee

"To the Administration Committee:

With respect to the subject of Dishonesty in Academic Work and the right of a faculty member to appeal to a Judiciary Board decision of NOT GUILTY, I should like to comment on the Administration Committee's recommendation of October 31 that the faculty member be allowed to appeal to the faculty. The faculty member's role is analogous to that of a complainant seeking redress from injury done to him. The proper role is not to appeal against a Judiciary member of the student, but to stand in the student's place, and to appeal against a Judiciary member's role is not to appeal against a Judiciary member's role is analogous not to the role of a complainant seeking redress from injury done to him.

"It is my understanding that in habeas corpus an appeal is given the right to appeal, but a prosecutor is not. The accused is also given that right. I think it possible that the faculty member might, however, be given the right to appeal on one clearly defined ground, namely that new evidence or information is discovered that could not be introduced in time to the Judiciary Board. If such a right of appeal is to be allowed, then the strictly limited grounds for appeal should be clearly spelled out in the appropriate section of the Faculty Rules and bylaws.

ConnPIRG: social action

by Bruce E. Collin

Emphasizing that social action should be the goal of research projects, Steven Wisensale, Public Interest Research Group, addressed the Connecticut College branch of ConnPIRG. Mr. Wisensale outlined numerous projects being conducted at various campuses throughout the state. Included in this list are such topics as drafting a bill concerning returnable beverage bottles, evaluating the state's nursing homes, and composing an informative directory of area physicians.

Ted Hathaway, campus organizer of the research group, echoed Mr. Wisensale's call for action by announcing that Lisa Fedder and Carol Morris would begin canvassing nearby doctors in order to obtain the necessary information for the proposed directory. The purpose of such a booklet would be to provide Connecticut College students with a detailed listing and price evaluation of each medical specialist.

Hathaway also announced that "we will soon try to set up a Consumer Complaint Center and a Small Claims Court Advisory Service." Such a service, headed by William Bingham, would aid those individuals who had been "ripped off" by local merchants.

"It's important to get things off the ground if we hope to be around next semester," Hathaway bluntly noted.

He commented that the relevance of the organization would be further enhanced if courses such as Social Problems have projects that are involved with ConnPIRG. "Such an idea is presently being discussed and may be utilized in some spring semester courses.

All students interested in any of the above mentioned ConnPIRG projects are urged to contact Ted Hathaway as soon as possible (Box 834).

Murphy's Law:
If something can go wrong, it will

by Jon Cohen

Plutonium 239, the most poisonous element ever handled in quantity by man, is a by-product that results from the use of uranium. Dr. Donald Gleenman, an authority on the plutonium hazard, estimates that there will be one lung cancer in every 10,000 particles of plutonium inhaled. Dispersed as fine particles (one micron in diameter), one pound of plutonium 239 represents the potential for some nine billion human lung cancers. It takes 24,000 years for just half of this plutonium to decay which means any plutonium dispersed into the biosphere presents a major cancerous hazard for human generations to come. Now, consider this—one large power plant produces about 400 pounds of plutonium 239 every year! It is estimated that 98.99 percent containment of plutonium 239 is not good enough. Who can guarantee containment of the plutonium when it depends on the absolute perfection in the people who design, manufacture, construct and operate the power plants and who transport, process and store this poison? When a human being is involved there is no such thing as perfection. According to Mr. Murphy's Law, we are taking very serious chances.

The time has come for a controversy on the use of nuclear power as a source of energy in this country. If you would like more information on the power plant situation and what's being done about it please contact Dave Whaler at Connecticut Citizen Action Group (203-527-7151).

Conclusion
Conn PIRG drug store comparison

The following surveys were conducted to compare various basic products most frequently used by college students. The surveys of CVS and Bellin's Pharmacy were conducted on November 1, while the surveys of Whelan Discount and Big L Discount were conducted on November 8. Price discrepancies are possible due to time differences. Numbers inscribed in boxes indicate a difference in price. Numbers in parentheses indicate quantity. The following examination of the cost of a nuclear power plant will provide a clearer explanation of the difficulties resulting from the use of nuclear energy. The plants use uranium as their source of power.

"Fellini’s "Juliet" disappoints"

By SETH GREENLAND

Federico Fellini’s "Juliet of the Spirits," made in 1969, is an examination of the director’s favorite themes, sensuality versus spirituality. The film concerns an appendage of American housewife, Juliet (who, incidentally, is played by Fellini’s wife, Adriana Sassone), who has a perfect and pure woman who is surrounded by a decadent world. She’s not a Lady Gaga, she’s an incariable hedonist and her husband is having an affair with a young model; but the pure wife, Ninetto remains a paragon of virtue and a hopeless romantic.

Fellini’s use of color in "Juliet" is truly virtuous and it is where the director best manifests his considerable talent in this particular film. The color composition varies from sequence to sequence to sequence to sequence. Ninetto alternates presents his contrasting themes. In the sequences intended to promote sensuality and purity in Fellini’s use of bright whites, reds, oranges and yellows in an effort to visually assault the viewer. In the scenes where he wants to evoke spirituality he uses soft whites and pastels, sometimes subdued, almost impressionistic, effect. "Juliet" is a film most effective on the visual level for it is a veritable smorgasboard for the eye.

However, one is led to think that Fellini was carried away by the colors and equally fine photographic composition because the film seems weak. Fellini seems to be rhetorically asking ‘can purity exist in an impure world?’ and his film has provided no answer. The final sequence seems purposefully more simplistic and proceeds to a finish from which a glowing light emanated (since Dante’s Divine Comedy light has been symbolic of Italian literature. Whether or not Fellini was paying tribute to his countryman in this sequence on purpose is probably beside the point. Inside the door, she rescues her daughter, who was dressed in white and was apparently symbolic of Juliet and her own purity, from a flaming pyre. Thus, Juliet’s final symbol of purity, was released from her martyr’s existence. As the film ended, in a scene that seems almost unnecessary, Juliet is walking away from her house in a long white dress as ethereal music plays, "Can virtue exist in this decadent world? Can release only be obtained by death?" Fellini leaves the answer to the viewer, he certainly isn’t telling. Because of this ‘technical bloomess “Juliet of the Spirits,” though technically superb, becomes a somewhat disappointing film.

Late for the Sky

by Todd Cipolla

Jackson Browne writes feelings, or comes closer to it than anyone else. His latest album, Late for the Sky, is a compelling effort and another formidable step in his evolution and is a tour de force. But there is something different about Browne’s latest. His best work thus far, his perceptions are numerous and well thought out and he places them together into songs of convincing observations about growing up, coming of age, and its trappings; illusion, pitfalls, hard times, sexual, or otherwise.

Side one opens with the title song, "Late for the Sky," and we find an ending and also a beginning. Young love, or rather the illusion of love that’s filled with our own emotional maturity has exposed it for what it is. But with growth and maturity comes pain, the pain of a continued, but unfulfilled experience. He sees through the shamb of romanticized love. There is no longer the self-assurance of youth.

"Words come easy," he sings, but he knows they don’t mean that much “compared to the things that are said in a lover’s touch." A mature insight, in fact, "Late for the Sky" captures a lot of Browne’s past. He’s trying to say — or not to say. It is still a romantic ideal, which he is trying to hold onto and to maintain. Words have been his deception but at the same time, it is his words that show the strongest case for what he’s saying, which is, bluntly, no longer is he to "get it while he can," but searches for a lasting relationship.

Love and the double entendre. The end of side is filled with illusion and what a love might be;

Maid Marion and Jack-in-the-Green

by Emily Odya

Someday Peter Leibert dreams of leading a proceional from New London to Norwich, with his team of Morris dancers. It is amusing to imagine them danc- ing the ten-odd miles in whites,约翰for black knee britches, bells on calves, faces blackened in an old tradition, hats adorned with flowers, accompanied by bagpipes and the pipe and labor, the fiddle, or the melodian. Some of the stock characters that might be part of the proceional would be the Hobbyhorse, the magical Fruit, Maid Marion, and Jack-in-the-Green.

Morris dancing is traditionally done by men as a spring fertility rite, although, as I noted above, it is possible that the custom was carried on in America by women. In England today, the dances on Morris dancing are often of the private origins of the family groups. The name is a very old one, and the dances lost their roots in the spring. The Morris Ring, which exists in England today, is a confederation of men’s teams from various regions. The analogous group in America, which is rather dispersed, is the Pinewoods Morris Men. Cities like Boston and New York have Morris dancing events—otherwise, it is rare to find a teacher in this area, or anywhere else. In fact, Conn. is in danger of losing Peter Leibert to the Westerly, R.I., community on Thursday night.

Although a truly magical rite for the villagers in old England, Morris dancing became almost a fad among the upperclass and upper-class dwellers. Shakespeare’s famous actor, Will Kemp, once danced a marathon from London to Norwich, (took him a month, with stopes, and immoratized the custom—the appraisement of Mr. Leibert’s Morris men foreign mysterious.

The origin of the name “Morris” is mysterious, but it could possibly have been derived from “Moorish” dancing, or from “Mary’s” court. In any case, it must be differentiated from English country dancing (where Leibert teaches)

Keith’s column

Retrospectives

by Keith Ritter

In this column I do a lot of talking about records and the rock world. I’d really like to hear other opinions for a change. That’s why I’ve cleverly included the coupon which is below. Please fill it out and return it to box 1137 or the City Eye office sometime in the next week or so before vacation. I’ll publish a complete report upon my return from Turkey.

If you look at the top of this endeavor, you’ll notice it implies a looking back. That is, what M.C.A. records has done with one of their top groups, the Who. They have re-released the groups four albums as two-two record sets. The first set is My Generation-Magic Bus and the second is A Quick One-Sell Out. These records can be bought individually for about two dollars but these sets look to be a good investment. One can easily trace the roots of Tommy in these albums (listen to Rael). The albums contain mini- operas, typical Who-hard-rock beats, and some of the best music to come out of the 60’s.

The concert situation seems to be improving. The New Haven Columbia is going to give rock music another try. The Canceled Yes concert has been re-set for December 12. Tickets go on sale Wednesday, so if you’re looking for a fine way to celebrate the end of classes, this is it. The George Harrison tour is coming also. Tickets are available for Providence, Boston and New Haven. I’m rather skeptical about his tour. Harrison never did follow up his All Things Must Pass album with anything substantial. But who knows?

Meanwhile is revealed in the midst of their bizarre appearance, the peculiar outfits were what one noticed first, and the dancers kept reassuming in more and more incongruous outfits. Each dancer slowly moved across stage doing a repetition of one theme or phrase of movement. Various types of interaction were experimented with. Mimes was exploited a great deal, not for the sake of recognition, but to enhance the precision with which the dancers moved.

Their presence on campus, as individuals and as a group, will undoubtedly contribute much to the creative spirit of the dance department.

A German gent by the name of Edgar Froese has put out an album which introduces a new technique in stereo sound. It is called "Aqua" and the technique called the artificial, like system. It was developed by a man named Gunther Brunscben and it is really quite amazing. The "music" on the album shows itself off well, but as an album it is quite boring. Still, the innovation which it introduces makes this album noteworthy.

Swanson also cautioned that the alternative motion be viewed as opposition to student involvement. Those fifteen

Fast and Religion

Since Mr. Lewis cannot separate his personal faith from his political activities, he receives Holy Communion everyday.

Mr. Lewis, baptized last April into the Catholic Church as a result of "affiliations with priests and the Mass," has not had a communion on my personal life." He has since learned that the more he contributes to those causes the closer he becomes to the essence of religion. He said, "I am happy to be poor, it has helped to shape
my character."

Speaking to the fast taking place on the campus today, Mr.
Lewis stressed the importance of totally abstaining from lunch and dinner. He realizes that "anyone who says he's not going to share in hunger helps to make more of an impact, while fasting, substantially reduces caloric needs
and road literature on the subject."

When asked what one more thing he would like to do for others.
Mr. Lewis explained that he is being sponsored for each one of the fasts that the college proceeds then go to Oxfam, a national relief organization.

Joseph Colson has acknowledged the psychological difference between voluntarily abstaining from eating and being forced to eat.
In essence, its goal is to create more concern, less waste, and a stop to the raping of the land.

Arafat scored

Dear Sirs:

Yasir Arafat, the newly legitimized leader of the Palestinian people, just finished his 24-hour dramatic visit to the United Nations. Though he said nothing in his coming was significant and successfully self-supporting, unfortunately, it added no hope to the seemingly fruitless situation in the Mid-East.

Two main points should be remembered when considering his visit and his goals.

One: Arafat is legitimately the head of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, but this does not make him the rightful leader of all Palestinians. Nor does his coming from outside Arab nations and peoples can legitimize this role, nor can any voice from the U.N. General Assembly. It can only come from the Palestinian people themselves. To ignore their right to choose their own leadership is to deny them the right of self-determination.

Two: Arafat's proposal of a secular Palestinian state sounds very fair; equality for all — what could be finer? But the catch is that this state will be established not along-side of, but in place of, Israel. Israel must first be dismembered, dissolved, destroyed and annihilated. Then Palestinian-PLO will set up their state. And if they adhere to their published criteria for which Israelis can claim membership in the new Palestinian state, it is estimated that more than two-thirds of Israel's Jewish population will be forced to leave. Where is their equity now?

The issue of Palestinian rights will not be solved Arafat's way, nor will it be solved by Israel not speaking to the Palestinians. But it is to Israel to speak to the Palestinian terrorists who have committed unspeakable acts of terrorism, but who does not seem fair either, especially since the PLO has not ruled out the use of additional future acts of terrorist violence. This is one reason why Israel is presently seeking out other Palestinian communities, in order to provide alternative representatives of the Palestinian people to help

J. A. wins; blows perfect season

Flag football is in its final week of action with the battle for second place in the South still going on. Today's game will most likely decide who gains the playoff berth, the Quad or Burdick, unless there's a tie in which case the Quad is eliminated and Burdick and Harkness must play another game.

Gymnasts perform

By Anne Robillard
The gymnastics teams of Conn College and the Coast Guard Academy performed in an exhibition at Conn. The event was well attended and served as a warm-up for Conn's competitive season.

First performance nerves were evident in both clubs and the routines were not yet perfected, but on the whole there were some fine performances and Conn's Coach Zimmerman feels that the team will improve with each competitive meet. Coast Guard performed on the pommel horse, floor exercises, vaulting, parallel bars, still rings, and the high bar. Particularly outstanding for them in all events was senior and team captain, Rich Hock.

Conn performed in vaulting, the uneven bars, the beam, and floor exercises. Denise McClay, team captain, turned in good performances on the balance beam and on the uneven bars. Ellen Barbas was also good on the uneven bars exhibiting a smooth, quick rhythm. Conn looked especially strong in the floor exercises with two good performances by Freshmen, Alison Hall and Ann Drouhlet.

The women's gymnastics team appears to be off to a successful season with their first dual-meet in just over two weeks, on Dec. 7, against Yale.

Anticipate another exhibition by Conn sometime in February as they start their spring season of competition.

Swim team sponsors meet

by Nancy Orbe
On Monday, the 26th of November, the Connecticut College Women's Swim Team will be sponsoring a meet against Brown University here at the Couser Williams pool. The meet will start at 7 p.m. The girls have been working very hard for this home meet. They have been practicing twice daily, at 7 a.m. and at 7 p.m.

Many of them are swimming two miles of workouts every day. Come and give your support to a team of newcomers who are trying to win recognition for Connect College in the intercollegiate competition.

On Monday, the 26th of November, the Connecticut College Women's Swim Team will be sponsoring a meet against Brown University here at the Couser Williams pool. The meet will start at 7 p.m. The girls have been working very hard for this home meet. They have been practicing twice daily, at 7 a.m. and at 7 p.m.

Many of them are swimming two miles of workouts every day. Come and give your support to a team of newcomers who are trying to win recognition for Conn College in the intercollegiate competition.

For sale: Chiorda 16-speed bike. Excellent condition, 8 months old, $150 new, now $75 or best offer. I need the money: come rob me. Jeff Marotta, Box 760 Smith 209.

I am a very adaptable student looking for a room in faculty housing, also willing to take the place of a departing student in some already existing house or apartment. I have no car, so I am looking for a place within a half-hour's walk of campus. Please contact Craig Karlin, Box 649, or phone 442-0049.
