Students and trustees working towards change

by Jennifer Levan
Associate News Editor

Members of the Minority Students Steering Committee, the Student Government Association, and the Judiciary Board offered presentations to trustees outlining their goals and explaining the issues and problems they intend to tackle this year at the first quarterly Student Trustee Liaison Committee Meeting.

Michelle de la Uz, Young Alumni Trustee, opened the meeting by stating the purpose as "facilitating an understanding of student concerns through trustee action." She stressed the importance of student/trustee interaction and communication to promote change and solutions to problems.

Ernest Montgomery, chair of MSSC, began by emphasizing the need for the administration to adequately address the needs of students of color in the admissions process. According to Montgomery, the number of students of color enrolled at the college is not compiled, and, he said, one of the goals of MSSC this year is "pinpointing diversity groups" through the admissions process by adding more racial and ethnic categories to the application.

The administration and MSSC will meet Tuesday at Unity House to discuss suggestions for recognizing bicultural and multicultural students and their contributions to the college community.

A proposal sponsored by Chad Marlow, house senator of Wright, aimed at controlling the effect of high textbook costs on students with "more limited" means was defeated by a vote of 24-2-2 at last week's Assembly meeting.

There was some concern among members of the SGA that students of adequate financial means may support Marlow's legislation simply to avoid paying for their own costly books.

Gerard Choucroun, SAC chair, made his opposition to the proposal known early in the meeting. "[Students] might like [the proposal] in a selfish, not thinking way, but that's not why we're here. Student Government is not here to kiss students' asses about money," he said.

The Administration and SGA embraced spirit, but not content, of textbook proposal

As April Chiefs
Associate News Editor

A proposal sponsored by Chad Marlow, house senator of Wright, aimed at controlling the effect of high textbook costs on students with "more limited" means was defeated by a vote of 24-2-2 at last week's Assembly meeting.

In the debate before the vote was taken, many house senators and members of the Executive Board explained that while they agree in principle with the idea of enabling all Connecticut College students to take classes regardless of their ability to pay textbook costs, Marlow's proposal was just not feasible.

Pilar Somma, house senator of Unity, addressed this issue, stating, "Those people who are working [because of financial aid] may not have the time scheduled to take out books during library hours, while others who don't really need it can use the books anytime."

Colleen Shanley, SGA president, said she believes the tuition raise is the main weakness of the proposal. "If a program change needs funding, you don't just go to the Board and tell them. This is not the way things are done," she said.

Penny Leisring, house senator of KB, maintained that the proposal, under which only one of each book was purchased, seemed among the most unacceptable.

There is a big gap between heart and mind on this proposal, and passing this proposal would be like shooting ourselves in the mind." - Chuck Jones, house senator of Abbey

Connecticut College celebrated a $5.1 million grant from the F.W. Olin Foundation with a bang on Friday as guests spun the zorobe, viewed the building on a computer projection, listened to noted speakers, ate from a buffet, and clapped for various student performances from dance to rowing tank demonstrations.

Index:
Features pp. 4-5

The Everyworkin's Center hosts an Open House.

Comics pp. 6 & 12

Men's soccer undefeated after six games.

A & E pp. 11-12

Liviu Sohn performs in Dana Hall.

Sports pp. 13-16
Blinded by science?

This week is undoubtedly the sciences' high point at Connecticut College. With the announcement of the generous $5.1 million grant for the W.F. Ohlin Foundation Science Center and subsequent contrivances to the college's research and teaching commitments, there is reason for the community to be proud.

There are also, however, reasons for the college to temper its enthusiasm with some economic reality. Laviably recognizing the Foundation's generosity and launching aggressive efforts for subsequent contributions are commendable investments, but they bring long-term pay-offs and short-term expenses.

Connecticut College has a comparatively low endowment. It also faces increased concerns by some students and faculty that the shift of emphasis on the sciences detracts from the college's traditional strengths. This combination makes it essential that a balance be struck.

Friday's lengthy gala was clearly extravagant. Its costs, however, have been written off by the administration because the funding has not been drawn from the operating budget. Instead, the funds are being taken from unrestricted donations to the endowment. Each year a percentage of the endowment is put towards subsidizing the operating budget. Therefore, until the college manages to recoup its investment on this splendid affair, doesn't it stand to reason the operating budget will be put on tighter reins?

In addition, the administration has set a low estimate at $500,000 on building-related costs that are not covered by the grant. Assurances have been put forth that this money will be used to date and, once again, not diverted. Should the college acknowledge it will fundraise the $500,000- by expending initial revenue from unrestricted endowment contributions. Surely this too, they argue, will be seen as an "investment."

The point here is not that the science center is negative news. Indeed, it is a terrific boost for Connecticut College. The point here is not that the award's potential should go unacknowledged. For the future growth of the college and a capital campaign, investments may be wise.

The point here is not that Connecticut College best not forget its roots. The students, including science majors, expect a quality liberal arts education now, not later.

THE COLLEGE VOICE

Rebecca Flynn
Publisher
Sarah Huntley
Editor in Chief (Newspaper)

PRODUCTION & SUPPORT:
Rebecca Flynn
Operations Director

THE COLLEGE VOICE October 5, 1992 Page 2

Let's legalize marijuana!

"Prohibition will work great injury to the cause of temperance. It is a species of insensate injustice within itself for it goes beyond the bounds of prudence to attempt to control one's appetite by legislation and makes a crime out of harmless things. A Prohibition law strikes a blow at the very principles upon which our government was founded."

-Abraham Lincoln

Continuing to classify marijuana (a.k.a. cannabis) as an illegal drug prevents its beneficial use in medical and industrial capacities. Cannabinoids, the major psychoactive component in cannabis, can be used to treat glaucoma, arthritis, and other chronic pain disorders. In addition, cannabis can be used to treat Tourette's syndrome, anxiety, and nausea. Preliminary studies suggest that marijuana may also have potential in the treatment of cancer. It is estimated by the American Cancer Society that 200,000 patients with cancer suffer from nausea.

Marijuana is also being studied as a potential treatment for AIDS-related wasting syndrome. Preliminary research suggests that marijuana might help to stimulate appetite and decrease nausea in AIDS patients. However, further research is needed before marijuana can be approved as a treatment for AIDS-related wasting syndrome.

Marijuana has been shown to be effective in treating a variety of medical conditions, including chronic pain, nausea, and glaucoma. It has also been shown to be effective in treating a variety of mental health conditions, including anxiety and depression.

Marijuana is also being studied as a potential treatment for addiction. Preliminary research suggests that marijuana might help to reduce cravings for other drugs and to reduce the risk of relapse. However, further research is needed before marijuana can be approved as a treatment for addiction.

Marijuana is also being studied as a potential treatment for a variety of other medical conditions, includingMultiple Sclerosis, Parkinson's Disease, and Alzheimer's Disease. Preliminary research suggests that marijuana might help to improve motor function and to reduce the risk of cognitive decline in these conditions. However, further research is needed before marijuana can be approved as a treatment for these conditions.

Marijuana has also been shown to have potential in the treatment of a variety of mental health conditions, including anxiety, depression, and post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD). Preliminary research suggests that marijuana might help to reduce symptoms of anxiety and depression and to reduce the risk of relapse in people with PTSD. However, further research is needed before marijuana can be approved as a treatment for these conditions.

Marijuana is also being studied as a potential treatment for a variety of other medical conditions, including chronic pain, nausea, and glaucoma. It has also been shown to be effective in treating a variety of mental health conditions, including anxiety and depression.

Marijuana is also being studied as a potential treatment for addiction. Preliminary research suggests that marijuana might help to reduce cravings for other drugs and to reduce the risk of relapse. However, further research is needed before marijuana can be approved as a treatment for addiction.

Marijuana is also being studied as a potential treatment for a variety of other medical conditions, includingMultiple Sclerosis, Parkinson's Disease, and Alzheimer's Disease. Preliminary research suggests that marijuana might help to improve motor function and to reduce the risk of cognitive decline in these conditions. However, further research is needed before marijuana can be approved as a treatment for these conditions.

Marijuana has also been shown to have potential in the treatment of a variety of mental health conditions, including anxiety, depression, and post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD). Preliminary research suggests that marijuana might help to reduce symptoms of anxiety and depression and to reduce the risk of relapse in people with PTSD. However, further research is needed before marijuana can be approved as a treatment for these conditions.
Throughout the past years the American public has been inundated with reports that President Bush is a foreign policy expert. Opponents of the President claim that in the dynamic world of foreign affairs Bush is unmatched in both his knowledge and capability. Thus, the question is raised: Is it fair to claim that if Governor Bill Clinton were to gain power, the world would fall into chaos and squabbles between nations would escalate into full scale wars and the world would essentially be a pretty nasty place to live in. As the election closes in upon us, I believe it is necessary to take another look at the President's record on foreign affairs and see if he actually is the genius many people claim him to be.

Let us first examine Mr. Bush's record on fostering world peace. As the President or Vice President, Bush was involved in three major military operations. There was the invasion of Panama and the "defeat" of Iraq. As the President or Vice President, Bush was head of the CIA.) This operation was simply a means of bolstering patriotism and see if he actually is the genius many people claim him to be.

Let us consider some of the facts surrounding the Invasion of Panama. One of the goals of the administration was to deny dictatorial, drug-dealing despot who stood for everything antithetical to the American way of life. Why then had he been on the U.S. payroll since 1978? (the year Bush was head of the CIA.) This was supposed to be a "surgical" invasion in which targets were clear, and the attacks were to be limited to military installations. It therefore comes as a surprise to find that 10 blocks of high density housing were destroyed and the Red Cross was kept away for days as mass graves were dug. If this invasion was such a success, and the charges against Noriega were so clear, why did it cost 180 million dollars to convict him and why was his trial one of the most unconstitutional in recent memory? Finally, since Noriega left, the amount of drugs coming through Panama has risen, as has poverty and crime. I would hardly agree with Lee Atwater, who labeled the invasion a "political jackpot!"

It is now becoming obvious that the President's handling of the Persian Gulf War was not as skillful as once thought. Evidence is now surfacing to suggest that the U.S. bolstered Iraq's nuclear weapons drive almost up to the point the war began. In 1987 Bush met with the Iraqi ambassador to the U.S. and proposed that they would still be able to purchase weapons from the U.S. In the ensuing Gulf War, ask yourself just one question: are you happy with how it turned out? If you were against the war, are you pleased that upwards of half a million people were killed to free a country whose citizens still live under a tyrant? If you were like most Americans and supported the war, would you be comfortable with the fact that Saddam Hussein is still thumbing his nose at the United Nations and that Iraq's nuclear capability has not been significantly reduced? What did the war produce? Was it successful? Sure, we got to show off our expensive technology, (which incidentally killed 280 people hiding in a bomb shelter) but what political goals were met by this war?

What happened to the Kurds who were encouraged by Mr. Bush to rise up and defeat the leader we failed to depose? Almost 40,000 of them were massacred by the military we were supposed to have destroyed. It is clear that from no matter what perspective you view the Gulf War, the results cannot be satisfactory.

Mr. Bush claims to be a proponent of human rights; this is a fair and noble gesture, for who would claim to be against them? The key thing for a world leader is to do is to demonstrate to the world's population that he cares about such issues as free speech, free press and other such civil liberties. If Mr. Bush is a champion of civil liberties throughout the world, it is important that we look at China to see if this is true.

We all remember June 4, 1989. This was the day of the Tianamen Square massacre in which peaceful, unarmed demonstrators were slaughtered by tanks and armed troops. These were the same demonstrators who held a model of the Statue of Liberty as a symbol of their protest.

If Mr. Bush truly cared about human rights, he would have denounced the leaders of China and taken a strong stance that would have demonstrated his country's intolerance for deplorable acts such as the Tianamen massacre. Instead, Bush commented that "this is not the time for an emotional response." Less than 3 months after the massacre, the U.S. sold three satellites to China totaling 300 million dollars. (Coincidentally, one of the companies that benefited from the sale had hired Prescott Bush after the Tiananmen incident.) Just over one year after the massacre, the U.S. renewed China's most favored nation status. Finally, Bush gave Li Peng credibility by meeting with him, but tried to give little publicity to this meeting as possible.

It is clear from the United States' position on China that it is unwilling to support human rights when it infringes upon the economic or political goals of the country; this unfortunately sends a dangerous message to tyrannical leaders who will find friendly treatment from the U.S. as long as they are important to us.

Turning to Yugoslavia, when Governor Clinton said that it might be a beneficial idea if we intervened in some limited manner, he was lambasted by the Bush camp, who claimed that he was not only reckless, but that his ideas on foreign policy could not hold up to Mr. Bush's. It is interesting to note that only a few days after Clinton was attacked for his views, Bush agreed with them, saying that intervention might not be out of the question. In the past few weeks, Bush has been attempting to bolster his sagging campaign, promised to sell billions of dollars of military hardware to Saudi Arabia and Taiwan. In an age in which we must attempt to limit the proliferation of arms, Mr. Bush's sale of top of the line aircraft sets a dangerous precedent for the rest of the world. Many countries are presently in a state of economic dures; in addition, many of these countries have a good deal of surplus military equipment or the ability to manufacture it. If other nations follow Bush's lead and sell fighter planes to second and third world nations, the prospects for global peace will be severely threatened. It was a careless and shortsighted move on Mr. Bush's part to undermine the development of world peace in order to gain a few votes in the upcoming election. It should seem clear now that Mr. Bush's command of foreign affairs is not as strong as people often give him credit for. To his credit, he did bring together an impressive coalition during the Gulf War, but if we had taken the proper steps in the preceding years, would this coalition have been necessary? In analyzing Bush's handling of foreign affairs it seems that he has little vision of how the world should be; he is constantly contradicting himself and sacrificing prudent policy through his actions. In reference to how Bush operates, it's appropriate to quote one of my least favorite writers, George Will, "Bush acts like a waterbug of things . . . moving fast lest he linger so long that he is expected to show a mastery of, or even a real interest in, anything."
FEATURES
Everywomyn's Center collective hosts informative open house

by Jesse Roberts
Associate Features Editor

The Connecticut College Peer Educators presented a program, designed to encourage awareness, regarding acquaintance rape, a sensitive and often gray issue, on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Dana Hall. "It's a thing to loosen the mood a little," said Ray, who hopes to go every dorm to gather marchers as they go along.

Ray noted that she had planned planning a silent march, but decided against that idea. "We don't want to be silent. It's important that we stand up for ourselves."

The program "at a time when the campus is more accepting and sensitive to the issue. I hope the energy that's with us is something we can capture and work with."

He noted that he saw "a window of opportunity to educate" on this very important topic.

The Peer Educators relayed their messages of hope for increased awareness regarding this very sensitive issue.

The Connecticut College Peer Educators presented a program, designed to encourage awareness, regarding acquaintance rape, a sensitive and often gray issue, on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Dana Hall. "It's a thing to loosen the mood a little," said Ray, who hopes to go every dorm to gather marchers as they go along.

Ray noted that she had planned planning a silent march, but decided against that idea. "We don't want to be silent. It's important that we stand up for ourselves."

The program "at a time when the campus is more accepting and sensitive to the issue. I hope the energy that's with us is something we can capture and work with."

He noted that he saw "a window of opportunity to educate" on this very important topic.

The Peer Educators relayed their messages of hope for increased awareness regarding this very sensitive issue.

The Connecticut College Peer Educators presented a program, designed to encourage awareness, regarding acquaintance rape, a sensitive and often gray issue, on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Dana Hall. "It's a thing to loosen the mood a little," said Ray, who hopes to go every dorm to gather marchers as they go along.

Ray noted that she had planned planning a silent march, but decided against that idea. "We don't want to be silent. It's important that we stand up for ourselves."

The program "at a time when the campus is more accepting and sensitive to the issue. I hope the energy that's with us is something we can capture and work with."

He noted that he saw "a window of opportunity to educate" on this very important topic.

The Peer Educators relayed their messages of hope for increased awareness regarding this very sensitive issue.

The Connecticut College Peer Educators presented a program, designed to encourage awareness, regarding acquaintance rape, a sensitive and often gray issue, on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in Dana Hall. "It's a thing to loosen the mood a little," said Ray, who hopes to go every dorm to gather marchers as they go along.

Ray noted that she had planned planning a silent march, but decided against that idea. "We don't want to be silent. It's important that we stand up for ourselves."

The program "at a time when the campus is more accepting and sensitive to the issue. I hope the energy that's with us is something we can capture and work with."

He noted that he saw "a window of opportunity to educate" on this very important topic.
"Voyages to Freedom" exhibit opens
500 years of Latin American Jewish life explored

The opening of the exhibit "Voyages to Freedom: 500 Years of Jewish Life in Latin America and the Caribbean" was held on Thursday at 5:30 p.m. in the Haines Room of Shain Library.

The exhibit of photographs, which is free to the public, explores the history of Jewish life in Latin America and the Caribbean. The photographs have been themed to migration to Latin America, family and communal life, economic and cultural development, and relations between Jews and their neighbors.

Roger Brooks, Elie Wiesel Chair in Judaic studies and professor of religion, Jeff Lesser, professor of history and Doris Meyer, professor of Hispanic studies gave lectures at the opening reception. The discussion was moderated by Rabbi Aaron Rosenberg.

"Jewish active social programs define Jewish interaction with the rest of the world," Brooks told the audience. In 1942, Catholic rulers of Spain told Jews that they had to convert to Catholicism or leave. According to Brooks, many Jews converted to Catholicism externally, but remained Jewish on the inside. These Jews were called moranos or half-castes.

Lesser spoke about modern Jewish immigrants in Latin America. He explained that most came as newly converted Christians. The Jews that immigrated to Latin America were men; there were no women with them. They converted indigenous women in order to marry them.

Meyer's lecture centered around the saying, "a myth can be found at the beginning of literature and at the end of history,". She told about how various Jewish authors have expressed themselves about their Caribbean and Latin American identity.

The exhibit "Voyages to Freedom: 500 Years of Jewish Life in Latin America and the Caribbean" opened on Thursday.

Gaelsaloe brings new twist to duties as JA housefellow

by Yvonne Watkins

Assistant Managing Editor

Residents of Jane Addams dormitory are usually greeted by a flashing message light when they wake up in the morning. The message contains dorm news and some words of wisdom from their housefellow. I just wanted you to know that it's really cold this morning, and I know that your rooms are all warm and cozy since they turned the heat on, so maybe you should just stay inside and skip classes today. If your professors have a problem with that, tell them to give me a call...

Bashi Gaelsaloe described the best part of his job as getting to know and interact with all different kinds of people, "staying up until three o'clock in the morning just talking to people about whatever comes up...". This room becomes the focal point of the dorm in an abstract way. People wouldn't come here unless they wanted to get to know me, or had something to talk about. It is never a superficial thing... You get some really genuine conversations out of people. He continued by stating he believes there is no better way to learn how the college works than by being a housefellow. "You don't just get the projections. You see where it all gets started, and you get a greater appreciation of how work people in different parts of the campus do to make life here as good as it can be," he explained.

Gaelsaloe explained he applied for the housefellow position because, "I wanted to give something back to campus. I had the chance to do so many things here."

He also said he was influenced by the memory of his freshman year housefellow. "I was awestruck by her. She had several jobs, worked at the Teen Pregnancy Prevention Center, and had a high GPA. She was always doing things, but she was always there to talk. He said his example made him wish as a housefellow as "someone who would always be there, and who would care." He described his current housefellowship as "twenty wonderful people who are some of the greatest people I know."

Gaelsaloe admitted the position can be very taxing. "It is very demanding. Crazy things happen all the time. He said he had to make some choices in order to balance his schedule. For example, he said he didn't get to spend as much time with his friends as he would like. He had also planned on becoming more active in student organizations. "After graduation, he plans to go to London for graduate school. Gaelsaloe, who is from Brazil, explained, "I've been in this country for such a long time... I think I need a change of scenery, a change of thought, a change of ideology, a change of everything. That's why I think London would be a really good place to go. Ultimately, he would like to work in economic development and research. His immediate plans:

"After this I'm going to take a nap..."
NOW IN PAPERBACK—THE BOOK THAT IGNITED NATIONWIDE DEBATE.

“As groundbreaking as Simone de Beauvoir’s The Second Sex and Betty Friedan’s The Feminine Mystique.”

—Laura Shapiro, Newsweek

“Backlash is the right book at exactly the right time.... This trenchant, passionate, and lively book should be an eye-opener even for feminists who thought they understood what has been going on.”

—Elaine Showalter, front page, Los Angeles Times Book Review

“Invigorating and thorough...[A] bracing look at the counterassault in our society on women’s progress over the last decade.”

“Backlash is a must-read for women across the nation.”

—Eleanor Smeal, President, The Fund for the Feminist Majority

“Spellbinding and frightening, this book is a wake-up call to the men as well as the women who are struggling to build a gender-respectful society.”

—Robert Reich, author of The Work of Nations

BACKLASH

The Undeclared War Against American Women

SUSAN FALUDI

■ More than 8 months on the ■ New York Times bestseller list!
The new science building will be located between the gate house and Hale Laboratory in front of Fanning Hall.

College celebrates F.W. Olin Foundation grant at gala event

by Michael Delf Angelos
News Editor

On Friday, Connecticut College awarded, in grand style, its $3.5 million F.W. Olin Foundation award to the college. The event, planned by an outside event planner, incorporated an elaborate transformation of the newly renovated Charles B. Luce Field House. Over 900 guests, including Lowell Weicker, governor of Connecticut, and distinguished environmental scientist Barry Com- moner, as well as administrators, faculty, alumni, students and their parents were in attendance.

The gala displayed 40 displays and exhibits which "highlighted a cross section of the research and teaching at Connecticut College," according to the commemorative program.

The displays, selected from faculty and staff suggestions, varied from The Artificially Intelligent Computer Performer, Tutorial and reference hyperclass, and Teaching students to scan numerical verse to Small population of a restored island marsh system and Economic impact of drug trade in Peru.

Following a procession of facul- ty and administrators led by George J. Willauer, college Marshall and professor of English, Lawrence W. Miles, president of the F.W. Olin Foundation officially awarded the college the award. In his address Miles noted, "Our grants bring recognition not only for what you have already accom- plished but also for what we expect you will accomplish in the years ahead."

Miles cited seven points which the F.W. Olin Foundation identified as the strengths of the college. They were: outstanding adminis- trative and financial management, strong enrollments of academically superior students, an exceptional faculty committed to teaching, strong institutional planning, strong alumni support and loyalty, the willingness to undertake a mas- sive capital campaign, and the need for important new facilities to sup- port strategic goals.

Seynabon H. Loomis, chief writer of the grant proposal, associate dean of faculty and professor of zoology, delivered a slide presen- tation which gave a detailed look into the proposed F.W. Olin build- ing site and facility. Loomis invited the architects of the F.W. Olin build- ing, Tai Soo Kim, to stand in recogni- tion of his achievement, which Loomis described as a combination of "materials and form (combined) with great sensitivity."

Loomis also addressed the student body. All members of the college, Dorothy James, provost of the college and former chair of the college, Dorothy James, provost of the college, and Loomis all delivered enthusiastic presentations.

The responses indicated the necessity of the F.W. Olin Foundation award in building toward the realization of the college's Strategic Plan, solidifying its leadership position among the nation's liberal arts colleges and, according to Gaudiani "enabling us to reach our goal of tripling the endow- ment."

In keeping with Gaudiani's theme of the synergy of the four pillars of academia, Dr. Barry Bloom, Commoner and Weicker all delivered an address to the goal of tripling the endowment.

The much-publicized proposal sponsored by Bill Clinton, president of the college and former chair of the botany department, delivered an address on the dependency of pro- gressive scientific research upon the budget. Commoner expressed concern over man's unnatural ten- dency to create waste that can not be used by other elements in the environment. He extended his con- cern beyond the environmental into the fiscal sphere. The tendency to produce useless and destructive waste extends, he said, to the bud- get which adversely affects scientific research. He envisions a world in which human and global existence.

Commoner charged that the "gov- ernment has the power . . . to change the very way we produce goods which . . . would restore vitality.

"She was so powerful. She was a much better speaker than Bill Clinton ever was."

-Megan O'Connor, sophomore in attendance

Clinton - Hillary, that is - addresses crowd in New Haven

by Jennifer LeVan
Associate News Editor

Hillary Clinton, wife of Demo- cratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton, gave a speech this Friday in New Haven. She advocated economic change in order to promote strengthenimg of family ties and the promotion of stronger educational programs.

Sophomore Megan O'Connor was one of the Connecticut College students able to attend Clinton's speech. "I'm so glad I went because she seemed to really care and really understand what's going on," she said.

Added O'Connor, "She was so powerful. She was a much better speaker than Bill Clinton ever was."

According to Clinton, many changes must be made to our society today.

With many families living below the poverty level and suffering because of the lack of jobs, something must be done to raise the American education level and cre- ate change.

Clinton believes that jobs have been lost because of the trickle-down economy promoted by Bush and Reagan in the last decade, and believes action must be taken to promote economic and social change.

A National Service Initiative Plan is just one of Bill Clinton's proposals to promote change which was advocated by his wife during her speech.

The gala offered 40 displays and exhibits which "highlighted a cross section of the research and teaching at Connecticut College," according to the commemorative program.

The displays, selected from faculty and staff suggestions, varied from The Artificially Intelligent Computer Performer, Tutorial and reference hyperclass, and Teaching students to scan numerical verse to Small population of a restored island marsh system and Economic impact of drug trade in Peru.
Trustees learn student concerns

Continued from p. 1

Improving academic advising. Gerard Chourouk, SAC chair, urged the necessity of improving student life both in and out of the dorms. He stressed communication between the administration and the student life both in and out of the dorms. He stressed communication between the administration and the students, and said other colleges should be studied in order to find ways to improve campus social and academic life.

Savanna Dhall, chair of Academic Affairs, emphasized the need for the administration to subsidize faculty hunches in order to stimulate faculty-student interaction, especially in the Knocton dining hall, where foreign languages are spoken.

Dhall also stressed SGA's concern over class size, saying that something must be done. Alternative time slots to alleviate the pressure for large classes were discussed, and both trustees and students came to the conclusion that a more comprehensive way of dealing with the problem must be found.

The Judiciary Board also presented the trustees with their goals for the semester and informed them of the recent changes made within the board. Julie DeSremar, J-Board chair, was recently made a non-voting member of the board in order to assume a parliamentary role.

Also, starting this semester, a roll call vote will be published in order to hold representatives more responsible to their constituents.

The goals of the J-Board this year are to survey the effectiveness of the honor code and update the J-Board pamphlets in the Admissions Office. Also, the J-Board plans to change their terms of office to full year terms in order to train the new members in the spring.

After the students presented their goals for their organizations, the trustees expressed their enthusiasm for working together to reach those goals. Throughout the meeting, the trustees and students questioned each other and came to the conclusion that they should make their meetings more productive.

De LaUx asked the group what it planned to get out of its four meet- ings a year, and the trustees stated that they would like to organize their meeting into small discussion groups focused towards a single issue.

Both students and trustees expressed a desire to move forward and get involved to improve the entire college community through active participation.

INTERN NEXT SPRING
AT THE STATE CAPITOL

***************

Earn academic credits while you learn about state government

OPEN TO ALL MAJORS

Applications are now available from your campus advisor for the State Legislative Internship Program. Students earn credit while interning with a State Senator or Representative.

For details and applications, see your campus advisor or write to:

Directors, Internship Program, Legislative Office Building, State Capitol, Hartford, CT 06106.

CAMPUS ADVISOR: Wayne Swanson

Government Department

Connecticut College

Proposal to control book prices fails

Continued from p. 1

per class would be on reserve at the library, did not warrant a tuition surcharge by the SGA.

"This is not feasible. How long would reserve times for each stud- ent be? And what would happen during exams? I don't know, if this is an issue that students want to raise the tuition over," said Leiringer.

Perhaps the strongest opposition to the proposal came from Chuck Jones, house senator of Abbey House. "To vote this down is not to vote against equity in classrooms. To vote this down is a vote for saving [SGA's] hard fight for repetition with the school... This proposal shows a genuine lack of insight into how the school works, economically and politically."

He added, "There is a big gap between heart and mind on this proposal, and passing this proposal would be like shooting ourselves in the mind."

Marlow maintained throughout the debate that his proposal was not intended to be viewed as though it was "written in stone."

He often referred back to the cover letter of his proposal, which would have been sent to the administrative and faculty of Connecticut College.

In the cover letter, he stated, "We present this to you merely in the form of a recommendation... We hope this proposal will be a starting point for eventual action on this important student concern."

Marlow urged SGA to look upon his proposal simply as "clay" which would eventually be molded, through communication between the SGA, the faculty, and the administration, into a "masterpiece."

Mike Gaffney, house senator of Harkness, was the only member besides Marlow to vote yes to this proposal.

College appoints Helen Reeve to newly-endowed $1.2 million chair

by Rebecca Flynn

Editor in Chief

The chair was funded through a $300,000 National Endowment for the Humanities grant and a $700,000 bequest from 1922 graduate Lucy McDannel. McDannel's bequest was the largest ever received by the college. The $700,000 is a portion of her donation.

The endowed chair is named in honor of Hanne Hafkesbrink, professor of German at Connecticut College from 1953-1967.

Hafkesbrink, a resident of Waterford and a native of Koblenz, Germany, earned her doctorate in German Literature at the University of Munich.

Studying theology, philosophy and the problems of nihilism in German literature, Hafkesbrink wrote Unknown Germany. The latter Chronicle of the First World War, She also co-edited Deutsche Erscheinungen. 1914-1945.

At the announcement of the endowed chair, Gabriadian said, "One of the great lights of Connecticut College's tradition of teacher-scholars, Professor Emeritus Hafkesbrink maintains a lifelong devotion to the life and mind and dedicated her own life to sharing that love with students."
In The Spotlight: College features

Tennessee Williams

_by James Santangelo Associate A&E Editor_

October 8, 9, 10 - Obsession Series - "Suddenly Last Summer," directed by Tennessee Williams, by Linda Her, chair of the theater department. The show starts at 8 p.m. in Palmer Auditorium. Tickets are $5, general; $3, students.

October 10 - Arboretum Walk - Visit with Nancy Dreyer, Arboretum director, in a walk through the Arboretum to see and hear why New England's deciduous trees are particularly prone to fall's environment. An opportunity to attend a concert held in Palmer Auditorium. Tickets are $5, general; $3, student and senior citizens.

October 10 - American Indian Dance Theater in Oliva Hall. $2.50.

October 23 - Autism & Artist Series - "War of the Worlds" (1953). H.G. Wells' classic sci-fi film with Oscar-winning special effects. Begins at 8 p.m. in Oliva Hall. $2.50.

October 23 - Concert & Artist Series - "The Tragedy of Macbeth," Stephen Payne, director, with some of Britain's leading black actors from The Royal National Theater of Great Britain and the Royal Shakespeare Company. The performance begins at 8 p.m. in Palmer Auditorium. Tickets are $25, $18, $16, $13, regular; $18, $15, $12, $7, students. Box office: 439-2787.

October 25 - Opening Reception - "Painting Exhibition featuring works by Holly Hughes, Martha Keller, Marina Adams, Larry Webb and Pier Consagra." Opening is from 4-6 p.m. in the Alumni Arts Center.

October 30 - American Indian Dance Theater - "The Rocky Horror Picture Show," a full-cast with Tim Curry and Jon Sandison. The two showings are 8 p.m. and midnight in Oliva Hall. $2.50.

November 5 - American Indian Dance Theater - The Shanghai Acrobat & Dance Theater perform "The Parade of Lanterns," which combines 2,500 years of Chinese history (on live scenes, no live through dance and humor. For tickets, call 444-7737.

November 11 - American Indian Dance Theater - Marcel Marceau, the world-famous French mime, performs a show for all ages. 7:30 p.m. For tickets, call 444-7737.

November 5-22 - Goodepeed Opera House - Goodspeed Opera House. $24.50. Performances are $22. Box office: (860) 873-8668.

November 9-11 - American Indian Dance Theater - "The Papago and the Apache," directed by Carol Hall, composer of the musical "Elaine." The performance begins at 8 p.m. in Palmer Auditorium. Tickets are $19 at the door, $18 for New England residents, $16 for seniors. Box office: 439-2787.

November 18-20 - American Indian Dance Theater - "The City," a new American Indian dance company. Directed by Judith Buttery, artistic director, in a walk through the Arboretum to see and hear why New England's deciduous trees are particularly prone to fall's environment. An opportunity to attend a concert held in Palmer Auditorium. Tickets are $5, general; $3, student and senior citizens.

November 18-20 - American Indian Dance Theater - "The Chinese Mandolin," directed by Yoshihiko Sasaki, from Japan.

November 30 - American Indian Dance Theater - "The Christmas Carol," directed by Judy Flanagan, from the United Kingdom.

December 7-9 - American Indian Dance Theater - "The Nutcracker," directed by Joanne Dwyer, from Australia.

Art of Conn alumn on display at Lyman-Allyn Art Museum

_by Anne Zachary The College Voice_

This month, the Lyman-Allyn Art Museum is featuring an exhibit by Helen Langfield, a graduate of Connecticut College. She began painting in the 1950's and later received her Master's degree in studio art from Connecticut College. This exhibit, titled Messages, is a collection of works created by Langfield in 1997.

The title Messages is apparently very ironic, as Langfield asexpected to have no clear theme or idea that she would like to convey when she began a new piece.

Instead, she begins with marks of paint on the canvas and lets the form they will take evolve gradually. When viewing this exhibit, however, one is most likely to find at least one, if not many poignant messages in each of the works.

_in The City, which is done in mixed media with curiousand vividly

Langfield seems to address the subject of the hardships of city life. This theme is shown in the image of cold, gray buildings; the forms of lonely, isolated people; the theme of women's issues seems to be a concern for the artist. She expresses a desire for the audience to be immersed in the life and culture of Florence. The exhibition 2 depics a wood and nature scene, reminiscent of the artist.

This month, the exhibition runs through several of Langfield's paintings. Women on the Street, I'll Fly Away, The Green Divide, and I'm Looking For A Guy (oil on canvas painting which features the words "I'm looking for a guy who plays the baritone double oars the clarinet and wears a size 37 suit") all portray women, many of them nude, seemingly dreaming or wishing for something they currently lack.

Langfield's landscape designs appear to express a concern for the environment. Landscape 2 depicts a wood and nature scene, reminiscent of the Oregon. Landscape 1, by contrast, is done mostly in black, thereby suggesting a void, an area that has possibly been left desolate by pollution or human callousness. Both works are done in mixed media.

The exhibition will run until October 9, 1999. For more information, contact the museum at 443-2545.
ARTS AND ENTERTAINMENT

Singles: skip the movie, buy the soundtrack

By Diane Myers

Ab, Hollywood. The land of teary eyes and wide smiles, of bitter conflict and happy endings...where would we be without its singles? In the ultimate product of Hollywood: trendy, sappy, and ultimately predictable.

The story revolves around four single twenty something lives living in Seattle, all of whom, at the movie's outset, are having relationships. In an extraordinary break, just the usual: one girl (Bridget Fonda) fails for a sensitive guitar player (Bill Pullman) who tolerates her affection, but does not return them wholeheartedly. Singles makes use of the tried cliché: "You don't appreciate what you have until it's gone," after Fonda ditches Pullman, he realizes he misses her a lot and vouch—they live happily ever after. I don't feel as though I'm raising the movie for you because from the beginning, the ending is obvious.

The other story line is just as stale. A guy (Campbell Scott) falls for a girl (Kyra Sedgwick) who has just come out of a relationship and is emitting about a new one. After the mundane trials and tribulations, the two discover that they were the right choices all along and they...too, live happily ever after. Despite the foreseeable ending and the less-than-intriguing plot, Singles does have a few redeeming qualities. Scott is charming and witty throughout the film and the majority of the film's funny humor, belong to him. Dillion, though amusing in a "Bill and Ted" sort of way, does not have the charisma the possessed in Dragnet Cowboy.

One real bonus to the film's excellent soundtrack. Set in Seattle, the film features the music of several of today's better bands, among them Paul Jam, Soundgarden, and Smashing Pumpkins. The role the music actually plays in the movie (basically background) is sorely disappointing; however, the advertisements had led us to believe otherwise and I was brutally dis-appointed.

Although Singles is definitely not the movie for a fan, watching requires very little thought or attention, and therefore is rather relaxing. Good-bye. I don't recommend paying even seven dollars to be relaxed. Wait for the video, then use it for yourself.

---

The Hartford School of Ballet receives $180,000 Mellon grant

by James Santangelo

The College Voice

Among the most beautiful of the expressive arts is the art of dance. Whether it be ballet, tap or jazz, dance allows the participants and viewer alike to appreciate the intricacy of human movement. The Andrew W. Mellon Foundation is no stranger to the appreciation of dance. Across the nation, nine dance schools will receive grants from the Mellon Foundation of $180,000 per school.

Since 1989, the grants have been given in order to "enhance the preparation of professional dancers and choreographers at schools throughout the United States. "One school that has received such a grant is the Hartford School of Ballet. Founded in 1964, the school is the the first nonprofit organization dedicated solely to dance. In recent years, the school has gained an international reputation for its dance instruction. The school intends to use the funding for several aspects of dance instruction including the development of curriculum, faculty, and staff.

Not only will the grant allow for the support of master teachers who have international perspectives or areas of specialization, but will also help to design a curriculum plan, to continue the school's programs in dance history, and to effect teacher workshops in areas that support the curriculum.

Other schools that have received grants from the Mellon Foundation include: the American Ballet Association, Jacob's Pillow Dance festival, Ballet Hispánico, North Carolina School of the Arts, the Boston Ballet School and the Feld Ballet.

---

Welcome Back from your newest neighbor!

(Next to the Universal Food Store)

We want your business and suggestions. Bring in this coupon along with your Conn College I.D., and you'll receive your membership and 1st movie rental FREE!

---

Please recycle

The College Voice

October 8, 1992
Answers to King Crossword on page 6.
Banged up women’s field hockey team drops a tough pair

Walker, Nolan, and Moran all face injuries

by Matt Burstein
The College Voice

Nikki Hennessy knows that field hockey is not a gentle sport. She knows that the ball is hard and merciless. She knows that two of her teammates, Suzanne Walker and Molly Nolan, are both preparing to watch the game against Clark from the sidelines. And she knows that Nolan wears a purple-blue brace on her knee, she sits on the sidelines. And she knows that two of her teammates’ stitches cannot run on the field with thoughts of her teammates’ stitches racing through her mind. She has cast aside thoughts of her teammates’ stitches and funny bones. Clark is leading Com 3-0 with sixteen seconds remaining in the game. It has been a much closer contest than the scoreboard indicates. Moran has seen Kristin Kasnas score off assists from Erica Brasile twice within five minutes. She has seen Lauren Stuto seal the outcome of the game with a goal from Jennifer Outinger with 3:15 left. She has seen her team fire twenty-eight shots on the Cougars and has seen Clark goalie Jennifer West make eight saves. She has seen her team face nineteen shots and has seen her goalie stop two. She has devoted the last 69 minutes and 44 seconds to helping her team win. But the ball does not know the score. It does not understand that time is running out. The plastic orb hits her in the ribs, forcing her to leave the game. The throb will subside, but the game is beginning; she is ready to play. She has forgotten. She is a player, and it is time to play.

Smith also has players. Jessica Jones scores off an assist from Lisa Cook with two minutes left to play in the half to give her team the lead. But just 1:01 into the second half, Nolan scores from Louise Brooks. It was just a week ago she was struck in the rain at Amherst. The New London sun is now smiling upon her.

The game continues. Two teams, evenly matched, completely focused, play on into overtime. Kristin Neebes, who has had an outstanding day with seventeen saves, dives to stop a Smith shot. But she cannot stop Lisa Cook 7:38 into overtime. Her goal over Neebes’ foot ends the game. Coach Anne Parmenter is not overly disappointed. “We played better than against Clark,” she says. “We’re a good team. We just need to win. And it is time to play. We’re a good team. We just need to win.”

Numerous injuries hamper field hockey team’s success.

But even more, they want to play. They have tasted the bitterness of defeat. They have felt the surging pain the ball can inflict. Yet they still want to play. It is what they love, and the injured understand this better than anyone.

The Camels travel to Trinity this Wednesday before moving on to Wesleyan this Saturday.
SPORTS

Schmoozing with Dob and Pops:

Conn campus bar voted worst in U.S. by Boozing Illustrated

By Dobby Gibson Sports Editor

ILLUSTRATED

schmoozing to campaign for the hall of fame

Schmoozing would now like to formally announce its candidacy for the new Connecticut College Sports Hall of Fame. The idea for the hall came from the brilliant mind of new A.D. Robert Malekoff (he lets us call him Bob) who we look up to and admire very much. We think the hall will be a fine new addition to the Athletic Complex (that's new too, count 'em two, brownstone points). Schmoozing believes in the four years of tough and gritty sports reporting at this school that we've managed to provide the most complete perspective on the sports world in general, but have also managed to revolutionize modern liberal thought. Schmoozing is willing to donate an autographed 16" x 18" glossy photo like the one that appears above our byline and two pairs of boxer shorts for anyone who we decide to induct into the hall of fame... at least for Shea-bo's sake. Hell, just buy a Bogie or Triple Yahtzee and throw it on one of the tables, any old way. At least for Shea-bo's sake. Hell, just buy a Boggle or Triple Yahtzee and throw it on one of the tables, anything would help the atmosphere in that dump... in case you were wondering. Andre Lee is not only the president of the Connecticut College Hair Club For Men, but he is also a customer. The second biggest, paint-in-the-poop shuts on this campus next to the blue phones has got to be the proliferation of speed bumps. The worst strip of roadway is right in front of the infamy where three speedbumps are separated by no more than forty feet of pavement. And if that weren't bad enough, one of the bumps is at an angle which requires the driver to aim his or her car into the far wing of the infamy.

Monday night pick

Last week: Raiders plus seven at the chiefs. Result: Chiefs 27, Raiders 7. Schmoozing comes out of that game in a condition similar to that of the U.S. economy. Record: 2-2 (500) This week: The wondrous Dallas Cowboys travel to hell and beyond, a.k.a. Philadelphia's Veteran Stadium, where the Eagles are six point favorites. The Cowboys are what Dob likes to refer to as the Minnesota Vikings A squad—they're still feeding off the buzz of draft picks they got in the Walkergate scandal. Ironically, that very same booted pushing, karate kicking, ballet dancing Herschel Walker will suit up against the Cowboys as an Eagle next Monday night. We like this revenge/potential animosity factor, we like the way Walker has run this year, we like a good good guard, and we like fast cars and fast women. All of this tells us to take the Eagles and spot them. As

Women's soccer team earns a tie

Late-night vigil inspires Camels to their first goal in four games

By Dobby Gibson Sports Editor

It looks like the late-night, candlelight vigil held by the women's soccer team last Friday may have finally gotten the monkey off the Camel's back for a while. At 49:26 of Saturday's game against Wellesley Karen Mallegol did what no Conn player had done since September 19th. She scored a goal. There is little question that Mallegol's goal is the biggest one yet scored for the Camels this season. It breaks a three game scoreless streak for the blue and white, ended up inspiring the team of a tie against Wellesley, and possibly reinvigorating some confidence in what was until that point an extremely sluggish offensive attack.

Last Thursday, the women's soccer team played one of their best games of the year against UMass-Dartmouth, but ended up falling victim to their own tempest in the corners. With little more than five minutes left, UMass-Dartmouth converted on a corner kick that sent the Camels home with their third straight, and possibly most disappointing, shutout. 0-3.

Camels forward Anne Polich and Jen Leonard decided enough was enough and organized a late night pop rally that was held in the center circle of Hardness Green on Friday night. Players used the opportunity to get everything off their chest, pay each other up, and even light candles in attempts to rekindle their offense with a little magic.

Leonard said of the late-night meeting, "it worked out really well."

It certainly did. Although Wellesley scored but 5:27 into the match, Conn eventually regrouped and tied the game on Mallegol's goal. The Camels didn't let up there however. Pushing themselves hard in a long and physically grueling game, the Camels scored enough to earn a tie and organized a late night

Cross country meet

Continued from p. 13

can get our top two finishers that high up its really great. We still have a few things we need to work on, but on the whole I think our team ran well. This Saturday, the men's team will face a strong and fast Babson College at Babson. According to Hibbard, the camels will have to be very focused in practice this week if they hope to do well against them.

The College Voice October 5, 1999 Page 14

Women's soccer breaks four game slump with win against Wellesley.
SPORTS

Women’s cross country team wins against MIT, Conn sweeps cross country invitational

by Julie Grand
Associate Sports Editor

Racing against seven other teams, the women’s cross country team destroyed their competition last Saturday, winning their own invitational meet with a score of 21 points and defeating second place team MIT by 30 points.

The Camels took the first three places of the meet with Katie McGee, Jennifer Devine, and Meghan Clay finishing in the times 20:25, 21:07, and 21:41, respectively. Both McGee and Devine led the race from start to finish.

According to coach Ned Bishop, Conn’s competition was not particularly strong on Saturday, but the majority of the team ran a lot faster than it had earlier this season.

“I was very pleased today,” Bishop said. “We knew that it was not faster than it had earlier this season.

Conn’s competition was particularly strong on Saturday, but we were able to outpace them.

In Tuesday’s only game, the EM Airplanes cruised by the F-Men 29-0. The Airplanes were led by QB Brian Trup (“Swatting to the Older’s”) Shea, who threw for two TDs and ran for another. Fran Higgins, Pete Freston, and Andrew Gibbison also tallied for the Airplanes. Chris Stearn was outstanding as usual on defense as he recorded his second interception of the season and will be played at a later date.

In Wednesday’s second game, Moscow Express rolled past the JA Naids 4-1. Jeff Gabbemanni led the Moscow Express squad with two goals and an assist. Ray Flynn (of Dominio’s fame) and Steve Leong tallied for ME. George Voyner netted the sole goal for the Nads. In non-action that day, With Themselves was the winner over Freyriers by a score of 4-0. Davian Dofe, Joe Towel, Chris Doherty, and Dave Tan tallied for the Low Lifes. Ray Woshiek and Chad Dickens each netted a goal for Almad Mater. In Monday’s only game, Power Boot battled With Themselves to a 2-2 tie. Francis, assisted by Rick Gudtke and Festivus, netted both the power boot goals. Pete Morehouse and Fred Feldstein tallied for With Themselves.

In game one on Wednesday, Does a Body Good shut out Freeman (alias I Can’t Believe It’s Not Butter) 3-0. Ed Peacock, Jim McLaughlin, and Dan Galland each netted a goal for Does a Body Good.

Wednesday’s second game saw a meeting between two of the leagues top teams, Moscow Express and Mulligans. Mulligans proved to be the better team in this meeting as they handed Moscow Express a 4-1 loss. Jamie Poft netted two goals, while teammate Bill Mulligan and Charlie Adams each netted one. Larry Koo and Jess Gabbemanni teamed for MUS’s sole goal.

Women’s Tennis beats Brandies

The women’s tennis team defeated Brandies this past Saturday 6-3.

Heidi Sychter, Christine Wodko, Katie Jennings, and Amy Matkin won for the Camels in singles. Wodko teamed up with Jennings for a doubles win in 2nd and Mallin and Sychter. Conn’s next match is to host Wheaton on Monday.

Conn hosts Triathlon

The Conn College Triathlon hosted their first triathlon of the year last week comprised of a 200 yard swim, eight mile bike, and two mile run.

The top three men finishers were Brian Nord-Clauss (47:33), Lance Bley (49:17), Brian Saha (51:02). The top three female finishers were Heidi Sychter (57:00), Christa Hollihan (55:33), and Amy Bodine (1:07:27). Professor Walter Brudy came in as the top female finisher (55:57). Triathlon Club member Berdett Barber wished to thank all volunteers and noted that anyone interested in triathloning should call him at x3283.

Volleyball wins another tournay

The Connecticut College Women’s Volleyball team continued their successful season by winning the Rhode Island College Tournament.

Conn’s star spiker Bonnie Silverstein captured her second MVP of the year.

Women’s soccer breaks scoring slump

Conn’s star spiker Bonnie Silverstein captured her second MVP of the year.

In Sunday’s second game, Moscow Express rolled past the JA Naids 4-1. Jeff Gabbemanni led the Moscow Express squad with two goals and an assist. Ray Flynn (of Dominio’s fame) and Steve Leong tallied for ME. George Voyner netted the sole goal for the Nads. In non-action that day, With Themselves was the winner over Freyriers by a score of 4-0. Davian Dofe, Joe Towel, Chris Doherty, and Dave Tan tallied for the Low Lifes. Ray Woshiek and Chad Dickens each netted a goal for Almad Mater. In Monday’s only game, Power Boot battled With Themselves to a 2-2 tie. Francis, assisted by Rick Gudtke and Festivus, netted both the power boot goals. Pete Morehouse and Fred Feldstein tallied for With Themselves.

In game one on Wednesday, Does a Body Good shut out Freeman (alias I Can’t Believe It’s Not Butter) 3-0. Ed Peacock, Jim McLaughlin, and Dan Galland each netted a goal for Does a Body Good.

Wednesday’s second game saw a meeting between two of the leagues top teams, Moscow Express and Mulligans. Mulligans proved to be the better team in this meeting as they handed Moscow Express a 4-1 loss. Jamie Poft netted two goals, while teammate Bill Mulligan and Charlie Adams each netted one. Larry Koo and Jess Gabbemanni teamed for MUS’s sole goal.

Women’s Tennis beats Brandies

The women’s tennis team defeated Brandies this past Saturday 6-3.

Heidi Sychter, Christine Wodko, Katie Jennings, and Amy Matkin won for the Camels in singles. Wodko teamed up with Jennings for a doubles win in 2nd and Mallin and Sychter. Conn’s next match is to host Wheaton on Monday.

Conn hosts Triathlon

The Conn College Triathlon hosted their first triathlon of the year last week comprised of a 200 yard swim, eight mile bike, and two mile run.

The top three men finishers were Brian Nord-Clauss (47:33), Lance Bley (49:17), Brian Saha (51:02). The top three female finishers were Heidi Sychter (57:00), Christa Hollihan (55:33), and Amy Bodine (1:07:27). Professor Walter Brudy came in as the top female finisher (55:57). Triathlon Club member Berdett Barber wished to thank all volunteers and noted that anyone interested in triathloning should call him at x3283.

Volleyball wins another tournay

The Connecticut College Women’s Volleyball team continued their successful season by winning the Rhode Island College Tournament.

Conn’s star spiker Bonnie Silverstein captured her second MVP of the year.

Women’s soccer breaks scoring slump

Conn’s star spiker Bonnie Silverstein captured her second MVP of the year.

In Sunday’s second game, Moscow Express rolled past the JA Naids 4-1. Jeff Gabbemanni led the Moscow Express squad with two goals and an assist. Ray Flynn (of Dominio’s fame) and Steve Leong tallied for ME. George Voyner netted the sole goal for the Nads. In non-action that day, With Themselves was the winner over Freyriers by a score of 4-0. Davian Dofe, Joe Towel, Chris Doherty, and Dave Tan tallied for the Low Lifes. Ray Woshiek and Chad Dickens each netted a goal for Almad Mater. In Monday’s only game, Power Boot battled With Themselves to a 2-2 tie. Francis, assisted by Rick Gudtke and Festivus, netted both the power boot goals. Pete Morehouse and Fred Feldstein tallied for With Themselves.

In game one on Wednesday, Does a Body Good shut out Freeman (alias I Can’t Believe It’s Not Butter) 3-0. Ed Peacock, Jim McLaughlin, and Dan Galland each netted a goal for Does a Body Good.

Wednesday’s second game saw a meeting between two of the leagues top teams, Moscow Express and Mulligans. Mulligans proved to be the better team in this meeting as they handed Moscow Express a 4-1 loss. Jamie Poft netted two goals, while teammate Bill Mulligan and Charlie Adams each netted one. Larry Koo and Jess Gabbemanni teamed for MUS’s sole goal.

Women’s Tennis beats Brandies

The women’s tennis team defeated Brandies this past Saturday 6-3.

Heidi Sychter, Christine Wodko, Katie Jennings, and Amy Matkin won for the Camels in singles. Wodko teamed up with Jennings for a doubles win in 2nd and Mallin and Sychter. Conn’s next match is to host Wheaton on Monday.

Conn hosts Triathlon

The Conn College Triathlon hosted their first triathlon of the year last week comprised of a 200 yard swim, eight mile bike, and two mile run.

The top three men finishers were Brian Nord-Clauss (47:33), Lance Bley (49:17), Brian Saha (51:02). The top three female finishers were Heidi Sychter (57:00), Christa Hollihan (55:33), and Amy Bodine (1:07:27). Professor Walter Brudy came in as the top female finisher (55:57). Triathlon Club member Berdett Barber wished to thank all volunteers and noted that anyone interested in triathloning should call him at x3283.

Volleyball wins another tournay

The Connecticut College Women’s Volleyball team continued their successful season by winning the Rhode Island College Tournament.

Conn’s star spiker Bonnie Silverstein captured her second MVP of the year.

Women’s soccer breaks scoring slump

Conn’s star spiker Bonnie Silverstein captured her second MVP of the year.
SPORTS

Gilmartin's hat trick lifts men's soccer to perfect 6-0 mark

by Noah Goldstein
The College Voice

Brendan Gilmartin completed his hat trick and an assist in Conn College's 5-1 victory over Salve Regina Saturday. He also added a goal in Tuesday's 2-0 shutout of Trinity in a NECAC game. The wins boosted the Camels' record to 3-0 in conference play and 6-0 overall.

Gilmartin, who with twenty points leads the team in scoring, initiated the Conn scoring barrage at the 15:13 mark with a left-footed shot that slid past the NewPorters' goalie. After Salve Regina's Joseph Comerotto made it 4-1, before freshman Mark. Mokoname, "it proved what we thought all along: that we can come back and settle down. We were ready to come out and take the game in the second half."

The victory over Trinity provided a big moral boost for the Camels as they out shot the previously unbeaten Bannants 18-6. Gilmartin dominated the game from start to finish, rarely allowing Trinity into their offensive zone. The Conn midfielders were able to keep the ball out of the air and distribute the ball on the ground. In past games the Camels offense stalls when players make long, often uncontrolled passes during transitions.

"The Trinity game was really good," said Mokoname. "We came out and put our stamp on that. It's how we play at Conn."

Next week the Camels will attempt to sweep their four game home stand by taking on Clark on Tuesday at 4 p.m. and defending conference champion Wesleyan on Saturday at 3:30 p.m. on Harkness Green. Cheney, who has nineteen points thus far in the season, is only three points shy of moving into the fifth position on the Conn career scoring list. He will move ahead of Kevin Sayward, who finished his career with fifty-eight points. The game was played evenly in the first half, but Conn came out aggressively and dominated the second half, out-shooting the NewPorters by a whopping 26-5 margin. The Camels, who perhaps underestimated their opponent, came out sluggish and overconfident at the start of the game.

"But," said Mokoname, "it was hard work and determination," said Gilmartin about his play. "I made that extra run hoping that the chance [to score] would be there, and today I had that opportu-

With Stack providing maturity, Bresnahan feels that the team is hard and is running well." Dave Isaacson, John Frankfurt, Jeff Bresnahan. an education major in Boston, Massachusetts, Bresnahan replaced Bill Park, who coached the team for two years. As a race team advisor at Community Boating, Bresnahan coached sailors for the Bemis and Sears Trophy Regatta. He has also run major USRHY regattas. While at Salem State, Bresnahan was the assistant coach of sailing. Bresnahan is also a world-class racer. His list of major regattas includes the Olympic Trials, Star Boat Class in 1992 (4th place), Can Am Olympic Classes Regatta, the former sailing program director at Community Boating, Inc., in Boston, Massachusetts. Bresnahan won the time trial and helped the team out. Ann Renzy, a junior sailor, has been out to try out for the major win, and helped the team greatly.

The team also competed in the Shoap Eliminations. Conn won the division with Zeigler steering, and with Marden and Bob Endenbach crewing for him. The elimination races were held at Courageous Sailing Center, CSC, in Boston in J-22s. On October 17 and 18, they will go on to the next round and the top two from there to go to Hawaiian. In singlehanded competition, Brian North-Cross, Marden, and Zeigler, qualified to race in the New England Singlehandeds. The top four will go to the Nationals.

There are many others that are helping the team out. Ann Renzy, who has crewed for two years, is steering and doing a good job anchoring the Women's Team. Endenbach is the captain of the JV team with seven other sophomore skippers. The varsity squad is Ulander, Zeigler, and Marden. Bresnahan feels that the team is coming along nicely and is looking forward to a winning season.

New sailing coach Bresnahan looks to keep Conn on a winning course

by Josh Levine
The College Voice

The Connecticut College sailing team has been on the water since September. The team has made some major changes since last year. The biggest change is the new coach, Jeff Bresnahan.

Bresnahan, an education major from Salem State University, was the former sailing program director at Community Boating, Inc., in Boston, Massachusetts. Bresnahan replaced Bill Park, who coached the team for two years. As a race team advisor at Community Boating, Bresnahan coached sailors for the Bemis and Sears Trophy Regattas. He has also run major USRHY regattas. While at Salem State, Bresnahan was the assistant coach of sailing. Bresnahan is also a world-class racer. His list of major regattas includes the Olympic Trials, Star Boat Class in 1992 (4th place), Can Am Olympic Classes Regatta, the former sailing program director at Community Boating, Inc., in Boston, Massachusetts. Bresnahan won the time trial and helped the team out. Ann Renzy, a junior sailor, has been out to try out for the major win, and helped the team greatly.

The team also competed in the Shoap Eliminations. Conn won the division with Zeigler steering, and with Marden and Bob Endenbach crewing for him. The elimination races were held at Courageous Sailing Center, CSC, in Boston in J-22s. On October 17 and 18, they will go on to the next round and the top two from there to go to Hawaiian. In singlehanded competition, Brian North-Cross, Marden, and Zeigler, qualified to race in the New England Singlehandeds. The top four will go to the Nationals.

There are many others that are helping the team out. Ann Renzy, who has crewed for two years, is steering and doing a good job anchoring the Women's Team. Endenbach is the captain of the JV team with seven other sophomore skippers. The varsity squad is Ulander, Zeigler, and Marden. Bresnahan feels that the team is coming along nicely and is looking forward to a winning season.

Athlete of the Week

Sailor BEN MARDEN is blessed with this week’s Athlete of the Week Award.

MARDEN won the B-division in the Hood Trophy race at Tufts last week. This was Conn's first-ever B-division win against Tufts.

The College Voice October 6, 1992 Page 16