Members of the Connecticut College community turned out in great numbers to march in support of sexual assault and rape survivors. Powerful personal revelations, chanting, and singing highlighted the event, bringing home its message.

Students express concern over the stability of Africana major

by Michael Dell'Angelo
News Editor

In response to students' concerns about the future and stability of Africana studies, an open forum was held at Unity House on Monday.

Connecticut College presently has a major in Africana studies which was approved at the end of last year. There is also a minor available in African studies. The history of African studies at Connecticut College was reviewed by John Burton, associate professor of anthropology and director of African Studies; Bruce Kimmse, professor of history and department chair; Marion Dore, professor of government; and Tyrone Ferndance, professor of economics.

In the spring of 1987, the minor in African studies was approved. The development of a major in African studies was then proposed. Out of this proposal grew the major, which was passed in May of this year.

Students expressed concern over the depth and focus of African studies, the college's commitment to it, and the handling of the hiring of a replacement for Vincent Thompson, professor of history, who is currently on sabbatical.

Sophomore Bahia Akerele arranged the meeting when students expressed concern over the failure to replace Thompson this semester. Thompson teaches four history courses essential to African studies.

Kimmse was repeatedly asked by participants to explain his attempt to seek out a replacement for Thompson and why no one has filled the position. Kimmse explained that he placed an advertisement in the magazine in which, according to Kimmse, is the most reputable publication in which to advertise for history teaching applicants. He went on to say that he sent letters to the dozens of every reputable graduate school program of African studies in the United States.

Kimmse's efforts yielded five applicants, three of whom were deemed suitable. Augustus Konne was chosen for this tenure track position, which possibly would have required him to teach three courses during the semester and would have paid $12,000, or $4,000 per course. Konne accepted the position in April but withdrew his acceptance in June. The other two applicants had already accepted positions at other institutions. Kimmse has reinstated the search, with applications due on October 15. Kimmse hopes new applicants can be interviewed and decided upon by the end of the semester so the courses of for can be listed in the spring catalog.

Students initially attacked the methods Kimmse employed to fill the position, charging they were undemocratic asking for the vote to be tabled, saying, "I believe it is essential that all our constituents are able to voice their opinions on major GTA proposals before we are asked to represent them by voting once." The point was raised that all students will vote on the budget through their dorms anyway, but Sarah Hardley, publisher of The College Voice, called for the budget to be tabled, saying, "I'm asking you to be a representative body tonight," she said. Hardley stressed the importance of Assembly holding contact sessions with their constituents before voting.

Marlow, along with Esther Potter, senator of Park, held a contact session, but only seven or eight people attended. Marlow expressed the belief that the people were not given enough time to coordinate well-publicized sessions. Wesley Simmons, presidential associate, noted that usually "very few people" attend such contact sessions.

In particular, questions remained on Assembly p. 11.

Investigation into alleged rape expands, holding off an arrest

by Rebecca Flynn
Editor in Chief

Expansion of the investigation into the rape has surfaced as the main reason why no arrest has yet been made in connection with the September 15 report of a rape on the Connecticut College campus.

According to Captain William Gavit of the New London Police Department, the investigation into the case has "expanded" and to make an arrest now would cut off the opportunity for the NLPD to look into any new developments.

"Generally, after the arrest you go on to the next case," said Gavit. "There's more work to be done here."

Although Gavit declined to comment on whether anyone new will be pressed charges against the accused, saying, "I'd rather not say so No Arrest p. 9.

Seeing red...

It's beginning to become a habit, a pattern, a refrain. The student activities budget comes out. The success of the New World Order.

Sincerely,
Marc Murray,
Class of 1996

"The College Voice should get another dime to see the logic of a student activities budget that does nothing to encourage fiscal responsibility, it not only benefits clubs which are in the black; it hurts the whole system.

This budget does this. It provides no incentive for clubs to fund-raise. It punishes organizations which spent their money wisely last year. It defies club autonomy, and it contradicts itself and the overall goals of the budget system.

This budget does more than this, though. The Finance Committee has presented a document that abolses organizations of deficit spending. If the dorms approve the proposed allocations, we will see approximately $6,000 expended to cover last year's overspending, including SGA's own $3,000 debt. The committee's incentive and compelling reason to put costs on the students' tab.

Lip service to fiscal responsibility will not do. Finance Committee's hard work and daunting tasks are not reasons enough to pass this budget. Promises to improve the system has been made with the passages of the last three budgets.

The problem is still here, and this budget makes it worse. Covering deficits is not a value that any club can afford to..."

People need to take a stand against sexual harassment

Events like the "Take Back the Night" march and rally often expose a raw nerve and create in the participants a sense of being overwhelmed by pain and suffering. It makes many of us angry, and we frequently deal with that anger in nonsupportive ways. Let's take this anger and channel it into protecting our community from acquaintance rape and other forms of sexual assault.

This is easier said than done. It will not be accomplished overnight. We will need to examine factors that put us at risk (e.g. sexist attitudes, abusive drinking) of being victims or perpetrators. We will inevitably need many of us to become active agents for change.

As an administration, we strongly condemn violence. As an educational institution, we acknowledge our responsibility to be proactive. We must teach sexual responsibility, promote communication skills, and address the values (e.g. sexist attitudes, abusive drinking) that put us at risk.

As a community, we must become active allies of survivors of sexual assault. We will need to connect them to the actual experiences of individuals on this campus, in our classrooms and in our residences.

Finally, the silence is broken.

A little over a year ago, Anita Hill testified in the Clarence Thomas confirmation hearings. She broke the silence about sexual harassment in the workplace and in so doing gave many others courage to speak about their own experiences. In breaking this silence, we recognize and accept a heightened sense of responsibility. There are many issues involved in the prevention of, intervention in, and reporting of assaults.

It is important that in our discussions and in our responses that we make the distinction between acquaintance (intimate) violence and stranger violence. In the former that by its very nature is more difficult to prevent, identify, and treat.

Monday evening, more than three hundred members of this community gathered shivering on Hawthorne Green to demonstrate our support for survivors and to demonstrate our intolerance of sexual assault.

We listened to survivors, women and men, recall the pain, suffering, loneliness, and isolation, that they experienced as a consequence of sexual assault. We also heard survivors speak of their courage and strength. Once again, the silence was broken. On behalf of the entire campus family.

Mixed views on Columbus Day

Columbus Day has come to an unprecedented head, and many historians agree that no one side is right or wrong. The issue is complex and worthy of more attention. "This Columbus Day, let us remember that the "discovery" of America was not an opportunity for everyone to rethink the story of the American, beginning with the arrival of the Natives 15,000 years ago up through today, when presently Native Americans as a group still live in extreme poverty.

The quincentennial of Columbus Day should not be ignored, whether one celebrates or laments the occasion. It is a significant time in our lives that we have a legitimate excuse to stop and think for a while about what America is, who are Americans, and how is the country better or worse off than when it was discovered—not by Columbus, but by the Native Americans so long ago.

This is a historical moment which the college should have used as a springboard for forums, discussions, and other awareness-raising programs throughout the year. Fortunately, La Unidad, and UMOC have been planning events which will occur this week in accordance with the holiday. Otherwise, this marks yet another example of how Connecticut College's current emphasis on "the future" is at the expense of the present and the past.

*October 12, 7 p.m. in Ernst: La Unidad presents Hans Koning, author of Columbus: His Enterprise to speak about the quincentennial.

October 12, 4 p.m. in PepsiCo Room, Unity House: Joanne Daley will show a presentation on establishing diversity in the early childhood classroom.

October 14, 8 p.m. in Hill 106: UMOC presents Askia Toure who will speak about the origins, implications, and contributions of the African diaspora.

College ornithologists are taking flight this year

by Greg Haines
The College Voice

The Connecticut College Ornithology club was created in the fall of 1985 and since then has organized monthly field trips to local areas of avian interest. Dr. Robert Askins, chair of the zoology department, is the club's faculty advisor and resident expert.

The club's next trip, scheduled for Sunday, October 25, is to an old favorite, the Trumon Pond National Wildlife Refuge in Rhode Island. This beautiful area allows new bird-watchers easy and close viewing, especially from a well-known peninsula that juts into a pond.

The Connecticut College Arbo-rem has been of great help to the study of neotropical migrant birds. The Connecticut College Arboretum is a national organization of colleges and universities that provides resources for the study of neotropical migrant birds.

Ornithology club members also volunteered at the First Meeting of the Association of Field Ornithologists and the American Birding Association. This event was held at Connecticut College from October 2 through October 4. The Connecticut College Ornithology club was created in the fall of 1985 and since then has organized monthly field trips to local areas of avian interest.

Saturday morning seven guided field trips to different local areas were offered. Eleven concurrent workshops focusing on techniques were also held on Saturday for small groups of about twenty people in the afternoon and again in the evening. The highlights on Sunday was the Neotropical Migrants Symposium. Workshops aimed to increase awareness and understanding of the importance of neotropical migration. The workshop topics included the role of tropical rainforests in the life of migrating birds, which require continuous tracts of forest to ensure breeding success of neotropical migrant birds.

The Connecticut College Arboretum has been of great help to the study of neotropical migrant activity since the 1990s. Ted Somers, one of the few people to study migrant bird stop-over habitats, was an important figure in the symposium. He noted that knowledge about stop-over areas has become increasingly important, as habitat conversion threatens to turn stop-over areas into a limited resource. The workshop participants discussed the importance of these areas for the birds that need rest and food during their exhausting migrations.

Dear alumni and friends,

John Kricher explained the role of tropical rainforests in the life of migrating birds, which require continuous tracts of forest to ensure breeding success of neotropical migrant birds. The workshop participants discussed the importance of these areas for the birds that need rest and food during their exhausting migrations.

CASE-J mural uses art as an effective tool for change

"Hands-On Change," is a photoprint and acrylic gesso mural on plywood created by participants of the tropical rainforest symposium. The mural consists of multicolored hand prints and signatures left by participants of the teach-in. The handprints are by students, faculty, administrators, alumni and visitors to the college. The concept was devised by Anadri Chisolm, 92, Peter Leiboff, professor of art, was the consultant to CASE-J on the mural. The mural is on display in Shain Library.

United We Must Stand

"People Unite, Take Back the Night!"

by Jesse Roberts
Associate Features Editor

The cheers resounded louder and louder; the voices of two or three hundred combined, as the banners were held high, with pride and with meaning. The signs wavered in the air as the mass marched onward.

I was just one person within this great mass; one of hundreds of voices combined, cheering as one, marching as one, standing together as one. The represented the diversity of cultures, creeds, races, and gender. But our voices were

As the first song ended, applause came from the crowd, and the Schwiffs began their second song. When this impromptu song again finished, the Schwiffs dispersed. A solitary figure, Stephanie Ray, walked to the front of the march, sat on the circular iron fence in front of Stain.

The banners were raised, the signs held high and the voices started to chant, saying "Women unite, take back the night." However, that chant only lasted for a minute or so as a male voice yelled out "People united..." because a large number of men were also present.

One participant, Laura Brunton commented, "It's great that a lot of men are turning out for this event. It shows that even though there's a great deal of discrimination on this campus, men and women can work together." Almost instantly after this change in this chant, the protest started to yell again, the slogan altered to fit the diversity of the crowd. People unite, take back the night.

Other cheers filled the quiet night. "MY BODY, MY MIND, ANY PLACE, ANY TIME!" and "No more shame!" The march proceeded around the Plex, behind Croc, the "darkness and most frightening," according to some marchers. From there it moved behind Knowlton, Harkness, Fresiano, and finally onto Harkness green.

A small blue tent was set up on the green, with speakers and microphones. Here, the action continued.

Throughout the night, many speakers came forward to tell about their experiences of sexual assault. The crowd listened in a silent awe.

A variety of stories were exchanged, some based on date rape, some on incest, some on "stranger" rape. Many females spoke of date rape. "I thought I loved him, and that he loved me..." one female student said.

Another told of his meeting with an older female while on vacation.

The cheers rose louder and louder: the voices of two or three hundred people combined, saying "Women unite, take back the night." There was sexual assault, but there was also action. One male student spoke of his experience: "I had been walking around a corner one day, and he attacked, beaten severely, and then raped. It's still hurts with me around those corners, but it's getting better.

I was the term survivor, because we are not victims, we are survivors," stated one student. Many people, both male and female, had the courage to come out in force, show their anger, and stand up for in front of hundreds, under glaring lights, and speak out. They told their story, and how they had been dealing with the incident.

While these students spoke, candles were passed out among the crowd and lit. "A candle of hope, I assume," commented one bystander. Almost every student in this crowd of hundreds held a candle, and their flames burned "She was upset, and I was consoling her. I had my arm around her..." Before I knew it, she had kissed me and things were crazy. When we were in bed, I told her I didn't want to, but she made me feel guilty. "You're going to dump me now?" She pressed me into it. So I did it with her. When my father found out, he treated me like it was my fault. "I was the man," he said. I never wanted it to happen." Tears started to roll down his checks as he recalled this painful memory.

Two or three spoke regarding incest, and sexual assault by family. One student was sexually assaulted by her grandfather, and commented on the difficulty of having to tell her mother of the event. "How do you tell your mother something like this. How can you just stab her in the heart like that?"

One male student spoke of a song he had sung that night. "They were singing, "I had been sexually assaulted or raped. Two men went up on the stage and admitted to these hundreds below that they were rapists. In the past they had each raped someone and now they realized the extremity and wrongness of their actions. They were each plagued by their actions of the past. When they finished speaking, the crowd gave its support to them, through cheers and

Butterys featured to perform on tuba and bassoon in faculty recital

by Luke Brown A E E Editor

Connecticut College has always had a strong commitment to the performing arts. On October 14, students and guests will have the chance to see that commitment personified in two individuals.

On Tuesday evening, at 8 p.m. in DuBois Hall, adjunct professors of music Gary Gun and Judy Butterys will perform a tuba and bassoon recital. The Butterys will perform several musical pieces, including Stabat Mater, Marcha Viola, and Bizet. The Butterys will also perform with the United States Coast Guard Band (principal tuba) and holds the distinction of being the first tuba soloist to appear in the band's "Tonnight Show," with Johnny Carson.

Judy Butterys has had a noteworthy musical career as well. She is a graduate of Calvin College, where she received a bachelor's degree, and Michigan State University, where she was granted a masters of music degree.

She has held the position of co-director of the Coast Guard band, and has played with the Battle Creek, Lansing, and Grand Rapids chamber orchestras in Michigan. She is currently appearing with the Wallfolding Symphony.

The tickets for the performance are $3 (general admission) and $1 (students and senior citizens). For more information, call 539-ARTS.

inadequate. Many of the attacks, leveled on him were buffeted with statements claiming that this issue was not personal. Frustration was evident on both sides. Dorothy James, provost and dean of the faculty, spoke out as the discussion became tense, saying, “You didn’t give me a chance to answer you. You are here to find solutions and... I hear frustration.”

The frustration that James spoke of was due largely to the withdrawal of Thompson’s replacement.

‘[The] faculty did all they could and it really was a very unfortunate situation.”

Culbertson receives promotion

by Michael DeAngelo

A special meeting of the College Relations, Alumni Association and Development staffs was held on Wednesday, October 7 to announce the promotion of Steven Culbertson to the position of special assistant to the president for principal gifts. Culbertson, who has been the vice president of development and college relations since March of 1990, will now aid the college in the largest and most ambitious fund raising campaign in the college’s history.

The college is attempting to raise the endowment to over $100 million. That campaign can not be begin before October 26. To get at least $50 million in hand, which will require it to meet the challenge of raising principal, or leadership, gifts, as quickly as possible.

The six and seven figure gifts that fall under the headings principal and leadership will become the essential foundation of the campaign.

We decided that a new position would have to be created to suit all prudential to obtaining these gifts. Over the summer applications for the position were reviewed by Clare Guidianni, president of the college, and in September of this year the college hired a search firm to assist in the process.

According to Dailines, Guidianni said, “After a number of interviews, I became convinced that the best way to proceed to build the track fund would be to ask Steve Culbertson to undertake this critically important work, concentrating his full attention on raising major gifts with the ability to go out and obtain the responsibilities as vice president for Development and College Relations.”

Guidianni added that after these years with Connecticut he hopes he can return to the president, “to know our donors and have worked with them. As a result we’ll have no time in moving forward with the strategies and solutions.”

Rogers promoted to associate librarian for special collections

by Michael DeAngelo

News Editor

Brian Rogers, after 18 years as librarian of Charles E. Shain Library, will become associate librarian for special collections. Rogers new position will begin at the end of the academic year.

In a statement made to The New London, Dorothy James, provost and dean of the faculty said, "Brian Rogers has helped build a premiere library for a liberal arts college, which includes bringing it Special Collections librarian, which will become associated with the new position at the end of the academic year."

Seventy percent of the class of '96 turns out to vote

by Emily Strasser
The College Voice

The class of '96 elected six of eight president and eight first Executive Board last Tuesday and Wednesday. There was a remarkable seventy percent turnout, with 307 students out of 444 casting ballots. Running unopposed for the office of class Student Activity Coordinators were Vinny Farrell and Matt Malone. At Speech Night, they amused the crowd with a speech that varied slightly from the norm. The theme to their campaign was a "way to amend mistakes in a productive way." Katzenberg promised not to make "any judgments without hearing the whole story," and declared that "she felt it was J-Board's responsibility not just to punish, but also to educate.

Easton said, "I'm really excited because I think the Honor Code is really important to our freedom here at Conn, and I'm really glad I'm going to be able to help uphold it." Three students, Danny Horwood, Ryan Porier, and Greg Poole all competed for the office of Vice-President.

All three men stated the importance of the job of Vice President to help with events and to balance the budget for the class of '96. With 106 votes, Greg Poole won the election. He cited his creativity and his "love for money" as two reasons why he would do a good job if elected. Poole expressed excitement about his new position, commenting, "Hopefully I will work well with the Executive Board and do the best job that I can."

For the office of class president, six students were on the ballot. Ben Kaplan, Matt Latham, Melissa McCann, Aaron Oberman, Jesse Roberts, and Brian Scna all vied for the position.

Many candidates stated class unity and identity as goals for the year. Candidates at Speech Night also offered ideas about events that could be held, and ways to pull the class together. The votes were widely distributed among the six candidates, but in the end Melissa McCann came away with 66 votes and the victory. Her closing comment as Speech Night was, "For those of you interested in literature, I'm a Leo, and Leo loves born leaders!"

McCann said she wants to be known as a president with a sense of humor, and believes she can help make the work of the Executive Board serious but fun. She said she had "no problem voicing concerns and asking questions for the benefit of our class." The six new members of the first Executive Board of the class of 1996 all voiced their happiness at having been elected, and expressed their willingness to discuss and work hard on any class issues.
Policy changes result in some housekeepers' discontent

Trainer hired to revamp the efficiency of custodial staff

by Sarah Ma
The College Voice

Recently, concern policy changes have been instituted for dormitory housekeepers. These changes have met with some resistance from housekeepers who believe such changes are inappropriate and do not address their real problems. These changes were in part the result of a study done at the request of the college in 1989 by Service, Engineering Associates. SEA concluded that Conn College had an adequate staff, but that work was not getting done efficiently. SEA recommended new training, change in assignments, proper supervision and balance of effort among staff.

Following SEA's suggestions, James Anderson, custodial supervisor, has implemented changes in workload through team projects and assignments.

For example, the "de facto" policy of assigning women to bathroom work and men more physically demanding work such as lifting furniture has now become an official policy. According to Anderson, this is due in part to feedback from students who expressed preference for having women rather than men clean the bathrooms. A factor contributing to the implementation of the policy of having men be responsible for heavy "physical work" is the strength needed to lift furniture in excess of 50 pounds on a consistent basis. Anderson went on to add that each year, approximately 1000 pieces of furniture are moved in and out of dormitories. In some instances, he said, outside help has been employed.

When asked about his staff's response to these and other changes in the housekeeping department, Anderson admitted that there are some people opposed to such changes. He said the biggest complaint has been the increased workload, but added, "standards of cleanliness are rising," and he "will not reduce standards."

When asked about his relationship with the housekeepers, Anderson responded, "I have a fairly good relationship with the staff." He added that in this transitional period, he is "trying to be as fair as possible."

From the housekeepers' perspective, all of whom asked that their names be kept confidential, the real conflict is with the increased workload and the unwillingness of the college to hire more housekeepers. Reiterating the increased workload, the housekeepers cite examples of Lighthall and Wright, where work previously done in eight hours is now crammed into four. Repeatedly, housekeepers commented that they are being "文化艺术 too thin" and that "work is not being done." Housekeepers see the unwillingness to hire more housekeepers as the biggest problem. They expressed indignation that the college decided to hire a trainer for the housekeepers. Some "just don't see the point" of hiring someone to train them to do the work that they have been doing for years. Others feel that hiring a trainer is not the most practical approach. They believe that the primary need is for the college to reduce the workload, so that housekeepers have adequate time in which to complete all work.

The shortage of manpower has resulted in bathrooms being cleared infrequently, or, as in the case in Wright, in an on-call basis. According to Todd Whitten, housekeeper of Wright, the last time the bathrooms in Wright were cleaned was on Oct. 1, after he called Anderson. As for the rest of the dorm, there is only "minimum upkeep."

Responding to the situation of hiring a trainer for the housekeepers, Whitten said, "I think it is stupid and I think that it is unnecessary."

He went on to add that since we are "untrained for housekeeping," it is a "waste of resources." Having dealt with this lack of manpower since the time of the students arrival, Whitten commented, "I am concerned and disturbed by the situation.

"She was told to keep her mouth shut--not to be telling the students what's going on in the department."

-- A Housekeeper

No arrest related to alleged rape will be made until investigation is complete

One concern raised was that Housekeepers would no longer be allowed to take cans placed in dormitory recycling bins to return themselves. This concern later proved not to be an issue, as that policy is still in effect.

According to Gavitt, the best way to investigate a case is by covering all the bases. "It's far better to proceed cautiously, to do all the i's and cross all the t's," he said.

Assembly debates budget allocations

"It's the message that's sent (by covering debts) regardless of budget realities."

Peter said the message sent is, "You can do everything right, but you won't be helped."

Robin Swimmer, SGA vice president and chair of the Finance Committee, said she was pleased with the fairness of this year's budget, and covering clubs debts was done because of the clubs operational monetary needs.

"I think the Finance Committee covered debts so that clubs could function in the best way they could," said Swimmer.

Neelu Mulchandani, member of the Finance Committee, stated, "every budget was looked at individually."

Colleen Shanley, SGA president, said she realized last year's deficit was wrong and internally cut back the budget herself in the amount of the deficit.

Chacon suggested that the Finance Committee does not want to ruin clubs by so severely punishing them that their existences are threatened. It was agreed that some sort of consensus on fiscal responsibility should be reached, but Mark Hofmann, coordinator of student activities and advisor to the Finance Committee, pointed out, "it's impossible to have complete consistency."

One problem was discussed in the handling of savings accounts for clubs, a procedure started last year. As Swimmer said, the legislation allows clubs which fundraised more than had been projected to put the excess into a savings account which cannot be recorded in the budget, and all though she believes that clubs were not allocated so much money, it's got to be spelled out," said Peter.

At any rate, Finance Committee, slated, "Definitely for next year it's come from another's. Strong opposition to the budget came from The College Voice, represented by Huntley. The voice was denied its re requests for one-time expenses such as an Apple Portrait Monitor because money allocated last year was not used for these expenses. Huntley said that in the course of a year, clubs must be granted autonomy to evaluate goals and spending options. "It's our primary goal to produce a newspaper," she said.

When the roll call vote was taken, only one senator, "Spicer, voted against the budget. Every member from campus was voting on the budget shortly after fall break."

If the majority does not approve the budget, it will be sent back to the Finance Committee for re-evaluation.

Colorado band Samples comes to New Britain

Band espouses musical freedom and integrity

by Luke Brennan
A&E Editor

Five years ago, the University of Colorado at Boulder produced one of the most innovative and refreshing bands to hit the scene in a long time. They call themselves The Samples and on October 22 at 11 p.m., Connecticut College students will get the chance to see them perform at The Sting in New Britain, Connecticut.

This is an opportunity no student should pass up. Since releasing their first album several years ago, The Samples have proven themselves to be excellent musicians, combining rock, folk, and reggae in one beautifully executed package. The band, comprised of lead guitarist and vocalist Stan Kelly, percussionist Jeep MacNichol, bassist/vocalist Andy Sheldon and keyboard player Al Laughlin, have two hit albums on the market: No Room and Underwater People. To date, these two albums have sold a combined 100,000 copies.

The Samples are well on their way to becoming one of the most commercially successful bands to hit the scene in a long time. They are currently enjoying another big hit, "Did You Ever Look So Nice," and the songs "When It's Raining," "I'm Alright," and "Kiss Me Kate" are popular hits in the music industry. The Samples have sold over a million copies of their first album, and the second album, "Underwater People," has sold over 400,000 copies. The band is currently touring in support of their second album.

The Samples are a true example of the spirit of musical freedom and integrity that is so important to the band's success. They are known for their self-deprecating, tongue-in-cheek attitude and their music is an equal mix of humor and seriousness. The Samples are a band that is both popular and respected, and they are sure to be a hit at The Sting in New Britain.

Tickets are $10 at the door and a very reasonable $8 in advance (they're available at Strawberries). The tickets will go fast, so get yours now.

Play focuses on the dark side of human nature

The Theater department began its "Obsession" series with Tennessee Williams' play, Suddenly Last Summer.

By James Santangelo
Assistant A&E Editor

If you have any interest in psychology whatsoever, you should never pass up an opportunity to see a Tennessee Williams play. Williams took the reader on a tour of the disintegration of man as an individual in a world not suited for him.

The play began at 8:00 pm. with the sound of Summer Williams' play Suddenly Last Summer. Catherine, the character is never mentioned during the performance. Sebastian Venable, dead for almost a year before the play begins, is actually the main focus. Our first glimpse of Sebastian is through the eyes of his mother. She is told that Sebastian was a poet who would write poems during the summer, after nine months of preparation. When asked what sort of private life Sebastian had, Venable replied with a monologue about "a poet's life in his work, his work is his life," followed by a graphic explanation of her relationship with him. We find that Violette and Sebastian were far closer than the usual mother and son. "We weren't known as Sebastian and his mother," Violet began, "but Sebastian and Violet. Violet was one of the major players of the same person, neither one whole without the other."

The audience also discovered that Violet believed his death was caused by Sebastian's taking Catherine, and not Violet on vacation with him the previous summer. The next glimpse of Sebastian is through the eyes of Catherine, the last person to see him alive, and the only one who knows the mysterious circumstances surrounding his death. Catherine insisted on relating these circumstances to everyone, and Violet wished to silence her forever.

"It is the only way to free Catherine's mind by finding out what happened on the day of Sebastian's death," Dr. Cukrowicz placed Catherine in a state of hypnosis.

While under hypnosis Catherine0s... (several pages missing)....

"...while under hypnosis Catherine spelled the name of Sebastian first used by the poet and then Catherine to procure the sexual services of young men around the city before Sebastian's death, "looking at himself as a sacrifice to some... God." And he is ultimately sacrificed and cannibalized by the young men he knew on vacation last summer.

Unfortunately, this version of the play left large gaps in the storyline. For example, nowhere in the play is it explained exactly why Sebastian wanted attention from young men. It was obvious at times that Sebastian were just an exhibitionist, but by the time Eben Henaday ushered the first line, the audience realized that, not only is Sebastian dead, but the play as well. As people left the performance on Friday evening, they must have thought that they had fallen asleep and missed something that might connect anything that went on.

On the whole, the cast of Suddenly Last Summer did a very impressive job, with Misha Dichter, Libby Golumbeck's, and Heasley's strong portrayals. Asha Fitchard, Sue Case, Bronwen Weiss, and Kathleen Coeves gave excellent performances as well. Their hard work and effort were quite evident in the performance and everyone involved (in the acting and stage crew department, at least) deserves applause.

In the New London area, although the local arts community may not be as large in comparison to other cities, there are many opportunities for the arts. For example, New London has a symphony orchestra, the Eastern Connecticut Symphony Orchestra, and the Garde Arts Center.

On September 24, the Eastern Connecticut Symphony Orchestra will kick off its 1992-1993 concert season with a special event at the Garde Arts Center. The " anchored Two Medium One-Topping Pizzas $10.99

New alignment helps field hockey break losing streak

Neeses stands out in goal during two-game road swing

by Matt Borstel
The College Voice

It appeared to be just another chartered bus on another gray incense on another Wednesday afternoon. But this particular vehicle was carrying a dedicated group of people as it screeched around rest stops and green road signs on its way to Hartford. It contained the Corn College field hockey team. This team, losers of two games in a row, was determined not to make it four.

This was, as the namesake recommended for New London, retracted its route later that afternoon down Route 1-91 to I-95. Unfortunately, a carried steam whose losing streak was still intact, a result of their 5-0 loss to Trinity. Goalie Kristin Neebes had made an amazing twenty-three saves, but there had been an additional five shots that she had not been able to stop.

"Neebes had an excellent game," said captain Suzanne Walker.

By comparison, Conn had only been able to fire eight shots on Ashley Graves and Aice Wayman.
Grace Craig had opened the scoring off an assist from Ashley Farr; 9-36 into the game, and Kimmy Jones and Lindsay
Davison had added first half goals which put the Camels behind 5-0 at intermission. Rachel Rice had then scored a pair of goals early in the second half to put the game out of reach.

The players had not achieved their goal, but as they passed Middletown, a sense of determination ran through them.
Middletown is the home of Westney, the sight of Saturday's game and another chance to break the 2001-02 losing streak.

A bus similar to the one on Wednesday was carrying the Camels on Saturday morning.
After the hard loss in Hartford, they were even more determined to end the hideous streak. When the bus rolled to a stop at Western University, the team was ready.
They had been rejuvenated by this time. A new 3-3-1 alignment and a renewed team efforts propelled the Camels to a 2-1 triumph.

"The formation really helped with our connection in the midfield," said Walker.

Conn grabbed the lead on a goal by Nikki Hennessy from Louise Brooks with twelve minutes left in the first half. This lead was short-lived; the Camels' Beth Shilpeki waited only two minutes before scoring the tie on the game at one.

However, the Camels were not to be denied this afternoon. Sarah Ball scored on a penalty stroke after the new alignment, allowing only sixteen Cardinal shots, which she made a lot of great saves," said

Schmoozing With Dob and Pops:

"You won't have Papadopoulos to kick around anymore"

by Bobby Gitton
Sports Editor
and David Pops
The College Voice

Pops' Retirement Announcement

In a move that shocked the Western world, Schmoozing's own David Papadopoulos held a press conference last week announcing his retirement from collegiate basketball in which he stated, "I will neither seek nor accept my school's nomination for a spot on this year's basketball team."

Papadopoulos cited a number of factors which pushed him towards retirement, including the Vietnam conflict and "a basic lack of any applicable basketball skills."

Papadopoulos concluded his statements with these timeless words: "You won't have Papadopoulos to kick around anymore. I will play no more forever."

When asked about his feelings on Papadopoulos's top position, head coach Martin Schroepscher replied, "Who's that?"

An obviously confused Schroepscher went on to state that, "I've never heard that name before in my life."

A concrete replica of the Camels' hockey jerseys, on which Papadopoulos so vainly manned these past three years will be joyously hoisted to the A.C. rafters before the first home game this winter, complete with an imprint of Papadopoulos' rear end rendered by a local artist.

IM Football

Dob and Pops hate to do it, but there is one criticism that must be directed at this year's flag football rules. The trick play (now legal) allows the receivers to pretend like he's standing on the sidelines before the snap, then sprinting on field toward the end zone for a touchdown pass is getting ridiculous and must be outlawed for next season. The EM Airlines receivers do this successfully upwards of five times last week. Defense is determined not sufficiently engaged in the tactic of Division III male track the mating and migratory patterns of Division III male

Miscellaneous

Schmoozing received a lot of criticism for deeming Redskin QB Kip Ryipon "overrated" last year. However, in all ways, we were right on the money. Ryipon got a big career contract prior to this season and he's not even earning a nickel of it right now. His two INT's and scant

Women's tennis team sweeps Bates to boost record to 8–3

Camels beginning to prepare for New England Championships

by Josh Levison The College Voice

The women's tennis team has been having a terrific season with an 8-3 record. With a couple of matches left, the team is concentrating on finishing strong and playing well in the championship tournament.

The team has played many matches in the past few weeks. A scheduled match against Amherst was cancelled because of rain, and could not be rescheduled. The team then faced Bryant with an 8-1 victory, Wheaton with a 7-2 win, Clark, also with a 7-2 win, and Salve Regina with a 9-0 sweep. At the meet the team had a four game winning streak.

Their next match was a big one against Brandeis, who in the past has finished as high as third in New England. The team had a big win, "We defeated them 6-3," said Coach Sheryl Yeary.

"Our singles play has been very consistent," said Yeary. "Christina has greatly improved from last year, and has an outstanding record," said Yeary.

"With six games remaining, as the Camel midfielders effectively dispersed the ball, Conn's defense, led by Pete Asplund at the 21:10 mark. Then, as the ball was on net. Except for a brief lapse late in the second half, ensuring a winning season for the eighth consecutive year.

They were ranked third in New England, and twenty-first nationally as the Boston Globe poll released before last week's games. The new poll comes out on Tuesday, and returns home to take on Albertus Magnus on October 23 through the 25, according to the New England Tournament.

On October 23 through the 25, the team will travel to Amherst for the New England Tournament. About 25-30 matches will be played, all from NESCAC. It will be a great opportunity for the team to face some good competition.

Women's volleyball squad wins twelfth straight match

By Julie Granot
Associate Sports Editor

With two wins last Saturday, against St. Joseph's and Trinity, the women's volleyball team kept their 12 match winning streak alive and moved their record to 15-1.

In their first match, Conn destroyed their opponent, St. Josephs, with a two game sweep 15-12, 15-9. However, in the second match the Camels struggled a bit, as Trinity forced them to a three game match, before Conn defeated the Bantams 15-6, 15-12, 15-10.

Sophomore Martha Vivian attributed the loss of the second game to a poor passing and added, "Our coverage of our blocks on offense just wasn't there, but in the third game we really clicked and played much better."

Co-captain Jen Kenney helped lead the team to victory with eleven serves in the final game. Freshman Megan Hanselman also performed well as an outside hitter, instead of her usual position as a setter. Hanselman was moved out of to replace senior Cindy Morris, who is currently injured. Sophomore Meghan Cady played setter.

Right now, injuries are a problem for the spikes, according to Vivian, and Morris is one of four players suffering from injury. "We only have nine people on our team," Vivian said, "and with all of those injuries we only have one sub, and [Bonnie Silberstein] is our only middle hitter."

Despite the injuries, with their 15-1 record the Camels continue to set as school record at a whopping .630. HACKL has turned in four shutout performances this year including a doozy this past Saturday against Wesleyan, which save essentially won the game for the Camels.

The men's soccer team complete a sweep of its four game home stand by recording back-to-back shutouts over Clark and Wesleyan by identical 2-0 scores.

Last Saturday's victory over Wesleyan snapped Conn's six game losing streak to the Cardinals, and marked only the third victory for Conn in the sixteen year history of the series.

In what has become somewhat of a trend thus far in the season, the Camels came out sluggish in the first half. Only a phenomenal performance by goalie Matt Hackl prevented Wesleyan from scoring, as the Cardinal's aggressive, highly skilled players were able to win virtually every free ball and amass a flurry of shots on net. Despite being credited with only five saves, in the first half alone Hackl stopped three breakaways, two free kicks from just outside the penalty box, and numerous corner kicks, including one series where he stopped four of them in succession. "I felt good out there," said Hackl. "I felt like I could have stopped any shot that was taken."

The flow of the game reversed in the second half however, as the Conn offense constantly pressured Cardinal goalie David Barret. Although the Camels had a plethora of scoring opportunities, including several breakaways, their two goals both resulted from Wesleyan miscues.

Senior Tim Cheney took credit for the first goal, firing a shot from thirty yards out that glanced off the back of the Wesleyan defender's foot, and trickled past a shocked Barret into the goal. The goal provided Cheney with his twenty first and twenty second points of the season, moving him past Kevin Sayward into the fifth position on the Conn points in a career list with fifty nine points.

In a situation identical to Cheney's, Nihako Mokonane fired a hard shot at the Cardinal's goal, and, in an unexplainable move, a Wesleyan defender headed the ball past a now mortified Barret.

"It was amazing. It feels incredible. Everybody played their hearts out. We kept our cool, and in the second half we came out and did what we had to do," said Mokonane about snapping the losing streak. "If we see them in the playoffs they have to respect our ability as a team—both offensively and defensively."

Conn provided a clinic in ball control soccer in last Tuesday's game against Clark. The Camels out-shot the Cougars by 25-4.

Women's soccer wins another overtime nail-biter at home

Hardness Green has provided an enjoyable setting for the women's soccer team, as this week the Camels improved to a successful 4-0 record at home. Three of their four victories have come in OT.

Victories came this week against both Curry College, by a 2-0 shutout, and rival Wesleyan University, with an overtime score of 3-2.

As the soccer team crossed the halfway point in the season, the team has regained a positive record of 4-3-1.

Give credit where it is due: the women's soccer team was able to once again come through at home; and its amazing tenacity and aggressiveness around the ball. Conn showed this past week that they were not going to wait for the other team to dictate the flow of the game. They took the initiative to win the ball at all costs in order to push the opponent back on their heels.

The mid-field play has noticeably improved. The half-backs and mid-backs are more effectively feeding the ball to the forwards, and thus, presenting, overall, a much more potent offensive force.

As expected, the freshmen ball-players have blended extremely well into the pressure of college play. During the game against Wesleyan, first year students Tara Sorensen and Jennifer Eisenberg contributed significantly to the Camels' victory, each notching a goal in regulation time.

In overtime, veteran leadership came to the forefront, as Courtney Skelly netted her second OT game winning goal of the season.

What can we expect from the Camels in the second half of the season? Simply put, they have their work cut out for them.

Three of the five opponents they will be facing shutout Conn last year, including their next opponent Eastern Connecticut.

The goal to the Conn's success remains scoring. If the Camels improve their offense over their recent offensive output, the results may continue to be as positive as they have been in the past couple of games.

Athlete of the Week

Unbeatable goalie MATT HACKL runs away with this week's Athlete of the Week Award. HACKL's goals-against-average is on pace to set a school record at a whopping 0.63. HACKL has turned in four shutout performances this year including a doozy this past Saturday against Wesleyan, which save essentially won the game for the Camels.
