Sophomore class and note raise ethical questions

Last Wednesday's SGA budget vote became a forum for many concerns about the behavior and decisions of this year's finance committee.

In particular, the sophomore class took issue with the actions of the Finance Committee specifically in regard to an error of the Finance Committee regarding an issue.

In particular, the sophomore class took issue with the actions of the Finance Committee specifically in regard to an error of the Finance Committee regarding an issue.

The committee realizes that the same concern was at that time the SGA president, spoke out against the committee and was told the assembly and said she had problems with the process. People have told me I should let things slide... but a process like this should be perfect as it can and I don't think it is," said Meyers.

"We were co-opted by the Finance Committee. We were spoken to by two members (Alex Cote and Meghan Changello) of the committee and were told they had come to consensus that it was mistake (to cut the $518)."

APRC expresses concern with the proposed changes to Cro bar

BY JENNY BARRON
News Editor

The Oasis/Bar Task Force has narrowed the prospective renovations to the bar area down to two. The possibilities that remain include moving the bar upstairs to the Old Coffee Ground space, (now called the Cro's Nest), and expanding the bar in its current location.

The Alcohol Policy Recommendations Committee has expressed concern with the possibility of moving the bar upstairs to the Cro's Nest. In a letter to the members of the Oasis/Bar Task Force, the Committee outlined its reasoning for concern.

The APRC holds that the Cro's Nest is a unique place to host small events such as a capella concerts, comedy shows, and performances by small bands; moving the bar to this location would keep two-thirds of the campus community from using the space.

Jewish organization gets national affiliation

BY JENNY BARRON

In order to better serve Connecticut College's Jewish community, the campus Jewish organization, formerly Chavurah, has become affiliated with the National Hillel Organization, said sophomore and group chairman Ian Shallow.

"It's a really nice resource that we can contact anytime we need help," said Shallow. He added that the group had felt isolated from the national Jewish community and decided to join Hillel out of "instinct."

According to the new constitution, still to be approved by the SCA constitution committee, the Hillel board consists of at least three members: a treasurer, a secretary and a chaplain.

"All of us felt more comfortable if we had a national organization supporting us," said Shallow, who chairs the board. He added that the school has been trying to increase the Jewish population and that it was a matter of when the switch to Hillel would be made.

As a part of the national organization, Connecticut College Hillel will be able to take part in conventions and educational events throughout the year.
Budget Controversy

I think that during the meeting the committee members pretty much expressed that point," said Meyers.

Josh Fasano, vice president of the sophomore class, said the mistake could have been corrected before the budget was presented to SGA. He said that the committee seemed more interested in not admitting their mistake.

"When I asked Alex[Cote] why nothing could be done, he said it basically came down to cost. "He told our president that the Assembly, going to lie, lie all the way," Meyers noted that Carolyn Jesson is vice president of the sophomore class, said it was an error and that they wanted more money to be in their budget.

Despite having told the Executive Board that the possibility of seeking club improvement had to be kept confidential, he informed the class council of that possibility.

"They told us we were up late, we had to cut $13,000 quickly, it was a long month, we just cut the wrong thing" and basically said do you want to hold up the process," explained Meyers.

Meyers indicated that their low allocation of $1600 was unacceptable and that seven years ago their class received $2200. "I think the cost of living must go up," said Meyers.

According to Meyers the sophomore class executive board had two meetings with Cote. He came to speak at class council and in a private meeting with executive board of the class. "He told our president that going to club improvement had to be kept confidential," said Meyers.

Meyers noted that Carolyn Holliday asked Cote to speak to class council. He informed the council that the committee had to cut $13,000 in 12 hours. Cote said it was an error and that they wanted more money to be in their budget.

"I believe that a passed note should be made public," said Ryan Eschauzier, junior class president. He requested it be printed, that it was not contacted for his remarks, but called The College Voice. "I am intensely offended that any individual would take a personal note and show it to anyone else, let alone the campus newspaper. I am just as of- 10-23-95 falsified that on our campus something so obviously off-handed would be printed and considered newsworthy," said Shedd.

LeVan felt that this note spoke to the sentiment of some members of the Executive Board. "I take the Honor Code seriously as do many students at this school and I believe that a chair of Finance Committee saying that he would circumventing the Honor Code and saying the next time it would be better to lie is indicative of the attitude of a few members of executive board," said Shedd. When Meyers saw a copy of the note she said that she felt shocked.

"At a time when Assembly should have been happy to have so many students there to speak out, they had to get their com- ments into disrepect and utter disregard for their respon- sibility as executive board members," said Meyers.

LeVan agreed with the idea that the Assembly does not jibe with the views of the most powerful members of Assembly," said LeVan.

LeVan also stated that there is manipulation of the speaking list. "A lot of manipulation and irresponsibility cannot be seen from an outsiders point of view," said LeVan.

"People don't seem to know that the Parliamentarian skips people on the speaking list when instructed to do so by the Presi- dent if the feels that person should not be speaking at that point in discussion," she added.

SGA President, Shedd, denied allegations that he allows manipula- tion of the speaking list. "I don't know where she is coming from... maybe she misun- derstood requests by members of executive board to speak sooner but I clearly refused," said Shedd.

However, members of Assembly have reported that they sus- spect that this is a practice that goes far back as the discussion of the formation of the current fi- nance process in September.

"I felt compelled to bring this forward because from all that I have seen as a member of this Assembly, I cannot in good con- science continue to allow unethical behaviors to go on behind closed doors," said LeVan.

"The exception of their rules and power violates the Honor Code and as a representative of the most powerful government in a model of a civil society, I should not stand," said LeVan.
Conn receives grant to renovate Hale Laboratory

BY KRISTIN HELL

The Hale Laboratory is currently undergoing sweeping renovations which will bring the building “up to modern code,” according to Bruce Brandolini, chair of the chemistry department. The project began a few weeks ago with the completion date goal set for September 1996. The renovations will primarily affect the Chemistry department majors and facilities. The new and improved Hale Laboratory will also contribute to Conn’s growing academic reputation in the sciences.

Once the renovations are completed, Hale will include upgraded research and teaching labs used primarily for science faculty research and advanced laboratories such as Biochemistry and Physical Chemistry. Meanwhile, the renovations are being carried out in a phase system designed to create as little disturbance as possible for students and professors alike. For example, the final phase of renovations will focus on teaching areas and, therefore, will be completed during the summer of 1996.

The building will also be handicapped accessible. At the moment, the first floor is the only handicapped accessible section of the building. An entrance to the lower level of the building will be created and an elevator will be added to facilitate handicapped access to upper levels. As part of the initiative to create a completely handicapped accessible building, new bathrooms will be included in the renovations as well as modified lab space.

How is Conn funding these changes? The National Science Foundation approved a grant of $600,000 in 1993 which was specifically allocated for the upgrading of research and science facilities. Because it is a “matching grant,” Conn holds up its end of the bargain by matching it with $600,000 of its own money. The total cost of the project is estimated to come between $1.7 million and $1.8 million.

It is no coincidence that the Hale Laboratory renovations follow the completion of the Olin Science Center. “It makes sense that if you build all of these new facilities for the sciences, you would upgrade the old ones,” said Stephen George, Manager of Capital Projects for the college.

Both projects are part of a plan to improve the quality of the sciences at Conn. Hospital renovations followed the completion of the Olin Science Center...

Campus budget passes SGA by large margin

BY JENNY BARON

The student activities budget passed SGA last Thursday by a vote of 23-4-2. Several concerns were raised during the discussion of the budget.

One concern revolved around the allocation of the funds to the Unity Gospel Choir. According to Damon Krieger, house senator of KB, the club was only eligible for $600 because the policy passed last year to promote the fiscal responsibility of new clubs. Because this year is only the second year that the Gospel Choir has gone through the entire budget process, they would only be allowed to be allocated a working budget $600. Instead, they were given $1,500.

This caused Krieger to motion to return the budget to the committee because it was in violation of the C-Book. Dan Shedd, SGA president, disagreed and moved to dismiss Krieger’s motion. He said that the language in the C-Book was vague enough to override Krieger’s motion.

The specific clause in the C-Book reads as follows: “New organizations going through the budget process for the first time are limited to a $400 initial allocation. New organizations going through the budget process for a second time are limited to a $600 initial allocation.” Krieger disagreed and motioned to override Shedd’s decision. Krieger’s motion to object failed and discussion on the budget resumed.

Because we make the C-Book, we can decide if it’s important enough to fail the budget,” said Shedd. He later retracted this statement as a basis for his decision when April Ondis, publisher of Voice Media Group, commented that it sounded like he was advocating SGA could be more lenient with a new organization.

Alex Cote, vice president of SGA and chair of the finance committee, first said that the committee had interpreted that policy differently, but then after Ondis asked if Finance Committee was aware of the knowledge that this club was only in its second year he said that they had not been aware of the Gospel Choir’s status as a second year club.

To rectify the situation, after several hours of discussion, senator Dan Traum, an audience member that evening, suggested that they table to budget and create a proposal to state that Unity Gospel Choir has gone through the entire budget process; they would be a club in good standing. This would then eliminate the C-Book limitation.

The Assembly tabled discussion on the budget and passed the proposal establishing the Gospel Choir as a separate example of a club.

They then reopened discussion on the budget. Jesse Roberts, public relations director, disagreed with the way the issue was handled. "It was very disturbing to see the Assembly so quickly solve a problem in so poor a fashion," said Roberts. He explained that the “five minute proposal,” as he called it, overlooked several factors including: the failure to consult the Gospel Choir on the issue, not allowing for constituent response to the situation, and a lack of campus awareness of the proposal.

As I said during the discussion, I thought that was a cheap, easy way out,” said Roberts.

"Instead of addressing a valid issue, the Assembly created a loophole that managed to bypass a legitimate senatorial concern," Roberts added that he was upset with the way his committee’s budget was handled. He said his budget was severely cut and now faces a deficit. The major issues were the project’s. its disturbing to me to see the Finance Committee cut the foundations of communication and cooperation,” Roberts explained.

But Roberts said that he does support the budget and feels it is the strongest budget produced in years.

Hillel, the Jewish organization on campus, was also discontented with the way its club was handled in the budget process.

"Our budget was not handled professionally," said Jan Sharrow, chair of the Hillel Board.

Sharrow explained that they were denied a convention and a phone call allowing on the grounds that they were not a part of the national Hillel organization.

But, he explained that their previously passed constitution give them the right to join the organization at their leisure. The campus group joined Hillel earlier this month. Sharrow said that the Finance Committee told them to go to Club Improvement for the extra money.

"SGA pretty much assumes more power than they actually have and they abuse it," Sharrow said. "They don’t want to admit they’re wrong."”

The Minority Student Steering Committee expressed its desire to see the budget passed but with a few recom- mendations.

MSSC believes that special consideration should be given to clubs that are spending money before the budget process begins.

MSSC would use the money from the Unity club dues to pay for the tenth anniversary of the May first take-over, for faculty-student dinners and for technical expenses.

"MSSC is not a part of this body, they are not subservient to this body," said Coe.

Since both SGA and MSSC are political organizations, they should be equivalent. "Essentially Finance Committee is going to try and get us to fund and view the same as SSGA," said Al-Shibib.

The other concern of MSSC was the view that Unity clubs should be lumped together. "Unity clubs are not all the same and people do lump us together... we are all separate," said Al-Shibib.

The budget will go to a campus wide referendum this Sunday night.

Yaron Svoray is an Israeli Jew, but most of all, he is a man with a conscience.

At five, Yaron Svoray wanted a tattoo of numbers.

He met many people on his journey.

He met Edda Guering, daughter of Heinrich Himmler, a Nazi sympathizer.

In his quest, Yaron Svoray didn’t change very much. The people he saw, including his father, never thought of him as a Neo-Nazi movement.

He thought seeing all the pain inflicted on the Nazis everyday. His life was in serious jeopardy on a number of occasions, but he was determined to see his goal through.

Svoray entered a hunting lodge deep in the woods outside of Frankfurt. He was greeted by 70 men in full Nazi uniforms. Each man paid Charlie one thousand Deutsch Marks and was then handed some tissues. The lights went out, and the movie played.

Charlie walked towards me. I just got out and punched him in the face.
Federal budget plan threatens student aid

As the federal budget plan prepares to enter the conference committee stage, both the US House and Senate versions include cuts to student financial aid. The House plan would decrease aid by more than $10 billion over the next seven years, while the Senate would cut about $5 billion. The lower Senate figure is the result of an amendment offered by Senators Nancy Kassebaum (R-Kansas), Olympia Snowe (R-Maine), Jim Jeffords (R-Vermont), and others. The amendment eliminates the institutional tax on colleges, restores the full tax to student-based scholarships, and eliminates the proposed interest increases to the PLUS (Parent Loan) program.

The cuts remaining include reductions in the fees paid to guaranty agencies, lenders, and secondary markets. The plan also contains a reduction in the direct loan lending volume to 20 percent. In both plans, the direct lending program would be put in jeopardy. In this program, the government provides loans directly to students rather than guaranteeing loans issued by banks. Currently, 1,400 colleges and universities participate in the program, which accounts for 40 percent of total loan volume. The House budget plan would eliminate direct lending, while the Senate version would force up to half of the schools to drop out of the program.

As shown by the above graph, federal contributions to student aid has been decreasing in recent years. This limits the amount of aid available to colleges and universities, like Conn, for distribution to students.

According to other data from the Conn Financial Aid office, both the number of students receiving aid and the amount of aid awarded have gone down since 1985. Fifty percent of students currently receive some form of aid from the college, up from 38 percent in 1985. And the total Conn awards in constant dollars has gone up from $3,326 in 1985 to $8,145 this year.

The House and Senate versions of student aid cuts, as included in this year’s budget proposal, are now headed for conference committee for reconciliation. President Clinton has promised to veto the bill if it contains any student aid cuts. Democratic opposition and dissection within the Republican party threatens the two-thirds majority needed to override a Presidential veto.

Millions of dollars in scholarships, fellowships, grants, internships, work study programs and special student aid funds go unused every year because students simply don’t know where to apply or how to get their share.

The secret in locating money for college, lies in your strategy. You need step-by-step information on what aid is available and how you can get it. The time to apply is now! You can apply as early as your junior year in high school, or during your undergraduate or graduate study. Aid can be used at any accredited college or trade school.

Fort Bragg picks up the pieces after sniper attack

After Friday's sniper attack left one dead and 18 wounded, the paratroopers at Fort Bragg, North Carolina are trying to pick up the pieces. Investigators, soldiers, and the victims' families of the Army's 82nd Airborne Division are still wondering how it happened.

The gunman opened fire on the 1,300 paratroopers as they began their morning run in the foggy darkness. The sniper hid in a stand of pine trees overlooking the fort's exercise field.

Twenty-six-year-old Army Sergeant William J. Kreutzer is accused in the attack. Kreutzer had a history of psychiatric problems and had been to military psychiatric facilities in the past, according to The Washington Post Sunday edition. The newspaper cited anonymous military and government sources and added that Kreutzer had become "hostile" recently.

Military officials have not released any information on Kreutzer's record. He is a member of the unit that was fired on last Friday morning. Kreutzer was sent to a military jail in Jacksonville on Friday night. A division spokesman said that he might not be charged in the attack for several days.

Fort Bragg soldiers returned to their regular routine on Saturday.

Investigation into bus crash yields some clues

As funeral services continue for those killed in last week's Illinois bus crash, investigators are sifting through the evidence to determine what went wrong.

The substitute bus driver who was at the wheel at the time of the accident was interviewed by the National Transportation Safety Board recently. Fifty-four-year-old Patricia Catencamp told investigators that she never knew what hit her. But passengers on the train said that the whistle was blowing. And students said they screamed for the driver to get off the tracks.

Several motorists said the traffic signals were not changing on time. The warning signal should make the light change 20 seconds before the train's arrival. But Wednesday the light did not change for 18 seconds.

The federal investigators' conclusion is months away, but the deaths of seven teenagers have left the community angry and confused.

Canada break up depends on Monday vote

This Monday, residents of Quebec will cast their ballots to decide if the province should split from Canada. The volatile issue has brought supporters from both sides to the streets in the final days before the vote.

The latest polls show voters split down the middle on the vote. One pollster said it was impossible to predict who will win.

Earlier this week, separatists held several large rallies outside of Montreal to bolster support. The movement has gathered momentum in recent weeks.

Canadian Prime Minister Jean Chretien warned that a decision for Quebec to pull out of Canada would be irreversible. On Friday, at the largest separatist rally in Canada's history, Chretien again offered to make changes to prevent Quebec from seceding from the federation.

But even if there is a yes vote on Monday, the secession will not be automatic. Separatists say it would give them a mandate for their leader to negotiate a new partnership with Canada. If a deal is not reached, then they would declare their independence.

Clinton and the GOP clash over budget plan

President Clinton and Republican leaders have reached an impasse in their weekend budget talks. Republican leaders must reconcile their own differences on the bill.

The two different versions of the show that the GOP majorities in both houses are not entirely in agreement. For example, the House bill gives families making up to $200,000 a year a $500-per-child tax credit while the Senate version caps the income limit at $75,000 for single parents and $110,000 per couple.

Conservative senators were unhappy about several amendments supported by Democrats and moderate Republicans, aimed at restoring some funding to Medicaid, Medicare, and the student loan fund.

On his weekly radio address, Clinton called Republican tactics "blackmail" and said he would not sign a bill that is "bad for our long term prospects". Clinton pledged to protect Medicare, Medicaid, the environment, education and technology during the coming budget fight.

The President also reiterated his support for a balanced budget, but not on Republican terms.

The Republican leadership countered that Clinton had no plan for balancing the budget, and that continuing the President's policies would result in deeper debt.

Yeltsin works from hospital bed

Russian President Boris Yeltsin remains in stable condition after last week's heart trouble, but was able to do some paperwork. But according to a spokesman for the President, says he is still under close observation by doctors.

The 64-year-old Yeltsin was rushed by helicopter to a Moscow hospital Thursday after experiencing heart trouble. Doctors said that Yeltsin was having problems with blood supply to the heart muscles but reported no signs of actual heart failure.

Yeltsin is not well enough to receive visitors, but was able to attend to some business sent over from the Kremlin.

Aides say the president will have to cut back on his work load and stay away from Kremlin pressures until December. He may recuperate in the hospital or the Baikova government resort just outside Moscow. He went to the resort to recover from his heart troubles last July.

France detonates third nuclear test

Ignoring widespread protests, the French Defense Ministry staged its third underground nuclear test Friday in the South Pacific.

The underground explosion was detonated at Murupura Atoll in French Polynesia where earlier nuclear tests provoked worldwide condemnation. The blast was equivalent to an explosion of 40,000 tons of TNT. Activists around the world protested the resumption of nuclear testing by France.

The French government said the blast was aimed at "guaranteeing the safety and reliability of weapons in the future". French officials have pledged to sign a test ban treaty once the latest round of tests is over.

The College Voice

It’s late at night and you’re typing a paper that should have been done hours ago. Suddenly, you hear a strange sound outside your door. You think to yourself, “Who else could be up at this hour?” Opening the door could be the worst mistake of your life because what you discover lurking outside might just haunt you until the end of time; you’ll never sleep with the lights off again.

The promotional pamphlets of Connecticut College fail to speak of the strange noises and incidences reported regularly from all over campus. Some may disregard them as insignificant, but for those die-hard superstitious individuals, this campus is inundated with supernatural beings.

There have been reports of strange occurrences in many of the dorms on campus. In south campus, within the older dorms of the college, the spirits of the dead haunt the students. In Harkness, you will find the spirit of Mary Harkness who frequents the dorm bearing her name. Those who she disapproves of hear her voice. In Knowlton and are often heard in the halls and in the classrooms. The stories of an alleged suicide of a student in Knowlton, but do you know the story behind it? Do you believe that the student’s spirit still haunts the room where the incident took place? Call them hearsay, call them superstitions, but no one will sympathize with your screams of horror as they scare you. Sleep well, they will be watching!

Professor of Music

Boy, oh boy, have I been dying to write this week's column! I get to deal with one of my all-time favorite pieces, and to tell you the truth, I can't wait. What a work! Igor Stravinsky's Le Sacre du Printemps ("The Rite of Spring") has become one of the most famous pieces in the twentieth century—the beginning, in many ways, of modern music. Originally composed as a ballet for Diaghilev's Ballets Russes, it has become synonymous with the word "radical" ever since that fateful first performance on May 29, 1913. The audience literally rioted, so controversial were Stravinsky's music and Nijinsky's choreography. In more recent times, the work has become better known in the concert hall as an orchestral showpiece. Eighty-two years later it still sounds shockingly fresh, and it is certainly no accident that many consider it to be the musical masterpiece of our century.

"What makes it radical? (Despite some hair-raising faux pas, "The Rite of Spring" is total; it isn't serial music like Bartók's Music for Strings, Percussion, and Celesta, for example.) Well, for one thing, Stravinsky often has different levels of sound going at once. People brought in picnic baskets, and with your left hand pluck a major chord (E, G, sharp, B flat, E flat, and B flat) (ask a friend who reads music if you don't know the notes). Each hand alone will sound a different key. Nothing surprising, right? Okay, now play them together. Wild dissonance! This chord, apparently hammered out by the strings and horns, begins the section of the Rite called "The Activity of the Adolescents." What you actually hear are three things: E major, E flat, and G minor.) This is called polytonality (poly - many, and tonality - key).

Stravinsky does the same thing with rhythm. One person will be playing along quite happily in four beats per bar; suddenly, someone else will start to play another rhythm in the same bar; then, another will play five. (All of this is occurring simultaneously.) This combination of many rhythms, called, logically enough, polyrhythm. Another of his favorite tricks is to change rhythms rapidly without warning. Instead of a steady 1-2-3-4. 1-2-3-4, he writes things like 1-2-3-4, 1-2-3-4, 1-2-3-4-5. This kind of rhythmic virtuosity is tough to play (and to dance to; in fact, Nijinsky and his troupe all found it difficult). Today, when we marvel about this piece we do so, revolutionarily, their first thoughts are of those crazy rhythms.

This ballet is also famous for what instrument plays which notes. This is a crucial idea for a composer; the same note played by a flute and a tuba will sound completely different. A composer's choices are what gives each piece its characteristic sound. Here again Stravinsky was a master; his choices are truly audacious. Furthermore, he stretches the limits of each instrument to the utmost, resulting in a kind of hyper-expressive way of playing. You can sense this right from the very beginning: one lonely bassoon playing about as high as a bassoon can play — a haunting, unmistakable sound.

Now for the big question from my last column: what does The Rite of Spring have to do with Charles Ives' third symphony? Some clues: although none of the melodies in the Rite are actual quotes of a musical vernacular (as in the Ives), all of them are reminiscent of a folkloric style. Now that we know those brusque dissonances are really based on simple chords, their whole character changes. For us, they are no longer "ugly," rather, we can hear them as joyful sounds. Then there are those highly dissonant themes that will sound a different key each time they are heard. And Ives' third symphony deals with the same kind of polytonality discussed above.

This Halloween let Uncle Igor say " boo" and treat yourself to - I kid you not - the most electrifying half-hour of music that you will ever hear. (Igor Stravinsky's Le Sacre du Printemps ("The Rite of Spring") is on reserve at Greer Music Library.)

Racism and extreme right-wing political movements and further understanding of the underlying causes. The media polarize among racial, ethnic, and religious groups. His suggestion that neo-nazis in the U.S. are just troubled kids or misfits, whereas in Germany they reflect problems in the structure of German society is not credible.

I was also particularly offended by his report of an incident he witnessed involving the use of a pornographic souvenir film for male masturbatory pleasure, implying that this was a more typical instance of neo-Nazi behavior in Germany rather than a despicable but transnational linkage of perverse sexual arousal to depictions, or actual acts of cruelty to women. This is the type of discourse appropriate to the activities of a liberal arts institution dedicated to preparing future leaders of an increasingly global community.

Letter to the Editor:

I do not wish to register my extreme disappointment with the choice of Yaron Svoray as one of the two speakers for Social Awareness Week. Mr. Svoray’s entertaining, but skewed and sensationalistic presentation of neo-Nazism as a sick fantasy in Germany amounted to a diatribe against all German citizens and their government. There is no justification for presenting such a self-aggrandizing performance and exercise in Goebbelsian propaganda as “social awareness.” It is certainly no secret that neo-Nazis exist in Germany, along with unrepresentative relatives of Nazi officials, or officers of the Waffen SS or Gestapo. They are, in fact, the subject of intense government surveillance and intensive journalism, and the butt of scathing satire in German media.

Mr. Svoray’s simplistic categorization of the three types of Germans (those who are very sorry for the Holocaust, those who just don’t care, and those who maintain it didn’t happen) and his express devaluation of marches by hundreds of thousands of people demonstrating with similar depictions of the Japanese during World War II ended fifty years ago. Does Mr. Svoray really believe that anyone is served by jaywalking and Matt "The Body" Smith as one of the two speakers for Social Awareness Week? I am writing to respond to the front-page article (10/17/95) about Professor of German

Letter to the Editor:

I would like to respond to the question in the article that was published in the November 15, 1995 issue of The College Voice, which asks, "What are your goals for the future?" I hope that I can be a part of creating a more open and inclusive environment for all students, regardless of their background or identity. I am particularly interested in advocating for policies that promote diversity and inclusion, such as expanding access to educational opportunities and ensuring equal treatment for all students. In my role as President of the Student Government Association, I have worked to support initiatives that advance these goals.

In my opinion, O.A.R. would have been better advised to advise Mr. Svoray’s portion of the $8,500 in expenses incurred for the week’s two speakers to foster awareness of our own problems with

Letter to the Editor:

The choice of whether or not to write this letter has been a difficult one. I believed the subject matter involved was self-evident, and therefore redundant. However, I have been well-tutored by the history of the United States, heard from even the loudest of voices, heard to growling editorial to the contrary, this fully lawful gathering is nonetheless worthy of contempt and scorn; and the demands and speech in that particular occasion, only the base matter of a bigoted, bankrupt amorality, are laughable.

Perpetuated by individuals, voiced by this "reverend" for he soils the speeches, particularly those calling for societal apologies for acts every man who has ensnared those fools. Despite every sniveling, college-aged woman reads, "Look your best," the words over the lenses is harmless, the other captions are not. The caption over the picture are many preventions for the image means education and education is the opposite of ignorance. The remedy for ignorance is, of course, education.

1) Learn about the Black Muslim religion (especially if you're Jewish). It may be the most positive influence on your life. Religion's value is in its ability to transcend fear. No one can raise a body to save it. Learn about the religion, and learn about the people. See how Gandhi's and Dr. King's method of non-violent resistance to bring about change is not as easy as it seems. Learn how Minister L. Lee Farrakhan may have lost his assassination.

2) Switch places for a moment. How many times in the past 400 years North Americans have been tried and convicted of the same crimes. See speakers at school last year's Civil Rights Conference was. See speakers at school last year's Civil Rights Conference as was. See speakers at school last year's Civil Rights Conference. See speakers at school last year's Civil Rights Conference.

3) See speakers at school. Last year's Civil Rights Conference was attended by more Princeton students and fewer Cornell students. A little story about what you missed. I had a leg party (gap) on the evening of the reception marking the final day of the conference. I was one of those Cornell students hanging out with the leader of the 45s, 50s, and 60s. We held hands in Holme's Wallace led the group singing freedom songs. I sang freedom songs with leaders from the Civil Rights Movement.

2) Take advantage of the study-away exchange-programs Cornell offers at predominantly black colleges in the South. As well, point out, through the process of obtaining a degree from such places, often the only way students can achieve is to find schools that usually the people who choose to.

6) Learn something about the world. You accomplish two things: You will help others avoid a bad habit, and you won't look stupid yourself. It's been said that you can't pull yourself up by a ladder without being a rung. I thought that... And now we'll talk economics.

In other words, the more we recycle, the more money the school saves, the more office. Is this a good recycling system? Look folks, it's easy. Just a little effort goes a long way. A display will be placed in the public office to clear any confusion for those who are still not completely clear on what exactly have to recycle. Enough of this nonsense. The bottom line is, have a mug with you. Lug a mug to the Thursday night happy hour, the stuff you don't want. Print drafts on the back of used paper. Share magazine subscriptions and other items of use from junk mail lists etc. Send your recycled paper to Direct Marketing Associates, P.O. The average American uses 600 pounds of paper per year.

- Each ton of recycled paper saves 17 trees, 3 cubic yards of landfill space, and 7,000 gallons of water. (Conn recycles about 8 tons of paper every month. That's 156,000 A4 sheets of paper!)

- Recycling a soda can saves 6 pounds of energy, which is enough energy to light a 100 watt bulb for 4 hours.

- It takes an entire forest of 3,000 trees to supply paper for American use. (Conn is the only large institution in the New York Times).

- One tree saves 50 gallons of water. A DAVY docile for a tree takes about 80 gallons of energy to make, so one tree can save us a can from one.

Collective Soul begins national tour in Palmer

BY BRITT WOLFF
The College Voice

Connecticut College will finally host a nationally celebrated Top 10 band when Collective Soul opens its national tour on our campus. The five members of Collective Soul began their musical career in a small Georgia town. Lead singer, Ed Rowland, and his younger brother, Dean Rowland, guitarist, had unusual childhoods for future rock stars. The father of the two brothers restricted them from being subjected to rock and roll until their early teens. This was brought about by their father's strong religious beliefs that rock music was the work of the devil.

The Rowland brothers opposed their upbringing and formed a band that quickly rose from being subjected to rock and roll until their early teens. It was then that they formed Collective Soul, a band that quickly rose to national prominence. The five members of Collective Soul have produced two albums since the band's high school years. Their debut album, "Prize," was released in 1994 and quickly became a platinum album. The success of the first album soon led to the highly acclaimed release, "Collective Soul." The difference between the two releases is the collaborative effort of all band members in Collective Soul. Hints was the band's first release, and therefore, it was the band's first release by the entire group. Collective Soul didn't just land a record deal; they kicked off the tour within months of forming. They have worked hard to receive a record deal and have proved themselves, in more ways than one, of possessing a solid and unique sound. They had the opportunity to perform at the famed Woodstock in 1994, an event that produced a compelling response from the crowd. More recently they toured with Van Halen, but Collective Soul has opened and collaborated with a multitude of bands.

Collective Soul's music is described from pop rock to hard rock. Influences on their music are full of enthusiasm, emotion, and sincere words. Collective Soul's live performances are energy charged and crowd pleasing. Their "gift of riff" and powerful lyrics, Collective Soul is sure to bring an unforgettable concert to Palmer Auditorium on Saturday, November 4 at 8:00 pm.

Wanderlust opens for Collective Soul

BY BRITT WOLFF

No they are not the Beatles; however their catchy melodies sound alarmingly similar. The band is Wanderlust, and they have achieved national success after a mere two years together. Wanderlust's music receives frequent air play on radio stations which has gotten them noticed and allowed them to bring their new style to the public.

Wanderlust will open for Collective Soul during their concert tour which will be kicked off on Saturday, November 4th in Palmer Auditorium. Their music combines catchy melodies and tasty guitar rhythms providing a refreshing and "ear-soluble" sound. A combination of catchy melodies and tasty guitar rhythms provide a refreshing and "ear-soluble" band. "Prize," their debut album, can be listened to non-stop. The album consists of a collection of diverse songs that spark the listener's attention and a set of vocals that remain strong throughout the eleven songs of the album.

The hot tune that has contributed to Wanderlust's success is "December." The song has a tuneful characteristic to it, and its lyrics relate a more serious message. Embedded in all the guitar and drum beats, singer Scot Sax sings of his romantic conflict; the song helps him to face reality and find a resolution to his confused state. Another song that is headed for the airwaves is "Coffee in the Kitchen." This upbeat song is surely marked for success with its catchy lyrics and clever guitar solos.

Wanderlust is sure to put on an incredible show at Connecticut College, a great header for the band Collective Soul; their similar styles will compliment each other and provide for an unforgettable concert.

A voice from the past: David Bowie and Nine Inch Nails combine forces to rock San Francisco

BY CARU SCHULZ Special to The College Voice

As the David Bowie/ Nine Inch Nails tour makes its way to a thundering finish in Los Angeles, the question has been answered. Yes, Bowie and Reznor can play the same pig and make it work. Bowie's new effort, Outside, along with his re-vamped versions of mostly obscure classics made an acceptable mix with Reznor's screams and sonic assaults. But what about the audience? Could the teenage angst mesh with the Ziggy connossieurs?

It was easy at times to be able to decide which artist audience members were there for. Black clothing and hair, fishnets, velvet, shirts with delightful variations of the word "fuck" on them, yep, definite Nine Inch Nails fans. And then there were those like me who were pleased as punch to experience the talent of both bands and both men, with an ensemble to match.

After a noisefest of screaming guitars, drums that threatened to implode yourspleen in a marvellous fashion, and Reznor's throaty croonings of Bowie's oldies such as "Scary Monsters" to NIN's Downward Spiral-ender "Hurt." It was amazing, it was weird, it worked. But this is where the happy marriage ended. The wedding guests were not all in favor of the blessed union, and it was promptly sat down and stayed down for the rest of the show. They covered their ears, for the deep-throated croonings of Bowie were apparently sacrilege to some of the disciples of Reznor. Rather than watch the two work the stage together, they laughed and squirmed and hid their faces from the perceived injustice being done to Nine Inch Nails tunes. The fact that at least two recorded Nails' songs are covers themselves, was forgotten. "Physical" is an early hit from Adam Ant, and NIN's contribution to the motion picture The Crow is not an original work either. Surprise! That's a Joy Division tune!

"Try standing up for every other line," I suggested. "Trent is still up there, you know." Alas, it was no use. These individuals had closed their minds to one of the most influential musicians who has ever been, a man who has slithered through more years and transformations than a Reptile that lurks in the household. Don't get me wrong on how I feel about NIN - I've been a fan since early 1991 - and Bowie, I am certain, is aware of the intense talent he has had to work with. They made it work together, and those who cried out in narrow-minded protest at the transformed songs from either of the two artists should be ashamed. This sort of musical clash was a long time coming again anytime soon. But those of you who DID pick up your things and triumphantly walk out in protest, thank you. I could see the stage a whole lot better after you left.

What in the world is this?!!

On Friday, October 27, Virtual Reality came to Conn. While some studied or left for the weekend, others were scrambling into Crozier-Williams Alumni Connection to play with the latest in virtual reality technology. Students, only having to pay $1.00 for the entire show were thrilled that SAC has taken new steps to get Connecticut College students better entertainment than previous years.

I have always liked Halloween. It has never been my favorite holiday though I have learned to like it more as my friend April is completely and totally in love with the day. It is definitely her favorite day of the entire year and in that vein I am dedicating this special Halloween column to her, the person that loves the day the most.

When I was little my worst Halloween nightmare would be the bag of candy breaking, which by the way happened on several occasions as a child. I remember that the first time I was pretty hysterical and my father had to convince me that we could start over with a new bag. I believe I was wearing my Strawberry Shortcake costume, which was my favorite costume ever... well, next to my Raggedy Anne costume, which was my favorite costume ever!!! And I got less hysterical about this type of occurrence as time went by.

It is not only my choice of costume changed but so have my Halloween nightmares. Most times I opt not to wear a costume because I can never think of a good one. I think most of my worst Halloween nightmares have been realized. The one in my job at this paper—what was I thinking?? While in most cases I love this job, there are days when I can’t help but scratch my head and say to myself, “Did I really, truly willingly take on the responsibility of a newspaper?” Yes—I talk to myself a lot—another Halloween nightmare and a side effect of this job. I mean, really, I am talking to myself in this column as I write.

There is a nightmare for you: imagine, your professor dressed up in a grim reaper costume, holding a bag and saying, “Trick or treat—where is your term paper...it is due next week”—I couldn’t just think about it. Or your dad or your dad who is a dean dress up in a disguise you can’t possibly recognize and says, “Trick or treat—do you know what your GPA is and are you planning to do with yourself anyway?” Or for those of you in the newspaper business any staff member dress up as a monster, the bag of candy did not break then!!! And I got less hysterical about this type of thing happened on several occasions as a child. I remember—

Men and Women’s Cross Country use home advantage in NESCAC Championships

by Sue Egan
Sports Editor

With the season coming to a close, the women and men’s cross country teams were able to make a strong showing in the NESCAC Championships despite harsh conditions. Both teams had the advantage of running home trails due to the fact that both the women and men’s NESCAC Championships were run here at Conn on Saturday.

The women placed 9 of 11 at the Championships with a score of 228. Bowdoin took 1st in the tournament followed by Williams in close second place finish. Conn’s first runner senior Meghan Clay placed 10th with a time of 20:42. Her performance garnered her an All-NESCAC runner title. Senior Hannah Copp, sophomore Latoya Marsh, and junior Shern Schultz placed within the top one hundred. Several performances should be noted: Copp, Schultz, and Sarah Huffman finished the race with their best times at home for the season.

While the team was expecting to do better, they were satisfied with their results due to the fact that the rainy weather and resulting bad conditions put a damper on their performance. “Under the conditions, we are satisfied with the way things turned out,” said Clay. “This is the most difficult course, but Conn is used to it.” November 11 the team travels to Southern Maine to compete in the New England Championships.

While the men placed 10th of 11, they were able to defeat rival Trinity who placed dead last. Sophomore Matt Santo placed 19th in the field and was the first runner in for Conn. Santo was followed by senior Zandy Mangold who took 51st.

“The conditions were really bad,” said Santo. “The team knew the course and felt that it was an advantage. I’m surprised and pleased with the team’s performance; the team is young and can only just get better.” The ECAC at Williams next week will be more of a practice run for both the men, said Santo. Hopefully it will get them in gear for the New England Championships in two weeks. Good luck to both teams!

Are You Understood?

Whatever you do after graduation, one thing is clear: You must be able to communicate effectively.

Writing for a newspaper is the best training for clear, concise writing -- Hemingway knew that, and so does Russell Baker. You don’t have to want a career in Journalism. Most college newspaper writers go on to do other things. But all have benefited from the experience of turning ideas and events into clear prose.

At the College Voice, we are offering the opportunity to become a better writer. Whether you want to write an article once a month, or once a week, we have a place for you.

There are faculty who have written new books on topics ranging from Brazil to Hiedegger to zoology; there are students who have starred in movies, or spent the summer in Milan -- there are new buildings ready to go up, and perhaps a few ready to be torn down. In short, there is no shortage of topics.

If you can spare a few hours a week, you can get some ink, and have fun, too. No need for experience - we'll find a story you can write comfortably and steer you to some sources.

The rest, as they say, is up to you. Call Editor in Chief Michelle Ronayne or News Editor Jenny Barron at x2841. We look forward to meeting you.

RECYCLE!

RECYCLE!
Dane and Al's Totally Biased Football Column

By Dave Keitner & Alex Katz
The College Voice

What is it with all this warm weather in October? We are supposed to have broken out the ice fishing pants by now. We feel refreshed after that marathon fall break, and feel ready for the stretch run, both in the NFL and here at Connecticut College. As a special Halloween treat, we have decided, out of the goodness of our hearts, to devote at least a little bit of the article to football.

The Patriots (who have no interest in playing on Sundays) won a monster win on Monday night against the ghoulish Bills. The game exploded further after the game when we found out that Dave just took off Al's fridge. That was, in fact, Al's last soda. If anyone would like to pick him up a six-pack of Mountain Dew, he lives in Smith 105. Al collected a quarter last week from an anonymous professor. He guaranteed a Pats win, and they came through with a 29-3 rout. The need for a good grade narrowly outweighs the desire to humiliate the semester's worst student, and we are thankful enough to bet against him. For our curious readers, he is in the theater department. Look for clue #2 next week.

On a recent visit to Toys' R' Us, Dave inserted a quarter into one of those bubble machines. With fingers crossed, Dave waited expectantly for a Jets mini-helmet. Instead, the machine sucker-snapped another Bills helmet. Al, with his newly won quarter burning a hole in his hand, tried his luck. He did one worse than Dave: Buying a ghastly Miami Dolphins helmet. For any of our readers who might like to purchase this patriotic shrine, the large orange box is outside the entrance.

The Jets once again hurt their chances for a high draft pick by beating the Dolphins last week. Dave has mixed feelings on the subject, as being Miami is better than lemonade on a hot summer day. Didn't thinking of the summer make you all warm and fuzzy for a second? Life is bitter-sweet.

We would like to direct a few words at Mr. Jason Salter, whose article about Campus Safety caught our eye last week. Mr. Salter took it upon himself to degrade and insult the officers who patrol our campus. Well, Jason, if this is your idea of humor, it's purely dumb. The rules, regulations, and people that irritate you so much are actually intended to protect you. Leave the comedic relief to smuggling us, and take a long trip to some sort of class. As our friend Billy Madison would say, "You Suck!" Don't bother calling T11 the next time you need help.

Back to football and this week's picks. Chad "I am the smartest man you've ever heard of!" Worthington, finally gets the run he so richly deserves. Chad, you are Almighty. Next up we have no particular picks, but would like to appear in the newspaper. We subscribe to, finally. Kevin Cunningham, Conn's number one women's soccer fan, picks the Eagles over whatever hapless team lies in their path this week. As the immortal Macho Man Randy Savage would say, "Snap into a Slim Jim!"

Women's soccer finishes season strong

By Dana Curran
The College Voice

The women's soccer team completed their regular season schedule this Saturday with a disappointing loss to NESAC rival Williams by a score of 2-0. This game was not characteristic of the past two weeks for the team, which began the two-week stretch with an outstanding win over the number one New England team and nationally ranked (number 6) Bowdoin. In the following three contests, Conn breezed by Eastern Connecticut State University 2-0 and defeated Bates by a score of 2-1 and Wellesley, 3-1. This left the team with a regular season record of 7 wins, 5 losses, and 2 ties; ECSAC standings will be announced on Monday, October 30.

The match-up with Wellesley was an important NEC soccer victory for Conn. Freshman stand-out Kim-An Hernandez scored two goals and assisted on the only other goal, scored by junior Betsy Woods. Woods also had one assist.

Following the win over Wellesley came a victory over Bates' by the score of 2-1. Despite last Saturday's controversial and freshman Caroline Davis each contributed unassisted goals.

Conn then faced Eastern Connecticut State University last Wednesday for a shutout victory, with a pair of goals from sophomore Sara Feinberg and freshmen Brooke Wiley, both assisted by Betsy Woods. Although Eastern Conn didn't prove to be a particularly challenging match-up, it completed a four game winning streak which lifted team spirit and reversed the previous-trend of close, frustrating losses and ties.

The loss to Williams this Saturday was a very physical contest. For the majority of the second half, Williams dominated the play. Unfortunately, senior Tara Sorensen remarked, "they came out ready to play, and we didn't!"

When reflecting on the season, Sorensen stated that "we had the talent to win every game, and it came down to having the will to finish strong. In some games we rose to the occasion because we all played with heart, as we did against Bowdoin, and in other instances we lost crucial games because we didn't!" The team was also set back by captain Lisa Perran's knee injury in the practice just before the Bates game. Perran is a key defensive player, and Conn has worked to adjust in the past few weeks. Junior Sarah Dostczek and sophomore Christie Seta have stepped up defensively for Conn, and combined with Sorensen at sweeper. Conn looks strong defensively for their upcoming NEC contests. Offensively, Kim-An Hernandez is Conn's leading scorer with 6 goals and 3 assists, followed closely by Betsy Woods with 4 goals and 5 assists. Freshmen Caroline Davis and Brooke Wiley have given Conn a spark, from the bench as well.

Conn's ECSAC standings will be announced on Monday, and the first round of the tournament begins this Wednesday, November 1.
