The Freshman team went down before the Juniors in the second game of the season Friday night, February 15th.

What We Are Fighting—And What For.
Washington's Birthday ceased to mean a sentimental, personal tribute to our national father—and took on a broader aspect—a holiday to reflect the principles for which he stood and for which he planned our nation to stand, when Dr. Isaac L. Lansing of the National Security League addressed us last Friday, on "What We Are Fighting and What For."

From the beginning of the war in 1914, American people have been trying to understand the situation and to look upon Germany's actions with fair minds. Our attitude has been continually changing. But we cannot hope to stop the war until we understand the real, underlying cause.

Though it was the German military policy—that the people are not to blame; then, that it was the civil leaders. Next, we thought the German people as a whole, ignorant. But we say the war is ended with great respect upon their excellent education. Then we said, "If the people only understood our motives, they would come over to our side, heaving from the power above them". But they have not done so. We said they are insane, obsessed with the idea of war, but they surely are not. We have laid it at the doors of autocracy, in a struggle for its life against democracy. But we ourselves differ as to what democracy really means—and Germany under her autocracy has materially prospered probably more than any democracy. We say the war is ended with great respect upon the people of Germany. Surely England has no such intention—and it was meddling at its best, to decide such a question for her. And then we have thought the cause was preparedness. But it is certain we are not prepared—not nor England. We shall have to seek another fundamental ground for the war. And we find it in Germany's political philosophy.

The Dance of the League of Service.
On the sixth day of the third week of the month of February, many of the children of Israel gathered together with those invited of the neighboring tribes came unto the House of Gymnastics and celebrated a day of merriment. And the house was cleansed and festooned with garlands by the virgins so that none might know what had gone before. There were drawings of red, aye, and of blue and of white. And lo! the musicians came from afar and made merry in order that the occasion might be a festive one. And with the sounding of symbols and the song of the lute, the knights and ladies danced joyfully and did fill their faces of the herbs of tea and feasted on sweet cake and the fruit of the almond tree. And from their midst chosen ones came forth to dance. And great was the applause thereof. At the very gates, talents of silver poured into the coffers, yes even unto one and ninety-four talents of silver, surpassing the expectations of all.

The good of the people of the world, he taught. And with this, he instilled in us a growing hatred of England. German domination was to be acquired through the army. War is a manifestation of virility.

The defeat of the Freshman first team was somewhat compensated by the victory of the Freshman second team over the Junior seconds by a score of 22-14.

The standing of the teams is now:

President Marshall's Reception.
George Washington in all his august splendor could never have been honored by a celebration equal to the reception which President and Mrs. Marshall gave to the students and faculty of Connecticut College on the evening of his birthday in a gymnasium transformed with American flags. Mr. Charles H. Griffith rendered several violin selections in a really lovely way. He combined vivacity and brilliance and technique to a remarkable degree. Indeed, his violin seemed to have a richer, fuller tone than raised his work far above the ordinary. Each number was preceded by a short description of its source. One in particular, a song of Chaminade's, was charmingly different because of the play on the very high notes. Mr. Griffith was obliged by the long sustained applause to repeat this and also a transcription by Kreisler of one of J. Strauss's waltzes. Connecticut College highly values the opportunity of hearing, through the kindness of President Marshall, a violinist of such unusual talent.

Wills Burton—Kent College '93.
Once upon a time there was a nice girl. She went to college to study very hard. Each year when exams came around she sighed and crammed as all college girls should. Then she planned to prepare for every class at least two days ahead. When exams were over she forgot about it, and remembered only when there was a written lesson. She never cut a class unless she had a perfectly good reason.

She never was late to classes unless the mail came up on a later car than usual, or unless she forgot a few books and had to go back after them.

She thought war was a crime. But as long as there was war, she thought college girls ought to know something about it. So she read the picture section of the New York Times every Monday before history class.

Another Point of View

The editorial in the North American Review for February, with its plain statement of facts, is startling anything as the first Germany has been aiming only recently that we as a nation have actual war. But neither has there been visibly within attainment.

As for France and England—whose actual war. But neither has there been visibly within attainment. The best we can do is to read all possible material and hope some day to attain that most desirable end.

Spiritual Gains from the War.

"Every cloud has a silver lining," yes, we've heard that from the days when young nervous systems as actual words. "Turn the dark cloud wrong side out" when sound stimuli first imilled our young nervous systems as actual words. Yes, we've heard that from the days when young nervous systems as actual words.FormGroup: "Keep Smiling"

Connecticut College Student Friendship Fund.

We have talked and heard a great deal about our Friendship Fund, and we always will. The following is the authentic report of the campaign.

From a student body of 256, 237 contributions were made, totalling $383.60 an average of $15.52 per capita. From a faculty numbering 33, 29 contributed $586.00, an average of $20.51 per capita. Our total pledge was $676.68 and every pledge was paid promptly making the total payment $689.60.

"Over the top".

Mr. George Irving, chairman of the Executive Committee of the General Fund said, "The record of Connecticut College is one of which everyone connected with it has every reason to be proud. Moreover, its leading off in this campaign was of very great value throughout the whole movement."

These facts will appear in the annals of the College and we will always look at these figures with pride.

Dr. J. E. Wells gave freely of his time to this campaign and the students of C. C. take this opportunity to extend their "vote of thanks".

De Facultate.

Dr. Beach is working Saturdays at the Yale Library in order to complete certain lines of investigation in Comparative Literature which she began last year abroad. An article by Dr. Beach, "Lemartres Bertrade" appeared in the December number of Modern Language Notes.

The staff regrets to note in the last issue of the News, certain errors in the report on Belgian reconstruction work, which Connecticut College hopes to do. Mademoiselle Ernst has very graciously offered to give us a complete and correct account of the purposes and methods of this work, which we shall print in our next issue.

The letter published below was sent by the Belgian Minister in Washington, Monsieur de Cartier, de Marchiennes, in reply to our offer to help as much as possible in reconstruction work.

February 15th, 1918.

My dear Miss Horrax:

I have received a most interesting letter from Miss Ernst in which she tells me of the work which she has done, individually, for the relief of the Belgian girls, and of the great interest which Connecticut College takes in this phase of relief work.

Indeed, any pecuniary aid which the students of your College wish to give toward this noble and necessary work will be received with deepest gratitude by M. de Voghel who heads this splendid form of relief in Brussels. I take all the more pleasure in endorsing this special work in aid of the working girls of Brussels and Charleroi, as I am myself from the district of Charleroi.

It seems to me peculiarly appropriate that this aid should be given to the Belgian girls in the invaded territory by the splendid young ladies of America, whom their sisters across the sea so much admire!

With deepest appreciation for all the interest and all the help offered to the girls of Belgium made destitute and idle by the war,

I remain, Very sincerely yours, E. de Cartier.

Attention!

The following is the revision of resident rules. Rules in the College "C", not included in the following Articles or Sections are, of course, in effect.

ARTICLE II. (Page 3 of "C")

Chapter 1. Quiet Hours. Change 7:30 - 9:30 Friday evenings.

Section 2. Registrar. Students shall register in a book provided for that purpose when intending to be off campus after 7:30 p.m. Each student shall upon her return to campus sign the time of her return in this book, which shall be kept in the telephone room. Each student who plans to return to campus after 10:00 p.m., or to go to a place where a chaperon is required shall file with her house president a card stating the place to which she is going, the name of her chaperon, and the time when she expects to return.

Section 3. Part 1. Students' calls may remain until 10:30 p.m. Strict quiet must be observed after 10:00 p.m.

ARTICLE III.

Section 1. Part 1. Students shall be chaperoned at afternoon and evening dances and in hotels or restaurants except under conditions provided in Section 2. Students shall be chaperoned after 10:00 p.m.

Freshmen and Sophomores shall be chaperoned after 7:30 unless there is at least one junior in the party. A student spending the night in New London is considered under campus chaperon rules.

Section 4. Part 1. Students may dine at approved places until 7:30 p.m. Part 2. Add Orange Tree Tea Room and The Hillcroft to list of approved places.

ARTICLE IV. Penalites. Any student failing to register under the rules of Article II, Section 2, will receive a warning from her house president. A second offense will deprive her of registration privileges for a length of time determined by the house committee. Any further disregard will be brought before the Student Council for action.

She knitted socks for all the soldiers whose letters filled her mail box. There were so many that she had to knit during meals and lectures, even though it was very embarrassing to hear a steel knitting needle bounce across the floor. She folded compresses once a week. She was simply crazy over war books. She knitted socks for all the soldiers and made her old evening dress do for another year by draping it with tulle over the shoulders.

In college one learns to be brief and to the point. Many words use up much paper, which may be scarce some day. Outline form's the thing. These are her characteristics:

a. Impulsive.

1. Best of intentions.

2. Best of motives.

b. Popular.

1. With her classmates.

2. With Naval Reserve, Base, and Island Fort.

c. Unselfish.

1. Always the first to give up her personal convenience.

2. Interested in Social Service of all kinds.

Tuesday evening a light burned late in 312 Dewey. A pile of books and papers was scattered over a disordered desk—while the papers were quickly turned until they disclosed a promising looking quotation or paragraph which was copied on a rapidly increasing pile of manuscript. At two the light was burned out. Willis had finished her term paper.

Wednesday morning a strained-eyed individual exultingly placed a thick budget of papers on the history professor's desk.

"My dear, your paper all done this morning?" Her chum linked arms with her as they made their way to the last empty seat in the back row.

"Yes", sighed Willis, "but you know, it's the funniest thing—I found out everyone of the Russian leaders except Mr. Bolsheviki."
