Students, Faculty Discuss Tonight Club Organization

Club Presidents Urged To Consider Possible Plans With Appointed Group

Student-Faculty Forum, a discussion group organized last year to consider campus problems, will hold its first meeting of the year tonight at 8:00 in Knowlton living room. Elise Thompson has been appointed by Cabinet to chairman the group. This meeting is for the closed membership only, which consists of the following faculty: President Katharine Blunt, Dean E. Alverna Burdick, and Drs. Harriet Creighton, Hanna Hafkesbrink, Henry Lawrence, Frank Morris, Federico Sanchez, and Hamilton Smyser; and the following students: Seniors—Margaret McConnell, Pearl Myland, Elise Thompson, Frances Wheeler, Emroy Carlough, and Charlotte Sharp; Juniors—Barbara Lawrence, Katherine Walbridge, Florence McConnell, Frances Walker, and Ruth Hollingshead; Sophomores—Dorothy Whipple, Elizabeth Parcells, and Elizabeth Fessenden; Freshmen—Jane Holcombe and Margaret Bear.

Possibilities for reorganization and improvement of the clubs will form the basis for discussion at the meeting tonight. In view of this, all club presidents are invited to attend and offer suggestions.

Status Problem of Northern Negro Seen by Dr. Reid

Dr. Ira Reid, head of the department of sociology at Atlanta university, addressed a large gathering in Windham house, Monday evening. In opening his talk, Dr. Reid expressed the difficulty of trying to be objective about something in which one is emotionally interested.

America has always been faced with race problems, he stated. Some of these problems have been solved as the incoming people have become assimilated into the group. The disappearance of characteristic visible, traditional, features has made this possible. On the other hand, some have been solved by exclusion and deportation. But in either case, this is not possible in our negro situation.

In speaking specifically about the status of the negro in the North, Dr. Reid pointed out that the much-talked of freedom of the negro race is a farce. There is no definite place for the negro here. In the South, there is rigid demarkation, but at least the negro can be sure of his position. Here, however, there is confusion, a lack of classification which in reality is almost worse than complete segregation.

One of the solutions for this prevalent problem can only be met as the majority group, the "white" race, realize that there is a distinct contribution which negroes can offer to civilization as a whole, and encourage them to make this offering which will help us solve our similar problems.

CASTS FOR FALL PLAYS

The casts of the Fall Plays have been announced by Mrs. Ray. In The Gibbets Foot, Barbara Lawrence '38 is "the girl of the street", Kathryn Chatten '38 is "the Grand Lady", Shirley Bryan '39 is "the Old Lady", Dorothy Clements '39 is the "Hangman", and Blanche Mapes '37 is "Francois Villon."

In the play East of Eden, the character "Cain" is played by Louise Newman '39, "Jenny" is played by Marie Kaim '39, "Adam" is played by Jane de Olloqui '39, "Eve" is played by Florence McConnell '38, and "Enoch" by Shirley Bryan '39.

Before Breakfast, the other one-act play has Madelaine Sawyer '39 in the cast.

8. No pictures will be returned.

The arboretum may be considered part of the campus in this contest.

Vesper Speaker Is Robert Wicks, Princeton Dean

Famous Author And Leader of Students Well-known on Connecticut Campus

The speaker at the vesper service on Sunday, November 15 will be Robert Russell Wicks, dean of Princeton university chapel. A native of Utica, N. Y., Dr. Wicks received his A. B. and his M. A. from Hamilton college, as well as the D. D. degree, also conferred upon him by Williams and Yale.

After finishing his theological training in Union Theological Seminary, he served pastorates in East Orange, and in Holyoke, Mass., where he was also chaplain of Mt. Holyoke college. During this period he served for six months in the World War. He has held his present position since 1929, and is a member of the Board of Directors of Union Theological Seminary and a trustee of Tugalo college, Miss.

His latest book, The Reason for Living, is an outgrowth of his many years of experience with college students and their religious problems. It is an attempt to give straightforward answers to specific questions raised by students with whom Dean Wicks has come into contact.

Executives of N. Y. Sun At Convocation

A moving picture of the history and development of The New York Sun and of its mechanics was presented by Colonel Gilbert T. Hodges, chairman of the executive board of The Sun, and Mr. Thomas W. Dewart, son of the publisher, and also on the executive board, at Convocation, Tuesday afternoon, November 10, in the College Gymnasium.

Before the picture, Colonel Hodges told a little of the history of New York newspapers since the time of Horace Greeley, and especially of The Sun, since its introduction by Benjamin Day as the

MARGARET McCONNELL

Self Government Presidents Meet At U. of Maryland

Margaret McConnell Represents C. C. at Women's Intercollegiate Conference

Margaret McConnell returned Sunday from a four-day convention of the Women's Intercollegiate Association for Student Government held at the University of Maryland. Presidents of student government organizations from twenty-five colleges throughout the East met there to consider some of the problems facing their particular groups.

One of the more important contributions brought back from the conference was the idea of having freshmen assemblies. Margaret attended the discussion group which considered freshmen and student activities, and it was during the exchange of ideas at this particular time that the benefit of introducing such a program to our own campus was seen. Many colleges have already a plan for these weekly gatherings. The freshman is acquainted with the traditions of the college; upperclassmen give him a general picture of the majors offered at the college; a spirit of unity in

Dr. B. J. Whiting To Speak Tuesday At Convocation

Authority on Proverbs to Speak On "Many Women And Many Words"

Dr. Bartlett J. Whiting, assistant professor of English at Harvard university, will be the convocation speaker at Connecticut College on Tuesday, November 17. He will speak on the subject of "Many Women and Many Words" or "The Role of Women in English Proverbial Lore". This topic suggests that he is a very witty and anthological speaker and it has aroused much anticipation and interest.

Dr. Whiting was graduated from Harvard university in 1926 Summa Cum Laude. He won the Sheldon fellowship reward and studied abroad for a year. He received his present appointment last year. Dr. Whiting has published a book on Chaucer's Proverbs, and is a recognized authority on proverbs.

Red Cross Drive Recalls Good Work Of Former Years

Again faculty and students at Connecticut College have an opportunity to be a part of one of the world's greatest movements. Contribution to the American Red Cross enlists you as a co-worker in an organization interested in the welfare of all human beings.

Possibly you were a victim of last year's flood disaster and had the aid and protection of the American Red Cross. If so you will appreciate especially the efficient and capable way in which this emergency was handled. More than eight million dollars were given by the American people to help those in need; people of all classes and circumstances were assisted.

Last year Connecticut College gave $281.96 as its share in the great movement. Eighty-eight faculty and fifty-seven students paid a dollar each and became active members. Ninety-two percent of the student body made contributions of a dollar or less. In eleven houses 100 percent of the girls gave; these houses were Bitgood, Branford, Copeland, Deshon, Knowlton, North, Plant, Thames, Vinal, Windham, and Winthrop.

This year one member in each house will be responsible for publicity and collections. It is expected that, as in past years, the student body and faculty will back this movement to the full.

The Junior Class will sponsor a formal dance in Knowlton Salon after the Fall Plays, Friday night, November 20. Dancing will be until 1:30.

The admission charges are as follows:

- $1.50 per couple for both plays and dance.
- $1.00 per couple for dance only.
- 50¢ stag.

Service League Now Sponsors Activities For More Than One Hundred College Girls

With Thanksgiving vacation looming up in the near future, our thoughts turn towards the baskets which are given away annually around this time of year. In a week or so tag day will be held, sponsored by Service League, the returns from which are to be used to fill these baskets.

This is only one of the many activities carried on by Service League lead by Eliza Bissell '37, president. Among its others is Mission House. At the present time, there are fifty college girls teaching about one hundred and twenty-five children to knit and play games. The students also read to their young charges. Three times a week four different girls go down, the same girl going about once every three weeks. Betty Gilbert '37, is at the head of it.

About thirty girls have been going down to Lawrence Hospital, where they work in the reception room, the laboratories, and the Dietetics department. They also make surgical dressings and in addition, play with convalescent children. The hospital has been swamped with volunteers anxious to perform one of these various services.

Another activity of Service League is the Religious Council, headed by Hazel Sundt '38, whose purpose is concerned with an attempt to stimulate an interest in religious activities on campus. Its twenty-seven members are made up of representatives from each of the campus houses. So far, this organization has been represented in three different conferences, one in Boston, one in Hartford, and one in Northfield.

One of its services most worthy of mention has been the monitor system, started for the purpose of keeping silence during daily chapel. Head of Monitors is Helena Jenks. Other new officers are Bette Adams '37, assistant head, and Barbara Bass '40, secretary-treasurer. The Council is making its own posters this year so that it can be financially able to have cut flowers during the winter months. Also, it is sponsoring, in cooperation with the International Relations Club, a return visit on March 21st, of Hornell Hart of the Hartford Theological Seminary.

A greater interest has been shown in Service League this year than ever before, and it is to be hoped that this interest will continue in the future.

A Worthy Cause

"One does not need to speak of the character of the work of the Red Cross", said Mr. Owen D. Young in his recent appeal for the annual roll-call of the American Red Cross. "Everybody knows it. Every flood, every tornado, and a thousand smaller disasters bring home to us the value and the necessity of its service. I appeal to your remembrance in order that you may supply its need for funds. The Red Cross and its magnificent service is taken so much for granted that we forget to give. May I ask you not to forget"

We reiterate this appeal made by Mr. Young. We all know the work of the Red Cross but many of us do not stop to think about it until disaster strikes home. If we will make a resolution right now to do our part for this worthy cause, I'm sure we will feel much happier that we did, if the occasion should ever arise when we should need its aid.

An Essential Asset

A sense of humor is today one of the most needed assets for each one of us to acquire if we haven't it already. By a sense of humor I don't mean mere wit or the ability to laugh things off, but an appreciation and an insight into the affairs of the world which enables one to be cheerful and hopeful in the face of rough or smooth going. It's easy enough to be happy when life runs according to our liking, but how many of us can smile when everything goes "dead wrong"? How many of us have that spirit of good cheer which comes from within and shows itself in real active service as well as in smiles?

Having a sense of humor is a small virtue but if it is true, it can shed such happiness and brightness that everyday troubles fade under its happy influence. A sense of humor claims no creed but the power to erase frowns and lead the way to "sunny paths". Occasionally it would be good if we all took inventory of ourselves and saw how we measure up in the field of being happy.

"Tis more to be good than be great
To be happy is better than wise
You'll find if you smile at the world
The world will smile back in your eyes."

The Armistice—Toward Real Peace?

Eighteen years ago today the nations of the world celebrated one of the most welcomed events since the beginning of time—the signing of the Armistice. Hilarious crowds mobbed street corners; hysterical women sank to their knees in grateful prayer; children, unaware of the real significance of the occasion, none the less gave vent to their enthusiasm. In all corners of the globe, men and women rejoiced that the "war to end all wars" was over.

Even today in a less evident manner, there is continued celebration of the close of the war. Services are still held in honor of those who fought for an ideal they believed in so whole-heartedly; women still speak of their gratitude with subdued voices; we who were children, recognize more fully each year the reason for their joy.

But in spite of our realization, we are rapidly coming face to face with another such crisis. Nations like our own set aside a day for peaceful contemplation of the end of the war, yet the next day hurry about their business of building larger numbers of warships; more effective weapons for slaughter, more deadly poisonous gases.

Is there something radically wrong with us? Can we with our logical minds, find any reconciliation between two such opposing practices? Does it mean we have not learned the full significance of the signing of the Armistice? Are we going blindly into another similar calamity? When will the day come "when nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war anymore"?

Dear Editor:

It is customary to hold chapel on the day we leave for Thanksgiving vacation, Wednesday, November 25. It would be a benefit to those of us who do not have afternoon classes, to omit the chapel period, thus enabling classes to end at 10 minutes of the hour, instead of five after. Since only a few people turn out for that chapel, wouldn't it be advisable to have Wednesday's schedule run similar to Saturday's, omitting this period?

Around Washington

by ARNOLD SERWER

(Associated Collegiate Press Correspondent)

Milwaukee, Wis.—Reports I have had from newsmen in this and adjoining states, along with my own observations during travels in these parts, have led me to certain conclusions that may be of interest to young men and women in our colleges who are seriously contemplating journalism as a career.

These conclusions are to the effect that the country, particularly the Middle West and the Northwest, is within the next three years going to see a great boom in the field of labor journalism. Weeklies, and in some places even dailies, are going to spring up by the score. They will be labor papers, devoted to the cause of labor, mainly supported by labor. In some cases they will carry news and little else. In other places they will start with a nucleus of organized labor unionists as subscribers and on top of that will try to build a following of readers with liberal tendencies.

Of course, there have been labor papers nearly as long as there have been labor unions. But there have been comparatively few of them, located mainly in the great industrial centers. But in the next few years central labor unions and trades councils in dozens of smaller cities will be launching new weeklies, which if well run will have a very good chance of surviving.

Two developments of major importance lie behind all this. First, labor, about to share in a Roosevelt victory, is feeling its political oats. The younger leaders realize that a labor press will help labor immeasurably in its future political endeavors. Second, the almost unbroken front that the country's dailies have presented against Roosevelt, and the long standing antipathy of the conservative press to a vigorous labor movement, are pointing out with dramatic emphasis to these leaders the importance of building their own press, so that the cause of unionism and liberalism may be adequately represented when important issues are at stake.

Many of these new papers will be started on a shoestring. But as their importance becomes more evident to the rank and file of labor, they will begin to pay their way or possibly even to begin to show small profits. As they begin to widen their appeal by carrying sports, features, cartoons, and begin to pick up a little advertising from manufacturers of union label products, a lot of average American readers with progressive ideas, disgusted with the die-hard policies of Tory papers in small industrial cities, are going to start reading the new papers. This will be particularly true in towns having only one paper, a conservative one failing to realize that the New Deal has indirectly served to open the minds of hundreds of thousands of Americans to new ideas.

The new papers will probably pay their editors very little at first, and never very much at any time. They will usually be two-men papers, having an editor and a business manager. They will demand hard work. They will present internal problems, including fights with labor factions. They will present external problems, including pressure from local societies, advertisers, opposition papers and Tory politicians.

But for any young man or woman interested in labor and liberalism, they will afford a chance to get into some lively fights and to get excellent experience and training. Labor leaders will soon be asking for young people to write for and edit their papers. As time goes on, with fewer openings available on the established dailies, it will be to the new labor papers that these young people will turn.

Dr. Hamilton Told Of Diseases In Modern Industry

Spoke of Dangerous Trades and What Government Can Do About Them

Dr. Alice Hamilton spoke at Convocation in the college gymnasium Tuesday afternoon, November 3rd on "Dangerous Trades and What the Government Can Do About Them". A well-known pioneer worker in the study of industrial diseases, Dr. Hamilton was also a close friend of the late Jane Addams and has presented the college with a beautiful plaque of Miss Addams for Jane Addams house.

In her talk on labor problems, Dr. Hamilton told of four things which made her conscious of economic conditions. They were, briefly, a talk by Governor Altgelt at Hull House, the comparison, by Miss Addams, of a trade union to a family, an incident in the life of a young Italian factory-girl which turned her to the Unions, and hearing Eugene Debs speak on the injustices of labor.

Aroused by the knowledge that no compensation was offered the families of men killed in a serious accident at a Chicago pumping station, Dr. Hamilton and William Hard ultimately achieved the establishment of compensation for accidents to workers.

She was among the first to realize the effects of lead poisoning on workers and was sent to Brussels to attend a great international gathering, where she presented a paper on it. After this came exploration in several "dangerous trades". When a man enters industry, says Dr. Hamilton, he loses seven years of his normal life. This is only one fact which makes the problem of the dangerous trades an important one.

Religious Meeting Was Attended by Hazel Sundt '38

Connecticut College was represented at a conference of the Student Christian Movement in New England held at Babson institute, Wellesley Hills, this past weekend. Hazel Sundt, head of the religious council, was chosen as one of the thirty students who make up the "steering committee" for the entire movement. In this capacity she met with the other student representatives from different colleges to formulate plans for the coming mid-winter Northfield conference, to which Connecticut will be sending several delegates.

In addition to this planning, a joint mid-summer conference for both men and women of the New England Student Christian group was arranged. Never before has such a conference been tried, and it is hoped that a new unity of the movement may be gained so that its work will be more effective and far-reaching in the future.

The Gamma Phi Betas at Oregon State College had to seat their "rushed ones" on planks stretched across saw horses because the house was being remodeled at the time.

Among the 600,000 titles owned by the University of Wisconsin historical library, three were printed before 1500 and 33 printed between 1500 and 1597.

We Pay A Tribute To Our Friend, Helper, And Advisor, President Katharine Blunt

by MARY ELAINE DeWOLFE '39

We've all seen her around campus, sometimes talking with one of the girls, sometimes alone, but always easily approached. She is our friend, our college guardian, President Katharine Blunt.

Each freshman meets Miss Blunt, is welcomed to her home and her office, and with a cordial hand-shake, perhaps only a few words, but always the same friendly smile, the president of Connecticut makes each girl feel at home. After that she is our friend who greets us when she meets us about campus, who waves a greeting to us from her little blue convertible coupe, who walks over to Bolleswood to picnics with us. Above all else, Miss Blunt is democratic!

Her Tuesday morning Chapel talks are popular because she understands so well what her audiences want to know and how to tell them. Some weeks she tells of features or events on campus or connected in some way with the college, in which the girls should be interested; other times she offers gently, bits of advice which help every one of the students. She is informal, and that informality is in itself friendliness.

You know she is sincere in her anxiety for the girls and their welfare. The look in her grey-green eyes is kind; the very carelessness with which she pushes back her short white hair as she speaks makes her one of us.

She laughs with us; she is sympathetic—she understands us. As each senior receives her diploma the look in President Blunt's eyes tells her it makes a difference that she has finished Connecticut and is leaving; she really cares.

So, from our first week at Connecticut College to our last we benefit by the friendship, the care, the advice of our friend and president, Katharine Blunt.

Follow Values Set By Supreme Being Urged Dr. Brown

Life offers a great challenge to us today. What place will we give religion under the changing conditions and shifting values of our times? This was the subject of Charles Reynolds Brown's vesper talk last Sunday.

The early Hebrews were very fond of songs. When they were taken as captives to Babylonia, their songs were always heard in the valley of the Euphrates. After some time the joyousness went out of the songs. These Hebrews were some of them becoming home-sick and others being assimilated into the Babylonian race. With the change of conditions some of the spiritual value of life had been lost.

Same Disasters Today

Today we are threatened by the same disaster in two ways; first through the change in beliefs, and second through the change in ethics. Our religion beliefs are being tested for their component parts just as chemical compounds are tested for their constituents. So many different theories and beliefs have been evolved that it is difficult to tell the chaff from the wheat. It is in industry that the change in ethics is most noticeable. Every one lives by a 'catch as one can' rule or falls by the wayside. In this hard-boiled, grasping business world comes a loud cry for a more democratic and equal distribution between the workers with the head and with the hands. What can we do?

Dr. Brown advocates following the lasting values set by the Supreme Being. Our guidance comes from prayer and song. By the attitudes and high aspirations of the leaders in industry we can bring the avaricious six days of the week to the same fine level of the seventh day. To develop such leaders is the work of the church. Every one of us goes into a strange and unknown land where we have faith in God or nothing at all. We may wander and wonder at first, but eventually we will find our way with a song in our hearts, for "the Lord our God will be with us and will not forsake us".

Apple pie is the most popular food at New York university, according to Miss Noles, dietician of the commons lunch room.

Books Concerning Several Fields of Study in Library

We don't advocate slacking up on the homework, but now that mid-semester is a thing of the past, there are several excellent books in the library that might be read. Some of the good fiction books acquired this past summer are: Herbert Gorman's The Mountain and the Plain, Aldous Huxley's Eyeless in Gazo, Agnes Repplier's In Pursuit of Laughter, Margaret Mitchell's Gone With the Wind, Carl Cammer's Listen For a Lonesome Drum, and Manuel Komroff's Water; a Novel.

For biographies of original and fascinating people we offer I Was a German by Ernest Toller, The Love Romance of Charles Dickens, by L. Dexter, and John Weed—the Work of a Revolutionary by Granville Hicks.

The Medical Aspect

Perhaps because we always associate the doctor with pain and suffering, we do not like him or his small black bag when we are well. Here are two books that offer a great challenge to that antipathy. We are sure they will be highly entertaining: Harvey Cushing's From a Surgeon's Journal 1915-1918 and Paul De Kruif's Why Keep Them Alive?

For those who are interested in writing or in the already written, Ladies of the Press by Ishbel Ross and The Indian in American Literature by Albert Keiser are worthwhile and specialized sources.

Government and Economics

Recent events in Spain have centered our attention more than ever upon Europe and her forms of government. In order to interpret the trend of our own government it is necessary for us to get a clear conception of the various forms of socialism and communism and what was the cause for their introduction. We are living in a time when history is being made. We think the following will make you knowingly aware of the situation: N. L. Child's Propaganda and Dictatorship, John Gunther's Inside Europe, Herbert Heaton's Economic History of Europe, Sidney Hook's From Hagel to Marx, Leipmann's Fires Underground, and Arnold Zweig's Education Before Verdun.

Press Board Will Sponsor Talks on News Writing

Purpose And Functions of Press Board Explained to New Members at Tea

The presentation of a number of guest speakers to talk on newspaper writing and the extension and development of territory covered by correspondents were among the plans outlined for this year by the Connecticut College Press Board at a tea given in Mary Harkness house, Friday afternoon, November 6. The tea was given to welcome the five new members who have been elected to Press Board.

The development of the organization from infancy to its present position as a unit acting in conjunction with the publicity department was traced briefly by Mrs. Katherine T. Floyd, publicity director and the speaker at the tea. Mrs. Floyd described the purpose of Press Board as the covering of the activities of students in various newspapers interested in the college in supplement to the work of the publicity department which covers the activities of the faculty and administration.

The fundamental principles of the organization and functioning of the board, and general plans for the year were discussed by Nancy Burke '37, editor-in-chief. She also outlined the types of work and possibilities offered by the board to its members. Suggestions for development were offered by students in the organization and were discussed.

Miss L. Alice Ramsey, who was a guest at the tea, poured. The committee in charge of arrangements included Nancy Burke '37, Eliza Bissell '37, and Priscilla Cole '37.

RIFLE MEET

The rifle meet was held on Saturday, November 7th. Norma Bloom was in charge. The seniors placed first, the juniors second, the freshmen third, and the sophomores last. Blanche Mapes '37 was the highest individual scorer. There were five novelties which included the shooting of ping-pong balls, the shooting of white paper in the holes of doughnuts, the shooting of bells, of tires on an automobile, and the eyes, nose, and mouth of pumpkins.

HOCKEY

Monday the juniors met the sophomores in hockey and won 6-0, winning skill also.

Friday the freshmen met the seniors and won the game 3-2. They were awarded skill, again. So far the freshmen have won as to skill for each game.

ARCHERY TOURNAMENT

The freshmen won the archery tournament this fall. The seniors won second place.

Sale of Xmas Seals Will Aid Worthy Cause

"In making a march, it is well to pause occasionally and observe the route both ahead and to the rear." That's how Army Field Service Regulations put it. At this time of year, we too may follow this advice. Now when the tuberculosis Christmas seals make their annual appearance, we, as citizens, should acquaint ourselves with what has happened in the fight against this dread disease—and what lies ahead.

For thirty years a voluntary army has mustered itself for duty in raising funds with which to carry on educational work in the public health field of tuberculosis control to the end that a preventable and curable disease may be conquered. The march has been along a well defined route starting with Koch's discovery of the tubercle bacillus in 1882 and past such important milestones as the building of the first tuberculosis sanatorium by Dr. Edward L. Trudeau and the inauguration of the first Christmas seal sale by Miss Emily P. Bissell in 1907.

Thirty Years Battle

For thirty years the battle has been waged, with ups and downs, until now we can see victory ahead. We must keep on. It is not enough that we have made progress to the extent of reducing the deaths from tuberculosis by more than two-thirds. There are still almost 70,000 people needlessly dying each year, and most important, the majority of deaths occur in that age group, 15 to 45, which is right at the door of economic independence and stability.

We can't all be up in the front line of fighters but we do all have the privileged opportunity of supporting the soldiers on the march. We can buy and use Christmas seals. They finance the greatest war the world has ever known—a war that shall go on until the ancient enemy of mankind is wiped off the face of the earth.

A long way have we come. We can look back with satisfaction but we must look ahead with determination and with confidence in the tuberculosis associations of the country who have led the fight.

Let's all buy Christmas seals and help in this great fight.

CLUB NOTES

FRENCH CLUB

The next meeting of the French Club is to be held in Mary Harkness living room on November 17th. The meeting is to be preceded by a dinner in Mary Harkness, at which Miss Ernst and Miss Keene are to be the guests of honor. Following the dinner, a French play is to be read by Betty Butler '38, Marion Zabriskie '37, and Doris Bacon '37. Miss Fouré has arranged for a piano presentation of modern French songs by Dorothy Haney '37. By the time of the meeting, it is hoped that all the girls in the club will have read the play and a discussion of it, led by Miss Fouré, will follow the recital.

The members of the club hope to have the December meeting an open one, but, as yet, the plans are not definite.

MATHEMATICS CLUB

On November 5th, the Mathematics Club meeting was held in the Commuters' Room. A discussion of whether the club should have open or closed membership and suggestions for improving the club opened the meeting. Following that, Frances Wallis was elected chairman of the committee of arrangements for the Math Club's representation at the Science Conference which will be held at Storrs in the Spring. (Each science club arranges to send representatives to speak on scientific subjects at the conference.) Barbara Martin read her paper on the "Building and Loan Association", and Frances Wallis, hers on the "Theory of Investment".

The next portion of the meeting was the presentation and solution of intricate mathematic puzzles by various members of the club. Cider and doughnuts were served immediately preceding adjournment.

Plans for the next meeting later in November have been made. The club hopes to hold the meeting in one of the living rooms and have the Personnel Director of the Aetna Life Insurance Co. of Hartford give an address on the "Possibilities of a Woman's Future in the Life Insurance Business."

The December meeting of the group will be probably entirely social, with mathematics puzzles, games, and refreshments providing the amusement. This meeting is expected to take place on the 9th of December.

ITALIAN CLUB

Membership in the Italian Club is open to all students, those who do or do not take Italian, who are interested in discussing topics of Italian culture and participating in activities undertaken by the club.

Two types of membership are offered by the club. The active members are those who attend meetings regularly and contribute to the activities of the club either by participating in discussion or serving on committees. They are entitled to a vote in deciding problems of the club and will be entitled to point for active membership if student government does pass the resolution to give points to club members. The other type of members may attend the individual meetings without taking an active part if they so desire.

Topics to be discussed at the meetings will be posted on the bulletin board.

Registration of members is open now. Students are urged to join the club as soon as possible. They may do so by leaving a note for Rae Adashko or Marion DeBarbieri in Box 110 campus mail or seeing personally any member of the Italian club.

SCIENCE CLUB

An unusually interesting program to consist of current events in each of the various fields of science will be presented by the Science club at a meeting on Wednesday evening, November 18, at 7:30 p. m. in the Commuters' Room. Two people are gathering material on up-to-date developments in each science and one of each group will report on findings at the meeting.

This project marks an attempt not only to give those interested in science up-to-date information, but also to draw together the different fields and to present a program of interest to majors and students in each of these fields: botany, chemistry, physics, home economics, and zoology will each be considered.

Latest developments in botany are being covered by Barbara Brasher

Embarrassing moments on Wilson campus: Two roommates were unpacking their trunks after vacation.

"Just wait till you see the picture he gave me!" one said to the other. "That reminds me, I have a pretty picture too", the other answered.

With that they both delved into their trunks; only to emerge triumphantly with . . . identical pictures.

Everyone is welcome. Those having any additional information on any subject are urged to contribute it at the meeting.

RIDING CLUB

The members of the Connecticut College Riding Club went on a breakfast ride on Saturday, October 31. Leaving at 6:00 a. m., they rode for an hour and fifteen minutes, stopping at a farm for breakfast.

Next Saturday, November 14, there will be a lunch ride. The members of the Riding Club will leave at 12:00 for Miller's Pond, where they will cook steak for lunch. The group will return at about 3:30 p. m. Anyone interested in joining them is cordially invited to do so.

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is not a syndicate column as many believe but is written by Eldreda "Dede" Lowe '39

When I went downtown this afternoon, I saw some very good-looking clothes for any occasion and because I thought you might enjoy reading about them, I have described a few.

A "Sandringham" blue cashmere sweater. The sleeves are set in such a way that the armhole looks square instead of round. This cashmere is the same kind of wool that in ancient days the natives used in weaving Paisley shawls—the royal robes for Eastern nobility!

A two piece woolen sport dress of contrasting colors. Brilliant blue blouse with a round collar, an opening down the left side which fastens with a large metal button, and long, plain sleeves. The belt of the same color has a buckle like the button, but fastens with a small dagger on a chain. And the contrast comes with the flared black skirt.

A pleated, plaid skirt is just the thing to brighten up your skirt collection. The plaid has the colors navy blue, red, white, and green—very smart and it will match anything you might wish to wear. How about the new angora—a cashmere and silk combination—plaid scarf? It has three shades of red, then green, white, and blue colors. It's an import from France!

A wine-colored, novelty silk afternoon dress. It has long sleeves and a flared skirt but it is clever looking because of the yoke across the front and back, and the draped neckline trimmed with a bow of gold leather and wine silk. The crepe belt also has a similar bow for the "buckle".

For a "smooth", sophisticated formal, consider the tailored black crepe I saw. It has both a low front and back, fits smoothly until the knees where it flares. The hemline is split in front and is trimmed with a four inch band of gold fringe! There is also a touch of fringe at the waist.

And "personal touches". A nubby stitched wool hat which is very small and is brimless, fitting tightly to the head. But it is full of dash, for a long, jaunty feather is placed at a smart angle. String gloves and mittens are still popular in white, red, yellow, and brown. Or for dress—long suede gloves in rust color—very much like a cavalier's gauntlet. Lamé or brocaded evening bags to match your formal or wrap are new—the pouch shaped ones, especially!

Dramatic Club Activities Reviewed; Becomes "Wig and Candle" in 1927

by BARBARA L. FAWCETT '37

Do you know that Connecticut College has had a Dramatic Club since the second year of the school's existence, and that this Dramatic Club has presented at least one big play every year since 1916? So many of us are apt to take organizations like this for granted without realizing how much work lies behind their progress and behind the performances which they give us.

Very soon we shall be privileged to witness the fall production by the Dramatic Club members, and will be able to marvel at the clever manner in which the girls portray men, and the dexterity with which the stage crews have changed the gymnasium into another world. But will we remember that the efficiency of this club did not spring up over night or that the plays do not just act themselves?

The first play to be given was Poor Dear Momma by Kipling. For the first five years, the Dramatic Club presented only one production a year. In 1921 the club took full charge of their productions and even did their own coaching. Before this time some faculty member or someone interested in drama was called upon to help them. This new independence gave the players added ambition, and, for the first time, they put on both a fall and a spring play.

In 1927 the club adopted its present name of Wig and Candle. The general selection of plays by the club usually has run to comedies such as Shaw's You Can Never Tell, Mr. Pim Passes By of A. A. Milne, and Sir James Barrie's Dear Brutus. In 1929 Pinero's The Second Mrs. Tanqueray was presented for the spring play. This was the most ambitious production ever undertaken by Wig and Candle up to that time. It proved to be a great success, and from then on more difficult plays were attempted with equally good results. Recent presentations have included such worthy plays as, Pride and Prejudice by Mrs. Stuart MacKay from the book by Jane Austen, The Late Christopher Bean by Sidney Howard, The Young Idea and Hay Fever both by Noel Coward, and The Cradle Song from the pen of G. Martinez Sierra.

The club was not totally satisfied even with the achievements of their fall and spring plays, and in 1934 decided to extend their interests to the sponsoring of speakers and reading groups for the general student body. The next year Wig and Candle was represented at the Drama Conference held at Yale. It was the first conference of its kind among colleges of this district, and many new ideas were gained by all who were present.

After the conference, the club members decided that better results might be obtained if the organization be made a closed one and the members be chosen according to a proven ability in acting or staging. Others are permitted to try out for various parts, but the club is now a closed one.

In addition to the regular plays a new opportunity for dramatic expression has been offered on the campus for several years in the annual competitive plays, which are backed by the Dramatic Club. For these each class selects a play and is given a week in which to prepare it. The plays are then presented by the classes and are judged according to the choice of play, the acting, and the setting. Since the first competition which occurred in 1926, the seniors have won five times, the sophomore class three times, and the freshmen twice.

Last year the Wig and Candle introduced the idea of house plays, also. These are purely optional, and are under the direction of the chairman of entertainment in each house. Mrs. Ray, whose efforts have been of great help in aiding the work of the Dramatic Club, has offered her services in the advisory capacity for any of the house plays, as have members of Wig and Candle.

Wig and Candle shows forth lastly in the short scenes or plays which are presented after amalgamation meetings. In all these various productions we, as students of Connecticut College, are offered great opportunities for dramatic expression and appreciation.

Dean Nye Explains Absence Rules

Connecticut College considers its students as adults, not only capable of understanding, and making decisions, but also desirous of giving and receiving fair treatment. This is the basis on which the following statement is made:

I. Absence in its relation to the student.

a. Absence is a matter of honor and conscience.

b. Every absence is a loss to the student.

c. No teacher is required to give extra time in order that a student may make up tests, laboratory work, etc., that have been missed. Such extra time, if given, is a special favor.

II. Absence in its relation to the college.

When numerous students are absent on the same day, it tends to disrupt the college work. This is more apt to occur immediately before or after a short vacation. That is why the college has established a fee of five dollars, comparable to the late registration fee, for students missing the last meeting of any class before a short vacation, e. g. Thanksgiving, Christmas, or Spring Recess, and for those who find it impossible to return for the appointed hour. (10 p. m.)

This fee is not considered as a penalty for misconduct. It is primarily to encourage the student to consider carefully before absents herself for anything but necessity or some serious reason.

Interpretation

In further interpretation of the above rule, the Committee on Administration has decided that (1) the fee is to be remitted only in cases of acute illness or genuine emergency; also that (2) both students and their parents should be urged to arrange appointments with dentists or oculists for vacation periods; also that (3) if a student prolongs the vacation at both ends, the fee is to be doubled; also that (4) the bill for this extra fee in each case is to be sent to the parent or guardian, according to the regular custom of the Bursar's office.

Irene Nye,
Dean of Faculty.

He said that in the printing of The Sun approximately 150 tons of paper and a ton and a half of ink are used daily. There is a standing supply of about sixty-five tons of metal for the typesetting machines. This is remelted every day.

Accompanied by explanations, the film showed not only the entire process of putting out a daily paper, but such memorable events as the Civil War, Colonel Lindbergh's flight, the last Olympic games, and the recent flight of the great Hindenburg dirigible.

Preceding Convocation, there was tea in Windham Parlors given by President Blunt and the officers of Connecticut College Press Board. Few things that grow require all the care and cultivation it takes to raise the mild, ripe tobaccos in Chesterfield Cigarettes.

Chesterfield Wins

There is no higher standard of tobacco quality than the Chesterfield standard.

Like fine wines, Chesterfield tobaccos are aged for two years or more to make them mellow and better-tasting.

Proper curing by the farmer gives flavor to Chesterfield tobaccos just as it does to fine hams and bacon.
