The names Billy Joel and Jimmy Cliff have been given much play in recent issues of PUNDIT. When a group of individual students (backed by WCNI) announced that they were presenting Mr. Joel in concert the reaction of the student body ran the gamut from elation to disappointment. For better or worse, Billy is coming on December 4.

About two weeks after the Joel concert was announced, the Social Board Concert Committee, after taking a poll, informed the student body that they intended to present Jimmy Cliff at Connecticut, two weeks before the Billy Joel concert. The Joel people cried “Foul!” Tempers flared and fingers were pointed by both sides. Again, for better or worse, Jimmy Cliff will be here on November 21.

Two concerts in two weeks. Not bad. The timing is unfortunate but that is a situation which cannot be remedied at this point. It is imperative that both of these concerts succeed if we are to continue to have this type and calibre of entertainment at Conn.

Regrettably, the concert situation has taken political overtones. PUNDIT is not taking sides and we encourage individual students not to align themselves with any faction at the exclusion of the other. This sort of behavior is beneficial to no one.

Now that Billy Joel and Jimmy Cliff will both be here we urge the student body to get behind both of them to make for a double-barrelled success. If these concerts do well we can expect this sort of event on a more regular basis. PUNDIT would like to see this.

Clean Up Your Act

Most of you have undoubtedly noticed the plethora of President Ford stickers and other Republican campaign paraphernalia dotting the campus. Throughout both classroom buildings and dorms, these things are apparent wherever one turns.

Whoever is responsible for this overkill should wise up. As we all saw this past Tuesday, millions of stickers doth not a victory make.

Now that Jerry is packing his bags for Grand Rapids, PUNDIT would like to offer the renegade Republicans responsible for this local pollution a suggestion. CLEAN UP THE MESS!

Pundit Endeavors To End Unemployment At Conn

PUNDIT needs drivers to take copy up to Norwich on Monday nights. The drive is about forty minutes round-trip and the pay is $3.00 per trip. Not bad at all.

Remember folks, no copy — no PUNDIT. All those interested come to a meeting in Cro 212 tonight at 6:30.

An all campus party will be held in Cro Main Lounge on Saturday, November 6th. Sponsored by the Sophomore class, the party will feature Pizza and Refreshments. Admission is $1.50.

CORRECTION

PUNDIT regrets that, in the October 28 issue, the picture of Janice Mayer was mistakenly placed above the platform of Karen Franklan, and vice versa. We apologize for any inconvenience this may have caused.

To the College Community:

Sorry for inconvenience that has been caused those who swim during Recreational hours. The pool has been closed twice within the past two weeks because of Lifeguards not showing up. Lifeguards are to supply their own substitutes if they are not able to Lifeguard. It will not happen again.

To College Community:

To both — Letters

People on this campus are very concerned with ecology on campus. This has been evidenced by the refuse collection with the attendance of marked cans. However, this campus has one form of enduring litter which I must speak out against!!!

The continuing and increasing number of Ford-Dole and Carter-Mondale stickers around campus is just about everywhere!!! I have noticed them, particularly on dorm windows and doors. I have also noticed that they, for lack of a better place, have now appeared on various auto windows. I also found one on my car. I did not put it there!

I propose that the Carter-Mondale and Ford-Dole people remove and clean up their stickers. If they don’t we should have a more modern day version of tearing and featherting-pasting and sticking their own stickers to the respective heads of the College Republicans and the Young Democrats.

Sincerely,
DAVID KEEP

To the College Community:

Maybe I’m naive. Maybe the gains of science have been lost upon me in a sea of humanitarian spirit. Granted the leaps in scientific knowledge come only with some measure of sacrifice, but hasn’t something in the scientific process gone awry when young adults can casually desecrate other living beings in the name of progress. And I guess you must admit that the progress has far exceeded the sacrifice involved. But when I discovered last week that Connecticut College science students (as well as, I suppose, most universities) actually desecrate what we once innocent cats, which were bred to do that very purpose, I realized that age of sentiment and compassion was on its way out.

Unfortunately, I am a product of this new age and I have allowed myself to be convinced that these mass murders of fellow living beings cannot somehow be justified by the knowledge gained from cutting, tearing and processing the remainder of the poor things. But what cats? Why experiment with and mutilate perhaps the proudest and stately breed of the entire animal kingdom? Cats (and dogs) have attained a special status with man, almost fraternal in a way. I love cats. And it kills me to see so many thousands of titians sacrificed each year in the name of science. Couldn’t a less offensive choice be made? squirrels or hamsters perhaps.

Does no one care about our little friends anymore, or has compassion come to be spelled w-h-o-c-o-r-e-s. Think about it.

Respectfully yours,

Collective Suicide?

By Jan Herder

I would like to suggest something quite absurd: we are committing suicide. ... the national sins of Watergate, Vietnam, etc. These things weren't our fault, we must consider ourselves as human beings qualified by the essential point is that it is people - us. Who or what, then, are we? And how are we committing suicide?

Now it would seem to me that we must consider ourselves as human beings qualified by the purpose that unites us — higher education. And this is the key. We don't "have" higher education, or else we would be somewhere else, but rather we are trying to attain it. It must somehow be in this institution. Surely by taking as many courses as possible, getting good grades, listening and reacting to our professors, and doing all the other things one does here we should finally grasp our elusive goal.

Yet speaking to graduates and reflecting upon our own life and education, this is quite clear that I am, alas, no closer than three years ago. This suggests the problem of education is not an end — it is a means. What you "get" is knowledge about a process or way by which you can pursue your education endlessly. They why don't they offer a course in it? Why go to graduate school, which is what everyone seems to want to do (even at the fresherman year)!

If higher education is not something that we can either get or be given in what way is the process of pursuing an education communicated? Again, there are many things that appear to answer this question: taking the right courses, getting A's, writing papers, reading the classics, dissecting pigs, or some such thing. But these are all "things" and we said earlier that no such "thing" as education is grasped. The answer is, again, people communicate, the essential process. But the responsibility is always mutual.

Unfortunately, given my talents and the space I have, I must content myself with pointing out the iceberg only. Hopefully these questions will do this.

To what degree are our professors paradigmatic? To what degree should they be? Do you believe yourselves and the ideals they are supposed to stand for? Do we believe them? Do we believe ourselves? Or is all this a matter of economics? And, finally, is the process of pursuing an education being communicated? If not, we are dead.

And I think there will be no future to our college if our age has occurred; although the obseurities are obvious enough: big houses and deterioration of academic journals. We are committing suicide, then, to the degree that the process of education is not being communicated or realized.

smirk at the hapless senior and make him the butt of careless jokes:

"Hey Oscar, is there really life after College?"

Seniors can only retaliate by pretending that they're glad to be graduating, as they put up a bold front:

"Well, I dunno. My dad is giving me two million dollars to live in Crete for two years, you see."

Nobody falls for it, though. All your life, you're told by your parents that "college will be the best time of your life, Buster," so when the whole time you're there, you're miserable, wondering when the fun is going to start. As a senior, not wanting to admit that you're polishing off the last bead of the best time of your life, you naively begin to imagine that the fun starts after college.Visors of nylon lofts in the Big Apple start to fill your head. You imagine tons of money and how you're going to spend each cent. Of course, all your friends in New York work like dogs for shady Eurasian ethics, or else wait tables at places like Jockey's in the Bowery, and regularly get harassed out by every sort of nagging pervert and moron all over that Whore of Cities. The truth doesn't bug you, though, 'cause you know that you're gonna make it. Probably.

Whatever your prospects in the future, help feel that going to college is a total plum at leaving The Little Pond Where You Have Grown To Be Such A Big, Fine, Knowledgeable Fool. Your friends in New York are going to register in five minutes each semester without waiting in a single line, and likely float into dining rooms with nary a flash of an I.D. They sneer at the pitiful freshmen who envy him his four more years.

A college is a microcosmic cosmos, in which seniors are the possessors of potent and efficient talismans. The senior fully understands the cause and effect of his world, he moves through the campus serenely, knowing that every step is familiar, auspicious. Graduation means the loss, not of the knowledge so much as of the plane upon which it equals power and privilege. As a cosmic, collegiate symbol, with myths and rituals, the most awesome of these being certain Rituals of Passage which mark the waxing and waning stages of each individual's potency within the college cosmos. One of these is the ritual calling upon the senior to musingly speak of What It Means To Go To College, as I have been called upon to do here. Actually, apart from the role induced dread which I've discussed, I am glad to be continued on page ten
Nuclear Symposium To Be Held In Danal

David Dinsmore Comey

by RoseEllen Saasfippo

Four experts in the field of nuclearics will take part in a symposium to discuss the pros and cons of nuclear energy on Nov. 8 at 8 p.m. in Dana Hall.

The program, entitled “Spotlight on Nuclear Energy,” will be sponsored by the Chapin Board and Survival, a student environmental group.

Moderating the discussion will be Dr. Richard H. Goodwin, a retired Connecticut College professor of Botany and a member of the Connecticut Temporary Nuclear Power Evaluation Committee.

Shifting his-her weight from one foot to the other, Sandy Student waited amidst government majors, department chairma, vegetables, custodians and even some McCarthy supporters.

Peering around this line, Student espied a man emerging from The Room for any telltale signs of pain. A voice from behind a table abruptly rise.

"Do you have an allergy to eggs or any chronic illness?" this voice questioned. After giving two negative nods and his-her John Hancock, Student was allowed admittance into The Room.

Awaiting Student's entrance were two women dressed in crisp white uniforms. One of the women raised a silver object which resembled a Star Trek phaser gun.

With trembling fingers, Student fumbled for his-her sleeve. Suddenly, a slight sting hit and Student was trying to get to an apple he had received in the Montville Manor area when his motorcycle was stolen. Dr. Burchill, agency examiner, wrapped an un- gam.

There are two types of swine flu vaccines offered. Most people should have the Comyre, a purely swine flu vaccine.

Bivalent vaccines, taken by about 100 people so far, are made from the same swine and human virus. This contains immunity from both the swine and human strains of flu.

The Infirmary reports no serious inoculation reactions. A few cooling temperatures have appeared amongst recipients, but they cannot necessarily be attributed to the shot, since it contains only a non-living virus.

The most common reaction has been a soreness and soreness in the arm which lasts for a few days. Any other reaction would occur within 48 hours after inoculation.

Dr. Frederick R. McKeen, Student Health Service Director, expressed appreciation to all the student volunteers who helped in the program. If we continue these will be effective," he remarked about the vaccine.

In support of the modern vaccine's capability, Dr. McKeen pointed out last year's epidemic. Com were 500 reported cases in the Danal area, and the Coast Guard was one of two Coasties had undergone required vaccinations.

Dr. McKeen than compared the vaccination to taking out an insurance policy. "It's there if and when you need it," he reminded. The last day to take out this year's "Influenza policy," a swine flu vaccine.

Everett, supervisor of shipyard placement.

Redevelopment Agency moving toward renewal of Bank Street

The Redevelopment Agency is considering hiring an additional supervisor to administer with Bank Street Rehabilitation. F. Jerome Silverstein, agency chairman, informed the committee, a private development corporation, on Friday, Oct. 25, that the agency was discussing the possibility of leasing the building.

The new administrator would be in charge of $500,000 public and private investments within the Bank Street Urban Revitalization, which will in- crease the urban image. The agency, its attorney, and Halcyon are trying to complete the land transfers and agreements for administering the funds.

The committee voted in favor, on Oct. 15, of a starting date for the project and said the agency should do so. Other vandalism reported was the theft of the existing sign on the building.

On a generally sedate Halloween in Montville, one incident marred the evening for Jeffrey Dorantes, 13. The boy, from Montville, was about to eat an apple when his motorcycle was stolen. "I'd like to eat an apple," he said, and the apple was smashed into his face.

Other vandalism reported was the occurrence of broken windows, egg throwing, smashed mailboxes and open fire hydrants.

Still No Decision On Use Of Palmer Library

by Jessie Dorin

An issue sparking the curiosity and imagination of many Connecticut's students, faculty, and staff is what will become of Palmer Library now that it is unused and empty.

Until recently Palmer was to be adopted for central dining. This idea, however, was rescinded because it was necessary. The trustees have decided that Palmer will be designated for academic purposes. The question now, however, is which academic purpose.

This search for a proper use of Palmer of 45,000 square feet of space is a topic requiring intensive research. Presently this research is in its initial stages. President Amos is urging all departments and interested parties to state their needs and possible recommendations. In addition, this week, Mr. William L. Churchill, Assistant to the President, is sending out a memorandum to all department chairma asking them to review and update their space needs. A student-faculty committee on Long-Range Planning and Development will also make suggestions as to what should be situated in Palmer.

Possibilities of what will be located in the building are endless, but space is not and obviously not everyone can be satisfied.

The gamut runs from a combined bookshop and post office to a center for faculty, students, and staff activities. Dance, language lab, or computer center. When asked for ideas on what to do with the facility, director John H. Deltdom, Director of Development, estimates the cost of this project to be at least $2.2 million.

Taking into account the decision of what will be placed in Palmer, a search for an architect, contractor, and a foundation to pay for the bulk of the project's cost, Mr. Deltdom predicts it will be at least two years before Palmer can be used again.
Tickets For Piano Man
Available Monday

By Ritter and the Boys

On Sunday, December 5, WCNI will present Billy Joel in concert in Palmer Auditorium.

The concert will take place at 8 p.m. and tickets will go on sale to Conn College students on Saturday at 10 a.m. Students who don't have money to WCNI after College Council denied funds for the concert, there will be a discount of $1.50 offered on all seats, bringing the cost of seats for Conn College students down to $6 dollars.

Tickets for the general public will go on sale on Sunday, November 21, in Palmer Box Office. After that time, the student discount will no longer be available.

Organizers Ted Ritzkin and Keith Ritter express confidence in the ability of Joel's music to sell-out crowd. In addition to their feeling about Joel is the fact that his music has been well received by the public, but through the generosity of approximately 30 College students, his work will be heard. Students who have helped with the concert will be acknowledged in a New York firm for later use.

As usual, there will be no smoking or drinking of any kind in the Palmer auditorium during the night of the show. Ritter comments that "smoking and drinking have not been a problem in the past and Conn College audiences have always been extremely well behaved." When asked to explain this, Ritter said that "as long as the audience is willing to do with the choice of performers."

Conn College students are required to show their ID's when purchasing tickets at a discount and that they may not receive one ticket per ID. They may, however, buy as many tickets as they wish with one discount per ID. The discount will only be offered the first week of ticket sales and once sales have moved to Palmer Box Office, no discounts of any kind will be offered.

Billy Joel, also referred to as the "Piano Man," came from Oyster Bay, Long Island. He has four albums to his credit, his first being Turnstiles. His most well known release is Piano Man which earned Joel a Gold Record in 1974. Joel is most widely known for the songs Piano Man, Captain Jack, The Entertainer, and most recently, New York State of Mind and the Angry Young Man. Many of Joel's works are recorded by other artists. He has also been backed by a five piece band including drums, bass, horns, and Lesley, and two guitarists.

Joel has appeared on the Midnight Special and the Mike Douglas Show. His appearance at Connecticut College will be preceded by engagements at the Premier Theatre in New York and Symphony Hall in Boston.

Food Activist Workshop
At Conn College

by Carrie Howe

A Food Activist Workshop was held at Conn during 3 of the 4 days of the October break. Students and staff from New England schools including Holyoke, Amherst, Middlebury, Tufts, Wesleyan, University of Rhode Island, Yale, Wesleyan, Columbia, and Conn. The workshop was organized jointly by Sustenance and the Food Center of Washington, D.C. (the FAC is the national base for university action on food and hunger issues). The participants gathered to discuss food issues on a local, national and global basis and to learn about how awareness of these issues can be linked with personal action. Action on food issues is merely one way of working for social change within the system. Through learning about food issues, one becomes aware of the present critical world hunger issues, and simultaneously develops an understanding of the need for personal commitment to affect social change. Formation of a simple lifestyle and persistent action on social issues are two examples of personal commitment.

The Workshop was extremely successful. It brought together students of the Northeast who are involved in hunger action groups on their campuses. Through discussion and sharing of ideas and past campus projects, the participants gained a clearer understanding of what is happening at other schools in the area and how to promote food action projects. This contributed to the establishment of a sense of community and direction.

In order to learn about local programs working to combat hunger and malnutrition, field trips were taken to the Norwich Food Stamp Office, the Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) program office in Jewett City; and to 3 day-care centers in New London.

Speakers invited to the Workshop included Steve Catts of Bread for the World; Mary Roodkowski of the Boston Industrial Mission; Nathan Grey of Oxfam America; Steve Hayes of the YMCA; Ed Lazar of the American Friends Service Committee; Richard Sorna of Vocations for Social Change; and Paul Harwick, a representative of the AFSC.

Sustenance, the food-hunger action group at Conn, will be organizing this practice on a large scale in the near future. This practice will continue during the year. A long-range project planned for this year is to work for increased community buying by Conn students and Conn College audiences as part of the Community Buying Center. As a result, more Conn College students and Conn College audiences will be participating in the Community Buying Center. As a result, more Conn College students and Conn College audiences will be participating in the Community Buying Center. Infirmary Gets New Shrink

A New London psychiatrist has been appointed clinical consultant to the Student Health Service for the 1976-77 academic year.

Dr. Michael O'Brien will be available for consultation with individual patients referred by the Infirmary and will also serve as a liaison psychiatrist to the Infirmary staff to help complement their work with the psychiatric needs of the Connecticut College community.

Dr. O'Brien is an attending psychiatrist at the Lawrence and Memorial Hospitals and conducts his private practice in New London. He is also a clinical instructor in psychiatry at Yale University School of Medicine.

Dr. O'Brien is a graduate of St. Lawrence University, received his M.D. degree from Georgetown University and interned at Albany Medical Center. From 1968 to 1971, he was a medical officer in the U.S. Navy.

He is a postdoctoral fellow in the Department of Psychiatry at Yale University School of Medicine from 1971 to 1974 and was a chief resident in psychiatry at the West Haven Veterans Administration Hospital and the Psychiatric Consultation-Liaison Service of Yale-New Haven Hospital.

Bob Dylan makes a very pleasant appearance on the album in a tune he wrote called "sign language." Stone Collection On Display In Cummings

by Red Turf Murphy

A footprint into Mansur Gallery in Cummings is a stride into the past, with assorted objects from the Allan Stone Collection on display. The exhibit, (Oct. 24 - Nov. 19) largely composed of folk art and colorful, interviewing tapestries, is a change from the recent, futuristic sculpture of Douglas Abdell in that the objects are antique, with no pretensions about the approaching age. The objects seem content to be members of a distant, forgotten world; they are objects about the approaching ages. The sculptures are objects composed of folk art and colorful, harmonies emanating from instruments of both music and voice.

Perhaps the most captivating of all the objects is the Morro Castle, a worldship model. The ship was constructed carefully, meticulously, and with a yearning for open sea navigation. Model ship builders will appreciate its rugged look and intricate simplicity. Not to be forgotten are the magnificent tapestries and quilts that hang methodically on the walls, each markedly dissimilar from the others by design, color patterns, and texture. Credit is due mainly to Maureen McCabe of the Art Department not just for the adequate hanging, but for the insight of introducing a show that discovers the future by entertaining the past.

As previously stated in a preceding article pertaining to the classical concert on the Connecticut College campus, there was a student recital on October 28th in Dana Hall. To all those who attended it was not doubt found to be a timely interruption from all the fanfare of the ordinary day. Although the concert did not linger past nine o'clock, it encompassed a wide scope of composers as well as a multitude of melodious harmonies emanating from instruments of both music and voice.

In a rather brief summation and review, I shall comment on certain aspects of an enlightening evening. The first piece was composed by Johann Sebastian Bach, and was entitled Prelude and Fugue in B flat minor. This performance, baroque piece was performed by pianist Corinne Conover, who managed to install a pervasive air of the renaissance about Dana. Benedetto Marcello's Sonata in E minor was heard immediately after Bach. Then a piece of abstract quality by Claude Debussy, entitled La Cathedrale engloutie of The Sunken Cathedral was presented to a rather unsuspecting audience, who surely could not have been exposed to the Relevence mode of music of Debussy.

We were then carried back to the seventeenth century as Laurie Conover commenced to play Gia il sole dal Gange by Alessandro Scarlatti. Susan Fuller sung the lyrics to this romantic piece, echoing the melodramatic phrase to her love; "Don't hurt me just let me die." It was both evocative and amusing to that old love theme of unrequited love. A piece entitled Arua by Eugene Bozza was played next, employing the alto saxophone and Mary Clifford on the piano. There was a definite amount of fiery 200's Jazz age immersed in a multitude of classical notes. It reminded me of an excellent recording composed by Claude Bolling, in which he engages the support of Jean Pierre Rampal on the flute, to create this sort of twist of the upright classical tradition. The title of this highly recommended album is Suite for flute and jazz piano (on Columbia records).

The music of the next piece was composed by Robert Schumann. Henrik Heiner wrote the words to this favorite of all lovers, a loveyick youth who finds happiness in the eyes of his beloved. In a very rare rendering in German, I'm sure that Tom Howland was able to convince the audience that the enormous and arduous task of love fulfillment is possible in our modern society.

The two final pieces of the evening were performed by Lawrence Walters on alto saxophone and Laurie Conover on piano. The first piece was composed by A. Gretchmannoff, entitled Deux Miniatures, Op. 23. The sound of a nostalgic jazzy pattern was reiterated by the similarity to the opening bars from the music to Summer, Lasty, Gavotte des Damoiselles by Eugene Bozza was performed. Despite the French origins of this seventeenth century minuet-like dance, I detected a twist towards a buoYant and frolicking theme often found in Yiddish music.

The recital was just one in a series of many entertaining recitals. On Tuesday, Nov. 9th, 12 faculty recitals of Chamber music in Dana at 8:30 p.m. Then on Nov. 16th, Itzhak Perlman was slated for a concert in this coliseum. The highly praised Guarneri String Quartet, repleted to be the best of this era, is slated for a performance in Dana at 8:30 on Sunday, Nov. 30th (admission charge). So do take advantage of this opportunity as censors would allow. Re-made several times over the past forty years, director Victor Fleming's original is clearly the best. The sparks start flying in Dana at 8 p.m.

A footstep into Mansur Gallery in Cummings is a stride into the past, with assorted objects from the Allan Stone Collection on display. The exhibit, (Oct. 24 - Nov. 19) largely composed of folk art and colorful, interviewing tapestries, is a change from the recent, futuristic sculpture of Douglas Abdell in that the objects are antique, with no pretensions about the approaching age. Thanks For The Memories

by Susan Gorvins

This past weekend I had a long and satisfying stay at a Conn. alumnae of the class of '54 who by request shall remain nameless. I found it amusing that innocent dinner table discussion and turned into a grueling interaction interspersed with comments like, "You can't be serious!". "No Shill!". "Please go your scrapbook!" and hysterical laughter. Obviously there have been many changes on campus since the '50's but it is comforting that many of Conn's greatest traditions have gone to pot. Thank God some of those things are things you imagine: having to sign in and out every time you left campus stating where you were going. And for a weekend, of course, you had to say where you were, who your chaperone was, and dinner attendance was stated.

Peformance Center Explained

by Kim Lawrence

"A Peace Center? Isn't that sort of passé?" "Non-violent resistance? Just that got out with the sixties?"

As a member and co-founder of the Student Union's Peace Center, I feel it is necessary to explain some of the reasons the Peace Center was established.

By "uniting" these converging students, the protest would not only be more effective, but the student who approached the Union originally would realize that he is not in his battle alone.

Another reason for the organization of the Student Union, according to Hamilton's famous exercise in nostalgia, I feel a need to explain some of the reasons the Peace Center was established.

By the time you read this we will have a new national president. Some of us believe, however, that neither candidate has the most important issue: national defense.

Washington told our latest weapons advancements are going to keep us safe from our enemies. There is a vocal minority which believes that this is false, and moreover a cruel delusion to the American people. To them the concept of "defensive" is an outmoded one in the nuclear age. When two states have the ability to wipe out the entire world many times over, does a man care what can do it more times? Some others argue that we should improve our weaponry to the point where we could launch a preemptive first strike, which would make it impossible for the enemy to retaliate. Dissenters argue that the resultant fallout would make the earth inhabitable anyway.

Many of us here at Conn. believe that this question and others concerning the violence men and women do to one another should not remain unexplored. I hope this and other articles will stir up a good old-fashioned uproar on campus.

Student Union To Organize at Conn

by Nancy Singer

Every student at the Connecticut College campus belongs to the recently talked about Student Union.

Student Union means student body, and exists to provide students with a sense of camaraderie in airing their views on various issues relating to the campus or the community.

Jeff Hamilton, an active participant in the Union's proceedings, believes that the Union is a necessary institution on campus because "students are hesitant to go to the student government with their beliefs or desires for action. The students need to be able to talk to someone who feels as they do to accomplish their mission."

An instance when the Student Union would be useful to a student would be in the case of a protest. In reference to the Trident situation, if a student wanted to protest the launching, he could go to the Union and ask that a protest be organized to other students with the same views.

By "uniting" these converging students, the protest would not only be more effective, but the student who approached the Union originally would realize that he is not in his battle alone.

Campus for the season's finale last Friday. Coach Bobonon took a look at his team before the match and cried, "Boy do we need help." Help came from his inspired players who did not wish to end the season on a losing note. Bobonon, in a fit of coaching genius awarded Dickson the first singles spot against Fairfield on the basis of his outstanding play against the Coast Guard, but it was Bug Wolfe and the Camels off to a good start with a quick 6-4, 6-0 triumph. Next, Pinkle Craft came through with a 7-6, 6-2 win over his obviously outclassed and unwitting foe. With the team score standing at 1-1, the match swung towards Conn on the racquet of Larry Yahia. Although admission he can't play as he would like to, "Wyane, I can't serve today," Yahia played gristy tennis and pulled out a 9-7 win. Yahia has proved to be a clutch player this season, dispelling the notion of his knack for choking in pressure situations ... Well, almost.

While a rooting section of at least 3 looked on, the Camels needed only 1 (of 2) doubles matches to secure the team victory. Bug Wolfe and Tinkerette Koza supplied the winning point with a routine three set victory and the match was Conn's 4-3. Once again, dinner was in Cro and Assistant Coach Greg Yahia cried, "Pinkly, I don't want a double roll!. For a rare moment, Bobonon became serious and could be quoted as saying, "With the defeat of Fairfield, Conn College's fall tennis team at least emerged from the "non-competitive" stage. Fairfield was a team that soundly beat the only team we lost to (Coast Guard). I was especially proud of Peter Craft, Larry Yahia and Ethan Wolfe. It bodes well for the spring team. Returning to normal (3?) ways, the team headed for the pool to watch Conn's co-ed swim team. No observers have been able to decide which part of the co-ed team was being eyed closely by the tennis players. The team reassigned for a final fall get-together at the Halloween Party. Dickson did a fine imitation of Dr. Renee Richards and Greg Yahia followed with an almost believable impersonation of a man. The rest of the team came as they are: Wolfe as a bag, Koza as an open window; Craft a non-personality, Larry Yahia as a missing person and, stealing the show, Bobonon as a homosexual.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission, which replaced the Atomic Energy Commission, was also invited to send a speaker, but never responded. After repeated phone calls from the symposium's sponsors the NRC declined the offer.

Last week the camels won two games extending their already awesome winning streak to a numerical four. They were happy.

36. First, they beat Roger Williams College 5 to 1. Billy Clark scored two goals, John Perry had one, Steven Litwin had one, and David Bohonon had his very first goal of the season. He was tickled pink about it.

37. Carter Sullivan was polled as hero of the game having played aggressive defense and assisting on two goals from a fallback spot.

38. Other stars included Parsons, My "crazzta, Smith and Mckee.

39. Howie smiled as he entered the game. Henry Howser was very serious.

40. The camels then traveled to Rhode Island College participating in an exciting match.

The paper contains not only recommendations for expansion but for constraints which we think will prevent us from making some of the mistakes other schools have made. Most important, it is not designed to duplicate the programs at Trinity, Wesleyan, Smith and Brown but to meet what we believe are the needs of this campus. It contains recommendations that we feel must be answered immediately in order to help comply with Title IX and give our students a quality program. It contains recommendations that must be addressed in the future but must be included in any master plan.

It was our intention to address a problem and recommend solutions that we think are practical and beneficial to Connecticut College and the quality education we offer.

All the members of the Student Advisory Committee, Physical Education staff and myself think what we propose makes sense. I am certain that anyone who will take the time to look into it and discuss it, will agree. I am also confident that anyone who will follow the above mentioned groups would be pleased to meet with individuals or groups to discuss what we have proposed. Only with this kind of information can any rational opinion be formed.

Mr. Luce is chairman of the department of Physical Education.

Week of the Mismatch

By BIFF AND HAPPY

The teams were mismatched, the weather was cold, fans were absent and so were Biff and Happy in former days as a football. All the top teams in the league took turns beating up cellar dwellers in scrimmages that were lacking in both excitement and fans. Hamilton started the season by losing the once proud JA-Windhund team 21-0. Mirrison rolled over Burdick 49-14, but Biff and Happy, always squeamish, avoided the carnage.

Harkness was to go against K.B. in the week's only exciting game, but this was postponed to a more mellow date. Instead, Marshall was to go against the Harkness monsters. Harkness easily routed the men from Mars 33-14 as Daggan scored twice and Green three times. Andy Krevelin was a standout defender with three goals, followed by a book shot lateral to Daggan who scored.

Hamilton met Quad on Friday and won for the second time in a week, 47-7. Fred Hadley West figures to be a key factor in Hamilton's daghtful with K.B. for the only contested playoff berth left. Meanwhile, on Saturday morning, Larrabee was to have gone against Marshall in the league's toilet bowl. Apparently enough, both teams decided to deep through the game and add another loss to their records. Lambdin did show for the later game, but once it got underway they must have had second thoughts as they went down to defeat 49-14 at the hands of JA-Winhund.

Digression was the better part of valor as Larrabee decided not to deal with the harsh reality of Morrisson. We could not agree with them more. Watching the games this week was not unlike early Christian-Lions games with the Lions favored by 14. Trivia question - did any spectators other than relatives stay for the duration of any of the weeks matches? Answer - Biff and Happy do not know because they could not handle the harshness of Morrisson.

Harkness leads the league in offense with a forty points-per-game average. K.B. leads the league in defense, allowing only sixty points-per-game. Next week will showcase sleek previews of playoff teams and their respective supermen, so be mellow and stay tuned.

PLAYER OF THE WEEK

FRED HADLEY WEST - The unsung hero of Hamilton is the keystone of the stubborn Hamilton defense. Fred is now a double threat, playing runningback on a revitalized offense which swamped two opponents last week.

Tennis Finishes With Split

by Jim Dicker

The Men's Tennis Team finished their season with a split.

"The only singles victor for Conn was Jon Dicker, who, after dropping the first five games, rallied to take the next twenty for a 6-2, 6-1 triumph."

On a changeover, Dicker asked Ishii how he said Ying-Yang in Chinese. Ishii answered, "ahhhhh, 'Dik.'"
The doubles team of Larry Yasha and Theo Greenberg took a pro set victory to make the final tally 6-2 in favor of the Coast Guard. The Cadets, and Coach Wayne Bohonmon in particular, were very bitter after the match. Once again, they had allowed an inferior Cadet squad to muscle a match away. Bohonmon was overheard yelling to Ethan Welde, "You can walk back to school!" John Koss, who teamed with Welde to drop their doubles match 8-4 after leading 7-1, tried to kill himself by quickly downing a Cro Grinder. Pinkie Craft was thankful that the team had missed a Harris dinner and Dicker could be heard muttering, "We pay for their courts; at least they could remove the dead flies."

After that dismal defeat, prospects did not look good for victory when powerful Fairfield University invaded the Conn.

Night Cross-Country?

by Saul Rubin

The increased popularity of running directly reflects the widespread movement back to the basic and more personal elements of life. The runner does not concern himself with such complex worries as drabbling, smoking, or serve and volley. Running only requires the rapid placement of one leg in front of the other, easily accomplished even by the beginner.

There are no equipment problems to speak of: no balls, no sticks, no fifty dollar racquets.

The runner need only bring his legs, and God gave them to everybody as a birthday present. In fact, the fanatical runner says that if He had meant us to play any other sport, He would have given us racquets for hands, pads of shoulders, or skates for feet. It comes as no surprise then that more and more people are withdrawing from the complicated commitments of other sports, and life in general, and are seeking refuge in the quiet and individual experience called running. Enter the Conn College indoor track team.

Starting September 1, a group of runners have gathered daily in front of the chapel (to be close to the Commissioner) and trained for the cross country season. The team entered over ten meets, and emerged with a record close to .500.

Sports View: Quotations From Chairman Luce

by Charles Luce

In the past several weeks, a number of articles, by students and others, have been written to PUNDIT concerning the Physical Education Departmental Paper presented to President Ames in August. The tone of these articles indicates that there is some misunderstanding about the content.

This paper contains immediate and pertinent comments that we feel need to be taken in order to give our department the opportunity to meet the responsibilities assigned to it.

First, it is important to understand the way in which the paper was written. It is the objective of our department to give every single person at the Conn the opportunity to participate in some kind of physical activity. We recognize that not all people have the same commitment, desire or ability to participate on the same level. So, we are doing this by trying to keep a proper balance between Physical Education courses, intramurals, intercollegiate sports and recreational use of all Physical Education facilities in cooperation with the Director of Crozier-Williams. A fifth area of participation is Physical Education-related clubs which we help to function in cooperation with the Student Government.

Our students come from good to excellent high school and prep school programs. The comparison of our programs with the ones they have known, Dues does not hurt their expectations for the Conn. They also compare with schools Connecticut College competes with for students like Trinity, Wesleyan, Brown and Smith.

Participation in all these areas has grown rapidly in the past two years. This increase is due to a realization by many people that a strenuous physical workout can be good for you emotionally as well as physically. We have also been attracting more students who consider this important to them. This is especially true in the classes of 1979 and 1980.

Last Spring I discovered, in a meeting with our Student Advisory Committee and staff, that although participation had indeed increased, we were fostering frustration in our program. This frustration centers around the quality of our present offerings and the limitations in certain sports seasons.

Our students come from good to excellent high school and prep school programs. The comparison of our programs with the ones they have known, Dues does not hurt their expectations for the Conn. They also compare with schools Connecticut College competes with for students like Trinity, Wesleyan, Brown and Smith.

The Physical Education staff and myself decided to meet this summer to: 1) Redefine our departmental philosophy, 2) Address the problems in our programs and 3) Evaluate and draft recommendations which, in light of our departmental philosophy and position as a small college, we felt were necessary to bring our department up to a new standard.

Krivatz's Korner

Shape Up USCAG!

by Andy Krevolin

Contrary to popular belief, those guys you see dressed in blue and white every Friday night are neither car parkers nor Tennessee Tuxedo imitators. Those people are students at the United States Coast Guard Academy, who, just like your common Conn student spend a good part of their weekend in Palmer or Cro. And like the normal student here they pay the same $1.00 for the movie or party of the evening. All this is fine and good.

Conn and the Guard have students taking classes at the institution at which they are not enrolled. Another fair exchange. The Coast Guard students will pay the same prices at the Whaler City Invitational as the students of the host school. The charge here will be the same in all other athletic events too. The semi-finals or the finals.

The problem arises when a Conn student wants to go to a Coast Guard sporting event. Across the street the Cadets are admitted to events free of charge, while for a football game the Conn student is charged the exorbitant rate of $4.00 for a reserved seat or $2.50 to watch a flag football contest or a Camel hoop contest!

Were these funds needed to support the athletic program the charge would be warranted. The Coast Guard Athletic Department however, like all departments there, is funded entirely by the Federal Government. With the outrageous size of the Defense Budget you cannot expect to come away from the gate at these games is needed to buy a new kickin' tee.

"It is time that an agreement between the two schools is ironed out which will be advantageous to both the students of the schools and the institutions themselves."

We here at Conn should not have to accept the short end of the stick any longer.
