Students From Foreign Lands To Meet Here

Religious Council Plans International Weekend For January 18.19

An International Weekend for foreign students in New England, sponsored by the Religious Council, will be held at Connecticut College January 18-19. The purpose of the conference is to bring together the foreign women exchange students in New England colleges, in order that they may interchange ideas and that we may become better acquainted with them. Invitations have been issued to foreign students at Vassar, Wellesley, Smith, Holyoke, Radcliffe, and Wheaton.

The theme of the weekend "Extending Student Fellowship to World Community" is connected with the Religious Council's topic for the year of "the world com-munity." The Interclub Council which is also associated with this conference will represent the other college clubs.

The program for the weekend will open with registration and a tea in Windham at 4:00 Saturday afternoon. Dinner, to which members of Religious Council and International Relations Club are invited, will be served in Knowlton House. Following the banquet there will be a talk in Knowlton Salon by Mr. Ralph Cleland Scott of New York city, chairman of the organization for help to foreign students in this country. Games and folk dances will conclude the Saturday activities.

The foreign students will sleep in various college dormitories that night, meeting for breakfast Sunday morning in Buck Lodge.

In place of the regular Sunday vespers there will be a special morning chapel service for college students as well as the visitors. Mr. Scott will again be the speak

Boston Orchestra Gives Second Fine Performance Here

By Sally Kiskadden '41 On Wednesday evening, January 8th, the Connecticut College Concert Series was proud to present Dr. Serge Koussevitsky conducting the Boston Symphony Orchestra in the first concert of 1941. The performance was as perfect in execution as a great orchestra under a great leader can achieve. Dr. Koussevitsky, always a gracious and compelling figure, evoked the utmost in musical responses from his men.

Much has been written of the superb flexibility and precision of the string section of the Boston Orchestra. In the Haydn Symphony in G major one was particularly able to appreciate these qualities. The contrapuntal intricacies of this work are developed to the highest degree, and the orchestra, playing without the brasses and tympani, gave a magnificently subtle and coherent performance.

Beethoven's Third Overture to Leonore" is a work of emphatic contrasts. The delicacy of the melody as played by the strings is unbelievable. Progressing to a brilliant crescendo the Overture ends triumphantly with the collaboration of the full orchestra.

The evening closed with the playing of the Second Symphony of Sibelius. As in the case of Tschaikowsky and Debussy, the passing years have endeared the music of the great Finn to our ears. Where once we may have found a melodic diffuseness, there is now harmonious unity and richness. Dr. Koussevitsky emphasized this cohesion without sacrificing the haunting

The organization of a new association, the New London Musical Cooperative, was announced this week by Dr. Charles G. Chakerian, assistant professor of Sociology. The organization has two main purposes: (1) to secure for its members the savings and other benefits resulting from group purchase of records and other musical supplies and equipments; (2) to afford its members a practical education in the principles and methods ot cooperation.

According to a statement released today by the association, membership in the organization is open to all persons on payment of a membership fee of fifty cents. This nominal fee is to be refunded at the time of the member's redrawal should such a step be recommended by the executive committee.

The cooperative shall conform strictly to the basic Rochdale Principles of Cooperation:

(1) On all matters decided by membership vote, each member shall have one vote, regardless of the size of his investment or the amount of his purchases.

(2) Purchases through the or-ganization shall be made at competitive price levels.

(3) The share of each member in the profits of the organization shall be in proportion to the amount of his purchases.

(4) A low rate of interest shall be paid on any loans which the organization may take out for the purpose of securing operating cap-Ital.

Cold Prevention

"Plenty of rest and fresh air are the best defenses against a cold," replied Dr. Dorothea Scoville, college physician, when she was asked how to avoid the effects of the germs now prevalent on campus. "If anyone feels that she is getting a cold, please let the infirmary be the judge of whether she should attend classes, stay in bed in the dorm, or come to the infirmary.

She smiled as she concluded. We have an amazing way of finding room for all who need our attention.'

Discusses Drama, Radio, Journalism And Motion Pictures At Convocation

"The American theater is the creation of the American people and cannot be better or worse than we are," revealed Dr. Gorge Beiswanger, Assistant Editor of Theater Arts Monthly, in his convocation address, "From Drama to Theater," Tuesday, January 14, in Palmer Auditorium. American drama as well as the merits of radio, motion picture, and journalism as arts were included in his talk which was followed by a discusion period.

The eminent dramatic critic compared our modern American theater with other great dramatic epochs such as the Elizabethan period. Twenty-five years ago, however, he added, vaudeville was the entertainment of the common people. Dr. Beiswanger characterized its successors, the good musicals of today as raucous but exhilerant. Flo Ziegfield, he pointed out, put vaudeville in rhinestones to make it presentable to those who looked down on the theater. Playwrights today, he continued, write with the other arts and contempory problems in mind. Able painters, he disclosed, have learned to transfer their art to the theater in creating the environment for the play. He explained, moreover, that musicians such as Cole Porter have adapted their songs to the theater. "Dance," Dr. Beiswanger ex-claimed, "has served as the most important catalyist for music and the theater." Modern dance is not abstracted but theatrically motivat-

A challenge to every member of the student community is presented in the "Reports of the President and other Officers to the Board of Trustees," which is contained in the December 30, 1940, Con-place in Heaven. To achieve this, necticut College bulletin.

President Blunt enumerates the many gifts which the College has received within the year, among them the Matthies laboratories in New London hall, the Palmer and Carnegie grants for library development, Grace Smith house, and increased scholarship funds. College progress is likewise illustrated by the development of Holmes Hall for the Music Department, and by the new course in Latin of which death plays the greater American history. These benefits, and the many others brought to our attention by the report, show how much is done for the College by those who do not study here. Have you ever stopped to think how little each of us contributes to our college, in proportion to what we receive from it? News does not advocate taking a collection of money for our Alma Mater, but we do believe that we all can contribute more than we do to our college life. We believe there are interests lying dormant within our group which should be awakened, stimulated. Most of us can afford to give more time than we do to the work of the Defense committee and other extra curricular organizations. And all of us will receive from our College in proportion to what we give.

Werfel Writes Of Strong Character

By Marjorie Toy '41

Franz Werfel, writing as a character in his own novel, Embezzled Heaven, explains to another that he might have chosen any number of subjects-he might have Justine Clark '42 told the story of one of the refugees who has experienced the physical and mental terrors of persecution, but instead he has preferred to write about a humble Slav servant woman, one unaffected by the upheaval in store for her country, a woman of no consequence politically, economically, or socially. Her only distinction is an unswerving belief in her own immutable, indivisible personality. Because she maintains her irrational, but positive conception of Heaven when men about her turn to a conception of nihilism, Werfel believes she is a character of more consequence.

It is not out of love that she sacrifices, but for her own ert's "Yvonne," which was shown eternity. Teta has the rare power at the World's Fair, is represented of seeing her existence as a whole part. Therefore she will sacrifice to buy her way to Heaven. She is defrauded in her efforts, her plan fails, but from there she goes on, achieving eventual success. Teta is a character of the imagination, yet she possesses a reality more convincing than many an historical character. The importance of the book seems to lie in the portraval of the strength of her individualism. Teta prefers to maintain her own identity even in Heaven, where she firmly expects to have a room of her own. But she is not a rebel, nor is she a reformer; she accepts her station in life. She believes her rights are limited, but upon those limited rights, she insists.

Dear Editor:

"It's terrible! They ought to do something about it.'

Almost always, when things are "terrible" we use the convenient pronoun they. Maybe that's why we have three persons in our language—so that we can attribute the "terrible" things to them and what is at all tolerable to ourselves. Then, after making that smug distinction, we can ask with a superior scorn, "Why don't they do something about it?

First of all, let's liquidate the they's and elevate the we's to an executive position. Everyone is vitally interested in the problems of the world and the problems on the campus, but too often the discussion is put on ice by a "why don't they do something about it?" Why should we ignore the opportunities everywhere on campus for us to accomplish the deed?

Let's make a New Year's resolution that in the future, even more than in the past, we shall consider our Amalgamation meetings and house meetings as an opportunity for WE The People to "do some-thing about it." Let's not forget the Student Faculty Forum, which originated as a student plan and now represents student opinion only to the degree that we are willing to express ourselves. If we refer to Student Faculty Forum sometimes when we ask, "Why don't they do something about it?" it would be well to remember that our suggestions for discussion top-ics are always welcome. If, moreover, there is any particular issue that "they just seem to let it slide,' why not start the ball rolling by means of Free Speech? New Year's resolutions are in order, so why don't we resolve "to do something about it," that is, about anything they have been neglecting.

In "Hudson's Bay" at the Roxy, Paul Muni brings to life another biographical portrait in the person of Pierre Esprit Radissson, French-Canadian fur-trapper extraordinaire, who led the English into the unexplored parts of Canada and started the Hudson Bay Fur Trading Company. The picture and the performance of Paul Muni has been panned pretty thoroughly by the reviewers, but this reviewer thinks that although the movie is dull, Mr. Muni at times shows a winning Gallic charm that he has never had a chance to show before (Continued to Page Five) and which is utterly captivating.

In the singular, Tucitcennoc spells Connecticut-the other way 'round. The "Tucs," for short! As an organization, the Tucs are noisy, for they are a body of singing souls. # Pres. Advises Facing Fears With Courage

Finding Difficulties And Facing Them Will Improve Democracy

"The need for courage" was the theme of President Katharine Blunt's weekly Chapel service on Tuesday, January 14. She stressed the fact that all of us have more than the usual need for courage now, due to the war in Europe, and unsettled conditions in America. "It is very easy for us to become distressed," she said, "because of the great need for food in Europe, because of delay in sending aid to Britain, because of the frequent lack of cooperation between labor and capital, and because of the fear that the gains made by labor may be lost due to the great national emergency. All this leads to our great uncertainty as to what will become of the world in the next few years."

Right here at college, the Presilent emphasized, a number of us nave need for courage because of some great personal grief. Then, some of the Freshmen have the realization that examinations, which are new to many of them, lie ahead, and need the courage to face them

The question which we must an-ower is "How are we going to find the courage to face our fears and difficulties?" First of all, the President pointed out, we mustn't run away from them. "We must look at our fears, not brood on them," she said. "We must look straight at them, and analyze them wisely, then do the thing we are afraid of doing without hesitation. Don't run from examinations in mind or act. Instead, take an interest in them, and treat them as a wonderful and new adventure.

'I have just been reading a life of Eleanor Roosevelt, written by a newspaper woman who has known her intimately," she continued. She describes briefly the time when Mr. Roosevelt was first stricken with infantile paralysis,

French Film, "The Lively Activities Fill Harvest," Will Be Given Tomorrow

The French department of Connecticut College will present the French film "The Harvest" in the is a Marcel Pagnol Production, based on the novel "Regain," of Jean Giono. The running time is 80 minutes.

It is the story of a deserted village and a deserted man, Panturle, a farmer who would not leave Aubignane, for he felt that as long as he was there, Aubignane was still a village. By staying, he was turned by solitude into a human savage. Then the girl Arsule came that way. She was helping Gedemus, the scissors grinder. When Panturle told her of his dream to turn Aubignane back into a living village again, Arsule stayed. They cussions on the roles which youth worked together. Their celebration of New Year's Eve was unique and impressive, so our Friends said: barndancing and singing and, in particular, the twenty minutes of silent meditation the group kept through midnight. Mary Lou had spent the previous week-end in the Week-End Work Camp sponsored by the Friends' Group at the Wharton House Settlement in Philadelphia. She tells of the co-operative living with other college students, teachers, and secretaries, eating Co-op food, and of helping to renovate the neighborhood, the purpose for which the camp was formed.

Among the renovations she performed were varnishing a bedroom suite, caning chairs, chopping a tree, and mending clothes for the French. Ellie Abrahams '44, Youth Hostel enthusiast, went to the sixth AYH birthday party that lasted from December 27 to the first of January at the National Youth Hostel in Northfield. Hostelers of all ages reunited to have a weekend of mountain climbing, folkdancing, relaxation, singing, and swapping of Hostel stories. When the snow didn't come to Northfield, the group went out looking for it, but had to compromise on sliding on their sit-upons down the icy slope of Mt. Grace in New Hampshire. They pitched hay and went for a buggy ride before breakfast. Hot grape juice with spice in t was the Hostelers' toast to the New Year; they greeted it with silent meditation for their members abroad.

In illustrating this point, the speaker told the story of a minister, who, thinking to keep amazed father asked him how he had managed to complete the map so quickly. The child answered and found that a man was pictured on the other side. As soon as he had pieced the man together, the world reappeared correctly.

Through our trials and tribulations we build character; therefore it is a mistake to remove these socalled obstacles to happiness. The benefit of constant testing is seen in the case of this present war. Although the war is unquestionably a great disaster, through it Britain has found unity she might not otherwise have found.

The world is made up of the doings of men, and man is what he does. Therefore, if men consistently try to improve themselves and develop their own characters, the state of the world will take care of

The President Acts

President Roosevelt, in his annual message to Congress, stated our fundamental defense policy as the determination of the United States to preserve democracy and to aid nations resisting aggression by dictatorships. He has presented a "lend-lease" bill to Congress which would enable him to give virtually unlimited aid to Great Britain. It meets crtiicism in and out of rage against the native population Congress. However, Wendell Willkie and William Green, President of the A. F. of L., have pledged their support.

Defense Measures Progress

Secretary Hull announced that final agreement had been reached with Great Britain on the sites of eight United States air and naval bases in British possessions off the Atlantic coast. There is a plan formulating for an auto-air plant partnership which will aid the defense drive and distribute the burden of armament production. An investigation of the U. S. #### The War

Italy is still being routed by Greek troops in Albania and by the English in Africa. Germany has had to give active aid to the harassed Italians; seemingly Hitler no longer considers the conflict local. England and Germany suffer devastation from air bombings but another major peril is war at sea. Both sides realize that open channels to obtain food and supplies mean eventually the difference between victory and defeat.

Mink, blue fox, and leopard mingled with the varied evening wraps and jackets which created a wintery background for the long awaited performance of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

The full length Alice blue evening wrap worn by Lenny Tingle '42 caught my eye immediately up-on her entrance. A large blue bow matching her wrap perched saucily atop her blond head.

Helen Madden '44 made a striking appearance in a blue fox jacket and muff, topping her red velvet princess dress.

Petite Eleanor Fuller '41 provided a contrast with her white wool coat and black fur muff. The rhinestone clips at her throat added just the right touch.

Betty Burford '41 wore a beautiful gray wool wrap with applique of silver kid leaves.

During the intermission I spied Becky Green '42 descending the stairway in a swish green and white candy striped taffeta with a lace voke.

In the lobby, Elizabeth Kirkpatrick '41 made a perfect picture silhouetted against the window. The blue wall of the lobby set off her shell pink gown with its draped satin bodice and ballet skirt.

Peggy Heminway '43 looked charming as usual in her periwinkle blue dinner dress adorned with a many colored rhinestone belt.

The wide girdle and straps of velvet in various shades from shell pink to maroon created a stunning effect on the pale pink chiffon frock of Isabel Vaughan '43.

Mary Ann Knotts '43 was arresting in bright red velveteen with full pockets on either side of the skirt. The gown was climaxed by a straight cut black velveteen jacket with small full buttons down the front.

A symphony of colors was the changeable taffeta gown of Barbara Pilling '44. Another Freshman, Patsy Garrett '44, looked handsome in her midnight blue bengaline off the shoulder neckline, and its voluminous skirt.

Girls of Bowling Green (Ohio) State university pay 16 cents for a full dinner, boys pay 19 cents.

Doubtless you remember our tale of Joan Parrington '41 who knitted one sock for each man and enclosed an I.O.U. for the second. Well, it has its sequel. She sent the socks away for Christmas and immediately forgot which size and which color she gave to which man. She proceeded by instinct. But, feminine intuition is not infallible, because on receipt of his second sock, "A" wrote that if it was for Montague '41 became so afflicted financial reasons that she made it that she took to smoking a corn cob green instead of tan and a ten instead of a twelve, not to hesitate to call on him.

Everybody realizes that a coiffure with bangs has a fascination all its own, but one poor senior, Ann Peabody, produced an additional effect with hers. As did everyone else in the class of '41 she became imbued with making her hair look interesting. She took the scissors and started to cut. The result was startling! By mistake she had pulled a clump of back hair forwards and she now has a crew cut along the center of her head. * * *

We've heard, "I won't wash my face because it only gets dirty again," but, an innovation along this line was introduced by a soph who refused to unpack because she would be leaving again after exams. What we can't understand is why she didn't leave her clothes at home in the first place.
