Physicist-administrator named new College president

by Carin Gordon

The seventh president of Connecticut College will be Oakes Ames, a professor of physics and chairman of that department and former assistant to the president and academic vice president at the State University of New York at Stony Brook.

Mr. Ames, a specialist in experimental nuclear physics, atomic beams and astrophysics, stated in an interview with this reporter that one of his main goals will be "to make the College an exciting place to study as well as a rewarding place to live."

The presidential selection committee comprised of trustees, faculty, students and alumni, chaired by the W.E.S. Griswold, chairman of the Board of Trustees, who had served for five months to find a new president. After President Charles E. Shain announced his resignation to be effective June 30.

Mr. Ames was introduced to the College at an all campus meeting yesterday. He formally takes office July 1.

"Despite the fact that it will be a tight financial, he added, "I am looking forward to new policies with a new money in my fund raising, but we will have to pay out time on campus trying to get the very best of every out the most who make up this campus. After all, the best salesmen are alumni."

Mr. Ames was impressed with the "sense of community and shared purpose" on this campus, and this was one of his main reasons for coming here.

The first to the new president, according to Mr. Ames, is to "learn as much as possible about the College as quickly as possible."

A graduate of Milton Academy and Harvard, where he rowed on the varsity lightweight crew, he received his doctorate in physics from The Johns Hopkins University and is currently at SUNY at Stony Brook in 1966, he taught at Princeton University for six years.

Mr. Ames views the role of president as that of a teacher "as a form of communication."

He hopes to be able to teach one course here, as well as perform his administrative duties.

Though committed to the ideals of liberal arts college, Mr. Ames believes that "the College's programs must adapt to the changing demands of the world."

A native of Boston, Mr. Ames is the son of John T. Ames, chairman of the board of the Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts and Blackstone, and grandson of the late Oakes Ames, a renowned economics-botanist professor at Harvard.

The new president is married and has three sons and one daughter.

Staff cuts threaten nine current courses

By Sally Abraham

Nine courses may not be taught next year, due to the termination of teachers' positions. In some of these cases, no replacements are being considered for their jobs.

According to Argy R. Rice, chairman of English and modern studies department, all graduate courses have been dropped from the catalogue in that department.

Antonio Morillo, assistant professor of Hispanic Studies, has not been rehired.

Presently, Mr. Morillo is teaching two undergraduate courses, Spanish-American Civilization and World Literature. He also has a graduate course, Contemporary Spanish Theatre. Ms. Rice attributes his termination to "a question of cause and effect."

She said that since the language requirement has been dropped, there are fewer students wishing to take Hispanic studies.

"Fewer students means fewer classes means fewer professors," Ms. Rice explained. She added that in the Hispanic studies department, there are four graduate courses, but there are now no new graduate students.

She emphasized that there is a graduate program, but the department is no longer teaching certain graduate courses which make the department special.

The graduate students will now be encouraged to take some undergraduate courses. Ms. Rice said that they will be hiring no one new to take over Mr. Morillo's position. She said regrettably, "We are heading into a monolingual culture."

The English department will also be minus one faculty member in the fall. Camille S. Jordan, an English instructor, is leaving to teach in a graduate program.

In his place, Mr. Willauer is also teaching Literature Thematics: Forms and Problems, Myth and Archetypes, and Poetry, and is also teaching English 101.

Special Board elections called

Due to the resignations of the two senior representatives on the Judiciary Board, a special election will be held to replace them on Monday, March 4, and Monday, March 4.

The following students have announced themselves: Fred Axelrod, Jim Berriles, Alireta De Frenza, Kate Palmie, Roy Taylor and Jeff Wilmore.

Voting will be held in the dorms. David Shuman and Shannon Stock resigned because they did not have enough time to devote to the Board.
Letters to the editor

To the Editor:

I find I must disagree with the observation made following my letter of COR, February 21. The observation was that the author of the letter “wisely” asserts true identity to be withheld.”

I am not aware of the language or relevance of the case.

The name with which I signed the letter, “Yakov ben Chaim,” is, in my humble sense, my true identity; it is my Jewish identity name. Indeed, it is the name used during my Bar Mitzvah ceremony. Since the naming ceremony of the Bar Mitzvah was one of the issues in my letter and the article upon which it was commenting, it seemed quite appropriate to restate to myself with the name used at my own Bar Mitzvah. The true identity of “Yakov ben Chaim” is better captured by the name Yakov ben Chaim or by that of Jerry Winter is a most likely soil and in my question for any modern Jew. Perhaps somebody should discuss it with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (nee: Lew Alcindor) or Muhammad Ali (nee: Cassius Clay). In the meantime,

Shalom,
Yakov ben Chaim
(more commonly known as Jerry Winter)

To the Editor:

I am pleased to note a new support for this valuable aspect of College life. The new, more distinguished looking Campus Communicator may have helped to give these programs a push. Certainly, Pundit takes no small credit for its policy of previewing and reviewing interesting speakers and events.

With the new leadership, the student-faculty Conco calls, committees which is charged with making arrangements for Campus lectures looks like it will assume a more prominent role. William B. Hunter, the recently appointed chairperson, told Pundit of exciting plans to invite a Woodrow Wilson Fellow to live on campus for several days this semester. And stressing that there was money for speakers, the zoology teacher said he encouraged members of the Community to tell him about people they would like to hear. Pundit hopes that the Community forwards its ideas and participates in the programs.

Women b’ball players in game but out of money

“Allowing” women to play in the dormitory basketball intramurals is at least a step towards full recognition of women as athletes by the Physical Education department and the College Community. And certainly the number of women that are participating warrants their inclusion in the program.

A one-on-one basketball tournament is to be held next week but the women’s division winner will not be eligible for the tournament final prize. While she has the opportunity to challenge the men’s division winner, no prize has yet been provided for the winner of that contest. Pundit believes that in the spirit of equal opportunity for all, a prize should be provided whether or not the woman actually decides to challenge the Men’s division winner.

New spirit noted for campus lectures

Following a semester which often saw too many empty seats in front of fascinating and prominent speakers, Pundit is pleased to note a new support for this valuable aspect of College life. The new, more distinguished looking Campus Communicator may have helped to give these programs a push. Certainly, Pundit takes no small credit for its policy of previewing and reviewing interesting speakers and events.

With the new leadership, the student-faculty Convocations committee which is charged with making arrangements for Campus lectures looks like it will assume a more prominent role. William B. Hunter, the recently appointed chairperson, told Pundit of exciting plans to invite a Woodrow Wilson Fellow to live on campus for several days this semester. And stressing there was money for speakers, the zoology teacher said he encouraged members of the Community to tell him about people they would like to hear. Pundit hopes that the Community forwards its ideas and participates in the programs.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I find I must disagree with the observation made following my letter of February 21. The observation was that the author of the letter “wisely” asserts true identity to be withheld.”

I am not aware of the language or relevance of the case.

The name with which I signed the letter, “Yakov ben Chaim,” is, in my humble sense, my true identity; it is my Jewish identity name. Indeed, it is the name used during my Bar Mitzvah ceremony. Since the naming ceremony of the Bar Mitzvah was one of the issues in my letter and the article upon which it was commenting, it seemed quite appropriate to restate to myself with the name used at my own Bar Mitzvah. The true identity of “Yakov ben Chaim” is better captured by the name Yakov ben Chaim or by that of Jerry Winter is a most likely soil and in my question for any modern Jew. Perhaps somebody should discuss it with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (nee: Lew Alcindor) or Muhammad Ali (nee: Cassius Clay). In the meantime,

Shalom,
Yakov ben Chaim
(more commonly known as Jerry Winter)

To the Editor:

I am pleased to note a new support for this valuable aspect of College life. The new, more distinguished looking Campus Communicator may have helped to give these programs a push. Certainly, Pundit takes no small credit for its policy of previewing and reviewing interesting speakers and events.

With the new leadership, the student-faculty Convocations committee which is charged with making arrangements for Campus lectures looks like it will assume a more prominent role. William B. Hunter, the recently appointed chairperson, told Pundit of exciting plans to invite a Woodrow Wilson Fellow to live on campus for several days this semester. And stressing there was money for speakers, the zoology teacher said he encouraged members of the Community to tell him about people they would like to hear. Pundit hopes that the Community forwards its ideas and participates in the programs.

Women b’ball players in game but out of money

“Allowing” women to play in the dormitory basketball intramurals is at least a step towards full recognition of women as athletes by the Physical Education department and the College Community. And certainly the number of women that are participating warrants their inclusion in the program.

A one-on-one basketball tournament is to be held next week but the women’s division winner will not be eligible for the tournament final prize. While she has the opportunity to challenge the men’s division winner, no prize has yet been provided for the winner of that contest. Pundit believes that in the spirit of equal opportunity for all, a prize should be provided whether or not the woman actually decides to challenge the Men’s division winner.

New spirit noted for campus lectures

Following a semester which often saw too many empty seats in front of fascinating and prominent speakers, Pundit is pleased to note a new support for this valuable aspect of College life. The new, more distinguished looking Campus Communicator may have helped to give these programs a push. Certainly, Pundit takes no small credit for its policy of previewing and reviewing interesting speakers and events.

With the new leadership, the student-faculty Convocations committee which is charged with making arrangements for Campus lectures looks like it will assume a more prominent role. William B. Hunter, the recently appointed chairperson, told Pundit of exciting plans to invite a Woodrow Wilson Fellow to live on campus for several days this semester. And stressing there was money for speakers, the zoology teacher said he encouraged members of the Community to tell him about people they would like to hear. Pundit hopes that the Community forwards its ideas and participates in the programs.

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor:

I find I must disagree with the observation made following my letter of February 21. The observation was that the author of the letter “wisely” asserts true identity to be withheld.”

I am not aware of the language or relevance of the case.

The name with which I signed the letter, “Yakov ben Chaim,” is, in my humble sense, my true identity; it is my Jewish identity name. Indeed, it is the name used during my Bar Mitzvah ceremony. Since the naming ceremony of the Bar Mitzvah was one of the issues in my letter and the article upon which it was commenting, it seemed quite appropriate to restate to myself with the name used at my own Bar Mitzvah. The true identity of “Yakov ben Chaim” is better captured by the name Yakov ben Chaim or by that of Jerry Winter is a most likely soil and in my question for any modern Jew. Perhaps somebody should discuss it with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (nee: Lew Alcindor) or Muhammad Ali (nee: Cassius Clay). In the meantime,

Shalom,
Yakov ben Chaim
(more commonly known as Jerry Winter)

To the Editor:

I am pleased to note a new support for this valuable aspect of College life. The new, more distinguished looking Campus Communicator may have helped to give these programs a push. Certainly, Pundit takes no small credit for its policy of previewing and reviewing interesting speakers and events.

With the new leadership, the student-faculty Convocations committee which is charged with making arrangements for Campus lectures looks like it will assume a more prominent role. William B. Hunter, the recently appointed chairperson, told Pundit of exciting plans to invite a Woodrow Wilson Fellow to live on campus for several days this semester. And stressing there was money for speakers, the zoology teacher said he encouraged members of the Community to tell him about people they would like to hear. Pundit hopes that the Community forwards its ideas and participates in the programs.

Women b’ball players in game but out of money

“Allowing” women to play in the dormitory basketball intramurals is at least a step towards full recognition of women as athletes by the Physical Education department and the College Community. And certainly the number of women that are participating warrants their inclusion in the program.

A one-on-one basketball tournament is to be held next week but the women’s division winner will not be eligible for the tournament final prize. While she has the opportunity to challenge the men’s division winner, no prize has yet been provided for the winner of that contest. Pundit believes that in the spirit of equal opportunity for all, a prize should be provided whether or not the woman actually decides to challenge the Men’s division winner.

New spirit noted for campus lectures

Following a semester which often saw too many empty seats in front of fascinating and prominent speakers, Pundit is pleased to note a new support for this valuable aspect of College life. The new, more distinguished looking Campus Communicator may have helped to give these programs a push. Certainly, Pundit takes no small credit for its policy of previewing and reviewing interesting speakers and events.

With the new leadership, the student-faculty Convocations committee which is charged with making arrangements for Campus lectures looks like it will assume a more prominent role. William B. Hunter, the recently appointed chairperson, told Pundit of exciting plans to invite a Woodrow Wilson Fellow to live on campus for several days this semester. And stressing there was money for speakers, the zoology teacher said he encouraged members of the Community to tell him about people they would like to hear. Pundit hopes that the Community forwards its ideas and participates in the programs.

Pundit conducts writing seminar

Pundit is conducting a basic journalism seminar Monday at 4 p.m. in the Pundit newsroom, second floor Cro.

Students interested in writing for Pundit and attending the seminar will be given an opportunity to learn about the journalism field. The seminar will be held every Thursday at 4 p.m. in the Pundit newsroom, second floor Cro.

Students interested in writing for Pundit and attending the seminar will be given an opportunity to learn about the journalism field. The seminar will be held every Thursday at 4 p.m. in the Pundit newsroom, second floor Cro.
Rink builder needs 'breaks' for opening

by Bernice Zelitch

The Baltimore-based general surgeon and entrepreneur who has received the go-ahead to plan an ice rink on the sixth campus, told Pundt that with "some breaks," the structure will be operable by the fall.

Interviewed in his office on phone Friday, the part-owner of the Baltimore Clippers hockey franchise and a U.S. senatorial candidate also said he had no plans to establish a security system and expected to have between 1500 and 2000 seats and that the facility may be open as much as 24 hours a day, 72 months a year.

Dr. Piertop assessed the chances of a fall opening by saying, "We believe we can do this... in every way..." functions everything they... but... We have to have some breaks," He added that although design have not yet come from an architect, the interior of an ice rink is standard and the only "uncertainty" is the exterior.

Dr. Piertop said he expected

MAYBE RINK SITE. This wooded area is the property eyed by some Baltimore investors for a million dollar the ice surface to be 250 by 45 feet and the artificial snow so that two events may occur simultaneously. The cost to Dr. Piertop and his investment associates, who also assume full responsibility for operating the property, is expected to be between $20,000 and $1 million.

When asked if he had plans for developing a security system, the doctor said, "I don't think security is a major problem." He said, "Ice people basically are not difficult to handle, and we expect the easiest people to manage." He said that in Baltimore, there were always problems with trouble-makers, basketball games, but that at bocce games, there had "never been an incident,"

Dr. Piertop ran for the U.S. Senate in Maryland three times, in 1966 and 1968 as a Democrat and in 1970 as a Republican. Recently, he said, he and his associates developed a 56,000 acre tract in western Florida. He said his group already spent money looking for good sites in this part of the state, and settled

Complaint prompts dorm meal additions

Full continental breakfast will be served in Smith-Burdick and Knowlton on weekends at the suggestion of several students, according to Eleanor H. Voorhees, director of residence.

Nina M. George, Donna G. Diamond and Ronald Knight spoke with Ms. Voorhees last week about eating conditions in Harris on weekends.

"Students and staff alike are dissatisfied with eating in Harris on weekends and we wanted to make our feelings known to the Residence Department," said Ms. George about her interview with the head of the residence department.

"We circulated a petition to students on this issue, and the campus administration gave an overwhelming response against the weekend program," Ms. George explained. "However, before we submitted the petition we thought

Next budget allows greater staff raises

Salary raises of up to 7 per cent highlight the 18-month budget which was passed recently by the Board of Trustees.

A page or so page version of the anticipated expenditures—which at $1,919,000 is $414,000 more than will probably be spent this year—is available in the library reading room. The budget becomes effective at the end of the fiscal year, June 30. According to the College treasurer's office, the budget will be revised in October.

President Charles E. Shain this week said, "After our budget is known, the salaries and after faculty appointments are made in relation to enrollments and after we know the price of oil, there is a very serious revision of the budget."

Salary increases in the past usually have been 5 per cent,

Halrnt progress, say student leaders

Laurie J. Lesser and Richard A. Lichtenstein, president and vice-president of Student Government, said this week they have been "very pleased with the interest and cooperation of the student body."

"We sincerely request that all plans for the construction of a hockey rink on sixth campus be delayed until there is an opportunity for the presidential campaign," Lesser said, "We do not want to discuss the ramifications with the student body."

"We therefore cordially invite them and interested students to attend the Student Assembly at 6:30 p.m. on March 13, and the College Council at 5 p.m. on March 14.

Mr. Knight is out of town for several weeks and has indicated he may be unable to attend today's College Council meeting.

Gerald R. Visaggio, assistant professor of political science, has been given a $15,803 research grant by the U.S. Department of Commerce, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, to prepare an 18-month study of "The Economics of Marine Harvesting, Monitoring and Marketing Mixed Catches in Southern New England."

Visaggio will prepare an economic assessment of the costs associated with alternative systems for handling red and white hake, ocean pou, skates, and silver butterfish catches. He also will study local markets and will suggest domestic and foreign outlets for these species.

Halt rink progress, say student leaders

Student Body monies will have to make up $355 of the production cost for this semester's Student Information Book based on figures released by evaluation committee member Marcia C. Rothfeld and Richard C. Cohn.

The 325 books sold at Sceots was an increase of $150 in production costs to make the book a reality. The best of 75 books were printed.

"The Course Information Book was never meant to be a profit making project," said Mr. Cohn. "The book was meant to be informative. "We wanted to make back anything we could."

According to the committee most people were satisfied with the first publishable Student Government course evaluation.

"We got a letter thanking us for publishing the Student Government," said Mr. Cohn. "Faculty here and there approved the book." She added, "Readership in past issues has been significant."

"No profit intended"
by Jane Blondes

Student pressure has encouraged the Administration to pay the cleaning bills for the rugs of the Laramie floor. In the latest chapter of what might well be remembered as the “Waterpipe Affair,” the College, however, has refused to pay for other damages that resulted from the burst pipe that flooded Larravee basement over vacation.

Eleanor H. Voorhees, head of residence, pointed to the damage cause in the Book which says in part “the College assumes no responsibility for student property or damage of student property at any time.”

The Resistance Department sent rugs out to be cleaned without giving students notice.

Some students feel that the College should take responsibility for all losses. Victim Robert H. Shriffrin said that in refusing to pay for damages, the College assumed the attitude of a type who is shamefully unwilling to take responsibility for its simple-minded ineptness.

Mr. Shirfinf stated that though the College has maintained that the burst pipe turned down, an insider source at Physical Plant told him that the heat had been turned off, “Any fifth grader knows that pipes will freeze and burst when the temperature falls below 32 degrees,” Mr. Shriffrin claimed.

Robert N. Gould, another victim also maintains that “the College does not want to pay the consequences for their negligent actions.” He says that a defective pump that contributed to the freeze and burst is making extra noises, clanking and rattling all semester.” Mr. Gould suggests that the College should keep a better eye on its pumps.

Richard W. Ingersoll Sr., director of physical plant said it is nearly impossible to get to and inspect the impeller, the section of the pump that failed and allowed water to enter the building.

Ms. Voorhees regards the school’s policy in this matter as rather surprising in an age of a landlord-tenant situation. She says that in both cases the occupants must be on their own, and that the College is not responsible for personal property loss or damage.

Some students questioned felt that the Administration is covering up the facts behind the matter, and as Mr. Shriffrin said, “it is like looking like wimps behind the skirts of an insurance claim.” The students said they were calling for student interest and action to strike the damage clause from college policy.

School picks up rug damage tab

by Tanis George

Three programs to save New London’s Union Station have encouraged public faithfulness with deadlines for submission of plans and slow responses from Amtrak concerning the plans. It has been confirmed by Todd Rundgren of the Engineers, “We have never resorted to power as much as Todd Rundgren, ‘The Rising of the Fall of the City of Manchester. Within the confines of this rather intimately structure, one would never expect to witness a play as vibrant and provocative.

Brecht weaves a web that draws the audience into the action. Based on the German Workers Revolt of the ’30s, Brecht creates a satirical analogue on the sin of avarice and the strength of modern mass caught in a money oriented society. Three evil people, a mind for the welfare of the modern man, and one town, are the three ingredients that spout this pot of glittery, last and harmless. It is a slow, concocted with imported herbs and a dash of disaster. A morose mood is just right for the cultured palate.

Despite the gravity of the themes presented, the play is not without humor. In this melodrama of the decadence of society, one can find comic relief as presented by the artificial eloquence of the characters. As evil as the characters are portrayed, one cannot help but feel admiration for the lost people.

Technically, the effects of the lighting, backdrop, and economy are superb. The play reaches its climax with the symbolic crucifixion of Jim the hero, for he has committed the crime. It is an act of procrastination. In Mahagony, running out of money.

Alvin Epstein directed this 1928 jazz opera, in which the Yale School of Music played. Since 1928, the opera has combined with the Yale School of Music.

Two viruses on campus

According to Dr. Mary N. Hall, Director of student health services at Union Station, there are two main illnesses afflicting Connecticut students. The first is a upper-respiratory infection that last week to ten days. Its symptoms are a hacking cough, sore throat, sniffles, and little or no fever.

The virus does not respond to antibiotics. Therefore the inflammation will only give way to medication if the student feels more comfortable (Coriolis, throat looseners, decongestants).

The second current sickness is a gastro-intestinal virus which lasts about two to three days, and will not respond to antibiotics either. Dr. Hall recommends a bland diet to help the student feel more comfortable.

Both viruses are contagious, so students are urged not to share drinks or cigarettes, and to avoid coughing if possible. Much of the virus is spread by the hands of people, and students need to keep their hands clean.

Dr. Hall reminds us that there are also some indicators of a mononucleosis on campus. It is not known how this is spread, so particular caution must be taken, except the usual measures designed to keep up resistance (lots of sleep, keeping warm, etc.).

Some venereal disease is also present on campus, but Dr. Hall notes that complaints here are less common. In addition, Dr. Hall notes that since cases are well below the national average, at least than one percent.

A career in law—without law school.

What can you do with only a bachelor’s degree? If you want to bridge the gap between an undergraduate education and a challenging, responsible career. The Lawyer’s Assistant is able to do work traditionally done by lawyers.

The skills of interviewing can give you one of the six courses offered—the city in which you want to work. Since 1970, the Institute for Paralegal Training has placed more than 500 graduates in law firms, banks, and corporate offices in over 40 cities. If you are a student of high academic standing and are interested in a career as a Lawyer’s Assistant, we’d like to meet you.

Contact your placement office for an interview with our representative.

We will visit your campus on TUESDAY, MARCH 19

The Institute for Paralegal Training

235 South 17th Street, Philadelphia Pennsylvania 19103 (215) 732-6601

Todd Rundgren

by Todd Coopla

Long ago and far away in the town of Philadelphia, home of Billy Joel and South Street, and Frank Rizzo, a band called Nazz (Todd Rundgren, Thom Maguire, Ian Underwood, and Sweeney) came into existence. Four Dutch boys picking up the threads of four Liverpool boys, they had the blues. As the band was as dynamic and powerful as perla, the Nazz, it was not unusual for the band to sell out concerts. Musically, the band produced a disc which was a huge hit that went as far as throughout the world.

Bertold Brecht’s “The Rise and Fall of the City of Manchester” is a modern piece of literature, his examination of the human condition. Within the confines of this rather intimately structure, one would never expect to witness a play as vibrant and provocative.

Brecht weaves a web that draws the audience into the action. Based on the German Workers Revolt of the ’30s, Brecht creates a satirical analogue on the sin of avarice and the strength of modern mass caught in a money oriented society. Three evil people, a mind for the welfare of the modern man, and one town, are the three ingredients that spout this pot of glittery, last and harmless. It is a slow, concocted with imported herbs and a dash of disaster. A morose mood is just right for the cultured palate.

Despite the gravity of the themes presented, the play is not without humor. In this melodrama of the decadence of society, one can find comic relief as presented by the artificial eloquence of the characters. As evil as the characters are portrayed, one cannot help but feel admiration for the lost people.

Technically, the effects of the lighting, backdrop, and economy are superb. The play reaches its climax with the symbolic crucifixion of Jim the hero, for he has committed the crime. It is an act of procrastination.
Reuther critical of church on women
by Lynn Cole

The Church is psychologically, already to accept women as full participants Rosemary R. Reuther told the chapel congregation Sunday. "The possibility of women in the ministry touches not merely the question of personal rights of women," the professor of theology at Howard University and lecturer at Yale and Harvard said. "For a woman to be regarded as playing the ministerial role regularly, the entire psychology of which she is the God-man, soul-body, clergy-lay relations in terms of sexual hierarchism, would be threatened."

Ms. Reuther said "The church has allowed it to become the cultural guardian of the symbols of domination and subjugation." Instead she said the church "message should be the social mandate" for humanity.

"Only when men and women are peers in the Church can we create human relationships that express authentic communication and exercise the evil spirits of injustice and domination that turn women and all oppressed people into fantasmic symbols of the negative self," Ms. Reuther predicted for the audience of 80.

"The full integration of women must begin to reshape the language towards God," she continued. The church leadership must change from its present paternalistic mode to a dialogue form where it is seen more as the skill to evoke the gifts and creative initiative of others.

"The scriptures," she remarked, "offer a mixed bag of images of women." However, we might pay attention to the religious passages (that show women as inferior), we must look deeper into the problem of misogyny in the Christian language.

"Saxton's the inferiorization of women, is based symbolically, on misplaced dualism," said Mr. Reuther.

The basic dialectics of human existence: body-soul, carnality-spirituality, becoming-being, seeming-unbeing, death-life, are symbolized in terms of female and male and socially projected as the natures of men and women," Ms. Reuther continued. "The meaning of the 'feminine', then, is modeled on the images of the lower self and world."

The God-nature dualism is the "ultimate expression" of this, Ms. Reuther continued. "Medieval Church fathers went to Aristotle for authority to supplement a paternistic tradition."

We are heirs to this Medieval notion overlaid with 19th Century Romanticism, that saw women as morally superior but rationally inferior. "Bishops, industrial leaders, politicians and unionists all pay lip service to this myth of the 'feminine' when they oppose rights for women and their authentic role as moral nurtures of the race" depends on their staying out the dirty rough and tumble of the real world and remaining in the home."

"This rhetoric," Ms. Reuther pointed out, "does not exclude women from work." "It's chief effect is to create a resistance to women in visible leadership roles or work that carries social esteem."

Lynda Bogel, Jane von Kienal, and Marjorie Katz participated in the service. They composed the non-existent prayers and sought out the hymnals "without a preponderance of male pronouns" that were used at Ms. Reuther's request. The collection of $30 will go the Palmer Library Women's Literature Fund.

Members of the Women's Group last weekend spent some time changing a library seminar room into a women's center.

Women's Center opens in hive

A woman's center, stocked with non-circulating books and pamphlets, was initiated this week in the basement of Palmer Library.

According to Cynthia R. Maltese, the Woman's Group information associate, her group shares the Seminar Room 308 with the French Department. She said that the materials in the room so far have been lent by members of the Women's Group.

The room is open to anybody in the College community, Ms. Maltese said, stressing that no materials may leave the library. She said her group may use the room for meetings.
The Woman's Group Monday responded to the "lax attitude towards security" shown in response to the recent rape.

In a release sent to Pundit, the group said, "Despite the warning given us by one rapist, the members of the College Community continue in our lax attitude towards security.

The Woman's Group is alarmed at the indifference of both students and administrators towards the well-being of women students, faculty and employees. Not only do the grounds remain unsafe, but no preventative measures have been taken to ensure against further intrusions within dormitories."

The Woman's Group intends to bring up the matter of rape prevention at the College Council meeting this afternoon, according to Woman's Group spokesperson, Victoria A. Bowen.

In the release the group also said:

- The one rape of last semester was only a manifestation of a dangerously ever-present danger. Students can be raped alone reported within one week three separate incidents of unknown males on their corridors attempting entrance to bedrooms. On being challenged, none of these three men could give satisfactory explanations. Could these too have been isolated incidents which are better forgotten?

- Until the first steps of administrative action are taken, such as immediate restoration of paid door and telephone duty and installation of an identification card and key system, we implore all students for our mutual safety to co-operate with the minimal security measures now available. Even if you are just going to Cro or visiting a nearby dormitory, be sure the door is locked behind you. If you want an escort to any part of campus, call security guardhouse. Moreover, don't hesitate to challenge strangers on your corridors. Lacrosse women found that three to zero they don't belong there. It is up to us as a community to halt the attitude which allows the perpetuation of our actual physical vulnerability to attack."

Radical Study Group meets Sunday

The first meeting of the Radical Study Group will be held Sunday, March 3, 9:30 p.m. in the Chapel Library. The discussion is open to anyone interested in radical perspectives.

Tomorrow is the last day to file a pass-lail option with the Registrar's office.

Pundit February 28, 1974, page 6
New co-ed basketball catching on here

by Sue Maurers

Conn’s intramural basketball team has always been dripping with enthusiasm, a dribble of spectators — until this season. Fortunately, that era is fast becoming as passe as “CoCoWoFo.” basketball intramural basketball is now as “for women” as Conn College is “for men.”

Yes fans, co-ed basketball is Conn’s newest and most attended sport this season. Not all dorms have recruited female members for their teams since Jeffrey J. Zimmermann, coordinator of men’s athletics, decided in early December to allow co-ed intramural basketball teams. However, there has been a considerable showing of female “strength” in the south dorms, especially J.A. and Harlman.

Despite the published schedule’s title “Men’s Intramural Basketball” and the astonished looks of the male players, any woman is now eligible to play on her dorm’s basketball team.

From the record book’s returns, Harkness appears to feature nine co-eds on their two teams and there are four of these sweat-suited (or pajama-clad, if you please) women on the J.A. team.

“Girls aren’t good enough for men’s intramural,” you say? In the Harkness versus Day co-edem about women being nn •.

Mr. Zimmermann voiced his concern about women being on the court “because the game was not very skilled, they might be an embarassment.” However, the additional dorm spirit, the increased player participation and the larger spectator crowds indicate that neither facts nor actions confirm Mr. Zimmermann’s worry. Instead, co-ed teammates and fans alike seem to be supporting the December ruling with increasing fervor.
Biro leads dorm in intramural win

by Peter Johnson

Bixler Boris scored two second half goals, including a golden equalizer in the 3rd quarter, to lift Biro to a 3-2 win over Ritter in the final of the intramural soccer tournament. The win assured the Biro dormitory of a spot in the regional finals. The loss for Ritter was their third in the tournament, while Biro advanced to play the winner of the other final.

Research uncovers ‘how Conn got its hump’

by Lawrence Roberts

It is true that the basketball team could really go for over a week without a drink? Or that the soccer team could beat the Saudi Arabian National Team on its home field. If linguists are correct when they say that by nothing we have placed conceptual limits upon it, then the answers to both of the above questions is a resounding yes. The Camels could do it. However, the chances are they won't even if the Cro bar closed down and King Faisal suddenly announced a new era of U.S.-Arabian defense. For there seems to be more to a name than meets the eye, however enlightened the eye might be. Most colleges have derived nicknames which they hope will substantiate what linguists say about the conceptual limits of language. In nicknaming themselves, they hope that their school, their sport, and probably their teams, will reflect, to some degree, the characteristics of the name chosen. The result is a preponderance of names suggestive of animal strength, tenacity or aggressiveness: Lions, Brutos, Mustangs, and Huskies.

Women's victory streak at five

by Greg Woodward

The Conn College women's basketball team's winning streak now stands at five straight and could extend to seven by tonight. Two games in action is what kept alive the women's impressive streak and left their record at an excellent 9-2.

In the week’s first action the Conn women met the Ephs at Mount Holyoke and the hosts won handily 76-48. In the second game on Friday, the Ephs faced the Castleton State College on foreign turf. Led mainly by Lee Retick's ball handling and thirteen points, the Conn team won the game handily, 92-29.

The whole team played an excellent defensive game and were consistently strong on the boards. Becky Frayley also threw in two points in the victory.

In their next game, and naturally also a victory, the home team set for win

by Owen Prague

The return from the all-star break has produced three consecutive wins for the Huskies. Rebecca Roberts, a damsel first half of the season.

Rookie goalgetter Scott Crammer scored a game-winning, go-ahead goal at the buzzer against Yale and has played a key role in the new powerhouse club comparable to last years Johnson Cup winners.

Simultaneously with the win over Yale with only 11 players making the road trip, Conn took on the toughest team as yet and came away the 8-4 victors. Conn jumped to an early lead on goals by Randy “JR,” Whit”, Owen Prague, and Martin Lamsdell. However, the Huskies sagged in the second period and town women outscored their opponents 52-28. The victory came against a tough Mehegan Community College team on Friday night.

The win for the Conn women was indeed a team effort as Jeanne Carle, who rotated the players in and out of the lineup so that all had a good chance to play, Marta Leach, Sue Fawcett, and of course to Kin Reynolds and Kin Reynolds all did an excellent job in contributing to the fine team effort.

Sue Ferris, Margie Kume, Pattie Flynn, Anita DeFranz, and Grace had a good job on the scoring act while also doing a good job on rebounding and defense. Once again it was Lea Landers who led the team in scoring with Les getting 17 points and Becky 14.

Too late to get into this issue was a game at Wesleyan Wednesday night. Tonight, the Conn women play a home game against some very strong teams. The parking lots and recreation department at Waterford. It should be a good chance to see the team in action trying to keep their streak alive.

The next games after that are against the Geese on Saturday and Brow on March sixth and seventh. The team appreciates the support they’ve received and would like to see you there.

One-on-one b-ball tourney planned

A one-on-one basketball tournament is being planned by the Cro Committee and the Cro Coordinator’s office.

The tournament is open to faculty, staff and students who are not on the men’s varsity basketball team. Women on the women’s club team will also be permitted to compete. Coordinator B. Barton Gullong said this week.

A Cro representative said that the rules and that the playoffs will be discussed at a meeting Monday at 6:30 p.m. in CR.

Under the present rules, women may not compete for the men’s titles. The spokesperson said that contestants may compete in three categories.

Hockey team set for win

by Owen Prague

The return from the all-star break has produced three consecutive wins for the Huskies. Rebecca Roberts, a damsel first half of the season.

Rookie goalgetter Scott Crammer scored a game-winning, go-ahead goal at the buzzer against Yale and has played a key role in the new powerhouse club comparable to last years Johnson Cup winners.

Simultaneously with the win over Yale with only 11 players making the road trip, Conn took on the toughest team as yet and came away the 8-4 victors. Conn jumped to an early lead on goals by Randy “JR,” Whit”, Owen Prague, and Martin Lamsdell. However, the Huskies sagged in the second period and