Allegations of voter coercion overshadow SGA elections

BY APRIL ODENS
Editor in Chief

Questions regarding the SGA Executive Board and YAT elections arose this week after election results were announced when Angela Troth, house senator of Wright, came forward with allegations that she had witnessed election improprieties. Troth said that Michael DellaMonaca, house senator of Free- man, had told at least two students to "Vote for the woman," as they registered their votes in front of the post office in the College Center. Troth said that she believed that DellaMonaca referred to the presidential race, in which Marinel Troth was the only female can- didate.

DellaMonaca admitted that he had made these comments, but said that, "The two incidents that were sup- posedly investigated were just me joking around. I never intended to charge anyone's vote, and I'm sure that it was read that way."

Election results were announced over the balcony on the second floor of Cro on Wednesday night. Esther Potter, acting public relations director, during the elections due to Lyne Saliba's, pr director's, YAT candi- dacy, announced that Yoders had won the presidential election with 342 votes. Eric Miller came in a close second with only four votes fewer, at 338.

Miller has said he believes that the election was invalid for several reasons. In a letter he sent to the Election Board, he listed 10 com- plaints with the election and the subsequent investigation process. Miller said that he protests that Pot- ter returned her duties to Salisbury, but resumed them last Friday. Miller feels that these actions have not adequately been explained.

Furthermore, Miller presented the entire Election Board investigation into voter coercion, on the grounds that, while the Board has jurisdic- tion over elections, it does not ex- plicitly have jurisdiction over elec- tion investigations.

Miller, citing Article VI.B.11 of the "C." Book, said that neither the SGA president nor pr director have the power to investigate an elec- tion. The Article states that the two have the ability to suspend an elec- tion, if they believe that impropri- eties have occurred, but that the entire Assembly must decide whether elections should be invalid- ated, and under which conditions elections shall be completed.

Miller listed these complaints with the election and investigation process after Potter requested that hereligious grievances with the Elec- tion Board by Saturday at 2 p.m. Miller said that he complied, submit- ting his grievances, "under pro- test."

"The Election Board and Pr Com- mittee made their recommendations to me and went through the entire process. It seemed pretty sound to me. I knew that they had gone through the details of the allega- tions and whether they would fun-

Campus safety steps up security measures in response to recent arson, vandalism

BY DAN TRAUM
The College Voice

Safety precautions have increased on campus in a direct response to the arson and vandalism of school property that have occurred in the last two months. Many students who have ex- pressed outrage at recent incidents have noticed more Campus Safety patrols in the library and Cro, as well as in other areas of the campus. Junior Melissa McAllister noted, "An hour does not go by that I do not see a Campus Safety officer... They're everywhere."

Junior Jim Abel agreed, "In my

AIDS hits the community in the form of three alumni

BY YOUNG KIM
Features Editor

AIDS has become a significant problem in our society, and Con- necticut College is not exempt from it. The numbers tell us that 1 in 500 have this disease. This means that, statistically, faculty and staff in- cluded, there are roughly 4 people here who are HIV positive.

In response to this problem, SAC, SGA, and the Department of Health Education at Connecticut College will be sponsoring three alumni, who will be returning to Conn to speak about AIDS. What makes this talk different from many others is that these alumni have HIV or AIDS. Said David Brattle, the health education coordinator of the college, "I would like to impress upon the students that AIDS is a real disease, that they are not im- mune to it. Too many people say, 'I never thought it could be me.'"

Carl Boesle grew up in Spokane, Washington, and graduated from Connecticut College in 1987. He had the "typical" college experi- ence, and went off to the real world with the typical dreams. After "a horrible experience" with retail clothing in Los Angeles, Boesle decided to enter a two-year graduate program at the University of Pennsylvania. Boesle was studying energy and policy-making, and was looking forward to a career in an environmental field, or possibly attaining an advanced degree.

But things changed. In the sum- mer after his first year at Penn, he got sick. Boesle contracted pneu- monia, and instead of getting bet- ter, he kept getting sick. In January of 1990, Boesle was diagnosed with HIV. When he learned of his diag- nosis, Boesle took it very hard. Said Boesle, "I was a mess when I first found out. I just kept crying."

Now Boesle will be coming here to talk to students about the very real prospect of having AIDS. Boesle, "Eight years ago I sat in Oliva and I heard the people talk about AIDS. I heard the message, it just didn't click."

Everything in Boesle's life has become a constant reminder that he has AIDS. He wakes up in the morn- ing "to take a fistful of pills." He realizes all too well what having HIV really means. Boesle, "Sometimes I cry a lot, spontaneously actually. I just think about all those things I won't have, like I know I'll never have a career."

Having AIDS has radically changed Boesle's life, But he said, "I have a job, I have a good education, I have a wonderful family."

The future's so bright, I gotta wear shades." At 5 and a half months, environmentalist Jordan Marie Westerman had a great Earth Day.

"The future's so bright, I gotta wear shades." At 5 and a half months, environmentalist Jordan Marie Westerman had a great Earth Day.
Make changes for the future

This week SGA Executive Board and Young Alumni Trustee elections were held. This event raised students to vote in large numbers, apparently including those who do not usually vote. Yet cries of fraud and unprofessionalism were also heard.

The election results carried a slew of challenges including various Honor Code violations. The most serious of these allegations dealt with vote coercion. Also numerous potential procedural violations were cited by various members of the student body.

During the process of analyzing the election to determine its validity, it became obvious that there was no efficient and effective way to dismiss the possibility of election problems with the student body.

One suggestion entailed an all-campus message, however, the validity of this response to the message would be in question. A mailing would have taken too long and the response might not have been accurate.

There is no apparent solution to this communication problem. However, there are other methods which can be taken to ensure that election problems of this nature do not occur again. The voting procedure needs to be modified.

The "CC Bk, Article VI, D.C., guarantees the right of the student to vote in complete privacy. Abiding by this rule will eliminate the possibility for any students to offer their opinion to the voting. I challenge other students voting at the same time will not be in a position to influence their peers' decisions.

Along with this, the voting table should be moved from the outside of the post office. In past elections this has not been an issue. However, since the relocation of the post office to the College Center, the location of the table is no longer sufficient. Not only will this cut down on the chaos around the table, but it will also provide the voters with their deserved privacy. Although it is essential that the table remain in the vacant old College Center, a change of location will positively affect the voting process by decreasing the chances of Honor Code violations.

In conjunction with these changes, all SGA members who staff the table need to be briefed on their responsibilities as auxiliary workers. They are not to advise or persuade any voters while working at the table. If anyone asks a question, the voter should simply be referred to the posters posted next to the table.

Plaintiffs have already been brought to the election committee. It is time to move on. The newly elected SGA Executive Board needs to make up for this lost time and immediately get to work. The college will be facing many important issues next year and now is the time to begin.

THE COLLEGE VOICE

April Ondis
Publisher

India Hopper

Editor in Chief (Newspaper)

Aly McKnight
Managing Editor

Jennifer LeVan
Editor in Chief (Voice Magazine)

EDITORIAL BOARD

Bel Rubin
News Editor

Michelle Konay
A&E Editor

Vong Kim
Assistant Editor

Jon Flanhoar
Sports Editor

Natalie Hiltl
Associate News Editor

Carli Schultz
Associate A&E Editor

Jen Lapan
Associate Features Editor

PRODUCTION BOARD

Rob Summer
Photography Editor

Alexander H. Cole
CONNThought/Viewpoint Editor

Lauren Mathews
Associate Managing Editor

Eric Eubanks
Design Editor

Derrick Webste
Graphics/Design Editor

Collins O'Hagan
Copy Editor

Jennifer Lapan
Copy Editor

Allison Hanes
Copy Editor

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT

Chris Scott
Business Manager

Eric Streek
Advertising Designer

Tanya Sandberg-Dilmont
Operations Director

Special thanks to Michelle Bean for not finding any of this text difficult to read. Love you, honey.

The College Voice is a non-profit student-produced newspaper. Editorial opinion is located in the Conven-ficence window. Advertising and special events are available upon request. SGA and SGA members will be publicized in the paper.

CONNThought

April 26, 1994

Page 2

Copyright © 1994, The College Voice Publishing Group. All Rights Reserved

Student psychoanafizes arsonist:

Fire is cool, huh, huh, huh

Hey Arsonist. Yeah, tough guy, I'm talking to you. I must admit, the first three fires were kind of impressive. I mean three fires at one time in three different places. I gotta tip my cap.

But you are starting to get on my nerves. While the first three were kinda impressive, they had no style. I mean you just threw some newspapers on a stove. Hello, I could have done that. As for Cro ... let's just say that all you really did was create an inconvenience for the students.

All you are is an ego with a match. I took psych, I know what I'm talking about. It is so obvious what your problem is. You are in the phallic stage of sexual development, and in your desire to win your mother you are trying to prove your manliness. In other words, you are just compensating for inferior penis size. With the number of fires you have set, it must really be small. So small, I am almost lead to believe that you are a female with penis envy.

Anyway, I'm not here just to criticize. You obviously have something important on your mind. This must be some kind of profound statement or something. You must have some sort of complaint about Cro, or life in general. Maybe you feel it is wrong for me to go around Cro setting fires, you shouldn't have a match. All you are is an ego with a match. Maybe you feel that I'm getting to be a threat to you out. I am curious to know your motives, and I think people should know them as well. I don't have any matches, but I think I can help. Write me a letter, send it to the Voice, or you can find my box number in the book. Campus mail isn't traceable, and if you don't trust it, leave it in the Voice office. If you can walk in and out of Cro setting fires, you shouldn't have a problem dropping a letter.

Write me a letter detailing exactly why you're doing this. I'll print it, write a story, whatever they let me do. But you are going to need some kind of proof that you're the guy. Who knows, I may actually get a dozen different letters here. I'm not asking you to identify yourself, I ain't that stupid, and neither are you. When you write the letter, tell me exactly where you set the fire this last time. I mean what corner of the room and which room. That's a detail that very few people know, and something the real cops know anyway.

If you are planning another fire however I have a suggestion. Save everybody some agony and blow away Harris. Besides, you could be making a statement about the hungry.
Can a white heterosexual male truly understand oppression?

I am a white, heterosexual man. I am also a feminist. Just over a week ago I was talking with a close friend of mine, also a white heterosexual man, trying desperately to show him that his poster of an anorexic looking woman wearing a bikini and holding a can of Coors beer was oppression.

"Why is that oppression?"

I choked up. I wanted to explain to him what this word is really all about. I wanted to ask him if maybe I have to say I don’t understand oppression as well as I thought I did. This led to the bigger question — can I, as a white, heterosexual man, ever truly know the evils of systematic oppression?

I met my first outspoken feminist, a fellow white, heterosexual man, but September. Like many men I carried with me a bag of ignorant views — feminists are all burl, male-bashing lesbians. Racism? Yeah, it’s a problem, but that’s nothing to do with me because I’m not racist. Right? Also, anyone can be successful in this egalitarian society if they just pull themselves up by their bootstraps. If you fail, it’s your own fault.

At this man’s encouragement, I began to read about the privileges I receive as a man, as a white person, and as a heterosexual. I slowly began to see how oppressed people are denied many of these same privileges. It was painful to realize that I am benefiting from the oppression of other people. Then it hit me like a rock. Wait. Does this mean that I, unintentionally, am an oppressor? Simply supporting equal rights is not enough. It is not enough to see that others are denied many of these same privileges. I realize that I am benefiting from the oppression of other people.

This question was entirely inappropriate and should not have been included in the interviews. Since there was no reason for them to ask the question if they were not going to factor the answers into their recommendation process for the Special Election Issue, was doing just that. This question has no place within our system of confidentiality.

A letter to the Voice:

In last week’s Special Election Issue, the questions asked by the Voice editorial staff in candidate’s interviews were printed alongside their recommendations. The first question asked of all the candidates was, “Have you ever committed a serious violation of the Honor Code?” This question was entirely inappropriate and should not have been included in the interviews. In asking this question, the Voice completely disregarded our values as an institution committed to the Honor Code and confidentiality.

A candidate that has been accused in a J-Board trial would have two possible answers to this question. The first would be to admit it, which she has the right to do, if she chooses. The second would be to choose not to answer the question, which she also has the right to do. This second answer, however, has attached to it an assumption of guilt, for few people who have never been before the Judiciary Board would choose not to answer. They would simply answer no. This is where the question is inappropriate. Everyone has been the accused in a Judiciary Board trial has the right to have that information kept confidential. Yet, in asking this question, the Voice is essentially forcing the candidate to reveal it. Not only are they revealing this information to the editorial staff of the newspaper, but they also face the possibility of having it published and distributed campus wide. I applaud the Voice for not having taken this next step and printing the candidates answers to the question, however I still feel asking it in the first place was inappropriate.

Were the answers to this question factored into the decisions for The Voice’s endorsements? Since there was no reason for the question, and the answers to the question were not considered, I assume that they did. This is unacceptable. The candidates should not be made to suffer further for something that they have already made reparations for. Confidentiality is supposed to insure this. After a person has been found guilty of a serious Honor Code violation, the J-Board recommends an, "appropriate course of action." Once this course of action has been taken by the guilty party, they are not subject to further punishment for their actions. No one, other than the J-Board, the accuser, and the accused, will ever know that the case ever existed. This is part of what I understand the purpose of confidentiality to be, that guilty parties are protected from further repercussions after they have completed the "appropriate course of action." It is inappropriate for a publication such as The Voice, which has a tremendous amount of power on this campus, to ask this question and use the answers to help decide the outcome of a campus election. (You may laugh at this statement, but every candidate that the Voice endorsed in last week’s issue was victorious.)

Did any of the candidate answer yes to this question? Or refuse to answer? Were they given the Voice’s recommendation, or not given it because of their answer? It really does not matter, because they could have. It is unfair to those people, who would not answer to this question, to ask the question in the first place. They should not suffer further for their actions for which they have already been punished. Asking this question, and using it as a consideration in their election recommendations, was doing just that. This question has no place within our system of confidentiality.

Mark Lucey
Class of 1995

Editors’ note:

The question asked of each candidate concerning Honor Code violations during the recommendation process for the Special Election Issue (The College Voice, April 12, 1994) was not a violation of Judiciary Board confidentiality. The question was specifically worded to avoid inquiry into J-Board processes and instead focused upon possible violations of the Honor Code by candidates.
Viewpoint

Treasurer, alumnus clarifies refrigerator issue

SGA Treasurer responds to article

Former student Kathy Burdette, Class of 1994

I am writing this letter in regard to the article that you also came across to me, "SGA Treasurer should consider the ramifications of printing such an inaccurate and libelous article.

While a student leader at Connecticut College, I was often involved in disputes with the Voice over inaccurate reporting and misinterpreting. I tolerated such occurrences as a routine part of my role as a student leader; however, as an alumnus, I am appalled at the treatment I have received from the Voice over the past year.

One day before publication, I received a call that an article was being written regarding refrigerator rentals. When asked to comment on the allegations made by Wesley Simmons, Class of 1995, I was not aware that it was the focus of the article. Had I realized I was being accused of "loopy mishandling," I would have submitted records from over two years ago which the Voice did not include while writing the article. I was never given that opportunity since I am over three hundred miles from campus and do not have immediate access to that information.

After being informed of the article's content, I met with the company and negotiated a solution. We could pay back the company, Simmons denies doing this. Meanwhile, there was a mess, and no inventory form to turn in from last year. They remedied many of the loopholes which Connecticut College is built on. In the future, I hope you will more carefully investigate an issue before reporting it as fact.

Finally, I hold the Honor Code dear. As student reporters, every time you carelessly investigate a story, print false statements and unnecessarily damage reputations, you undermine the very foundation upon which Connecticut College is built. In the future, I hope you will take on the responsibilities afforded by the Honor Code and properly investigate an issue before reporting it as fact.
Faculty, students and administrators express concern at PPBC discussion

Proposed cuts aimed at $2.2 million in savings:

BY BEN RUBIN
News Editor

Expressing dissatisfaction with many of the proposed budget cuts, members of the college community gave their input to members of the Priorities, Planning and Budget Committee two weeks ago concerning the recently proposed budget cuts.

After the Board of Trustees approved a tuition increase of 4.4 percent for the 1994-95 academic year, the PPBC found the college would need to save an additional 2.2 million dollars to balance the budget for the year beginning July 1, 1994. Community members who attended the meeting seemed to feel that some areas were being cut too severely under the plans that the PPBC devised at the beginning of April.

Peggy Sheridan, chair of the child development department, voiced concern over the proposed $35,000 cuts to the Children's Development department, voiced at the PPBC devised at the beginning of April.

We do more at this school with less staff than most schools do.

Lynn Brooks, vice president for finance

It is essential to deal with long-term problems and long-term solution, said Marlow. "It is programs such as [Dean's Term] that continue to improve [Connecticut College]. The better the student, the better the alman. It is essential for Connecticut College to attract this type of student."

Molly Holmes, an administrative assistant, was concerned that her position or similar positions would have their full-year employment reduced to the academic year only.

Senior Lynne Saliba, SGA public relations director, was concerned that the college would be giving certain staff members the option to retire early. "Several of them are pretty upset. They don't understand the retirement option," Saliba said.

By July, we will know [the final cuts]. The wild card is pretty much anyone, according to William Frazer, PPBC member.

We don't have any choice about doing the kinds of things we are doing. Students pay the bills here. Once you [set the tuition], you have a certain amount of money and that isn't enough, said William Frazer, PPBC member.

We do more on this school with less staff than most schools do.

Lynn Brooks, vice president for finance

"We've anticipated that ... enrollment will improve," said Ann Devlin, provost of psychology and PPBC member.

We are building on an assumption of success, Brooks said.

"We don't have any choice about doing the kinds of things we are doing. Students pay the bills here. Once you [set the tuition], you have a certain amount of money and that isn't enough," said William Frazer, PPBC member.

We do more on this school with less staff than most schools do.

Lynn Brooks, vice president for finance

"We've anticipated that ... enrollment will improve," said Ann Devlin, provost of psychology and PPBC member.

We are building on an assumption of success, Brooks said.

"We have budgeted for 1559 students [for next year]. We have been conservative when budgeting for student income. We either have to increase income or decrease expenses," said Philip Barnes, associate professor of zoology and PPBC chair.

We need to see what the freshmen class will be like [as far as total enrollment]," said Ann Devlin, provost of psychology and PPBC member.

"We've anticipated that ... enrollments will improve," said Ann Devlin, provost of psychology and PPBC member.

We are building on an assumption of success, Brooks said.

"We've anticipated that ... enrollments will improve," said Ann Devlin, provost of psychology and PPBC member.

We are building on an assumption of success, Brooks said.

"We need to see what the freshmen class will be like [as far as total enrollment]," said Ann Devlin, provost of psychology and PPBC member.

"We've anticipated that ... enrollments will improve," said Ann Devlin, provost of psychology and PPBC member.

We are building on an assumption of success, Brooks said.

"We've anticipated that ... enrollments will improve," said Ann Devlin, provost of psychology and PPBC member.

We are building on an assumption of success, Brooks said.
News

It's not easy being green

MOBROC and local bands provided entertainment of Chapel Green for the Fifth Annual Inherit the Earth Weekend. The many activities included three workshops on defense conversion to green industries, ecological entrepreneurship, and partnerships between businesses and environmental groups. African drumming added a global aspect to the Earth Day celebration.

Recent vandalism prompted extra patrols

Continued from p. 1
three years here I never remembered seeing this many officers on campus areas." While studying there last week, she noticed the extra patrols in the library. And she was not alone. "I have been monitoring the campus carefully to protect against any further incidents. Specifically, Minner noted that Campus Safety has,"concentrated more patrols in the Crozier-Williams and Shain
Library areas."

Minner did not comment on whether more security personnel
have been hired.

Freshman Kristin Piazza has noticed the extra patrols in the library. While studying there last week, she noted that "Campus Safety walked by twice. They just seemed to be looking around for anything suspi-sious."

Along with the increase in patrols, students who work for Campus Safety have been patrol-
ing the library.

One student who works in the library noted that he saw a friend who works for Campus Safety walk through the library on duty.

"Campus Safety had sent him in to patrol, look around and see if there was any suspicious activity
going on," said the student.

The increase in Campus Safety
patrols is not the only security measure that has been taken.

Immediately after the first fire at Crozier-Williams, the 24-hour room in the library was closed. The 24-hour room, which serves as a study area where smoking is permitted
during the day, used to remain open
all night to give students a quiet place to study in the early hours of the morning, according to Connie
dowell, head librarian.

Since the first fire, it has been locked at midnight along with the rest of the building. dowell said.
Dowell does not believe it will reopen at night in the near future. "It

Don't be stuck lugging
your heavy winter and formal clothes home.

• Free pick-up and delivery
• We will clean and moth-proof your clothes for you.
• Free Summer storage.
• Your clothes will be returned at your request next Fall.

SHALET'S CLEANERS
2-6 Montauk Avenue
New London, CT 06320
Call for info and clothes pick-up.
442-5316

AIDS comes to Conn campus

Continued from p. 1
changed Boesle's life. According to Boesle, all the little things he now knows can drive a person crazy.

"Sometimes I get really frustrated. Like I will have plans to do something, and I wake up the next morning and I just won't have the energy to do it. I rely on my brothers and sisters a lot. I go to my support group. But sometimes I think that I am only 20, and I really shouldn't know as many dead people. But I just do my best. I try to stay in the present, and not think of the past and what could have been."

Boesle does his best and deals with what he has. He no longer carries the label of HIV positive,
and now wears the badge of full-
blown AIDS, a term which he dislikes. Said Boesle, "I had no concept life could be like this. Everything is a reminder, everything I do is AIDS-related. I just know that I am paying the ultimate price for my mistakes."

Brian Rosenberg graduated from Conn in 1987. While here he was an average Conn student; he got a 3.0.
He played some intramural sports,
and he was very active in SGA.
Rosenberg was even elected class
director during his freshman, sophomore, and senior years. After graduating, Rosenberg opened a couple of restaurants and was on his way to a very profitable career. But after learning of his HIV status,
Rosenberg decided that he needed
to do something else. Said
Rosenberg, "I decided that I needed
something more fulfilling. I wanted something other than financial gain."

Rosenberg now works part time
for the speakers bureau, talking about living a life HIV positive. Rosenberg said, "The secret to my life is just living an open and honest life. Telling my family and friends,
Not hiding anything. I am honest with myself, and I get a lot of support."

From speaking, Rosenberg has found the fulfillment he was lookning for. Said Rosenberg, "I didn't want to tell anyone at first. I was afraid of what they would think. Now I feel empowered from speaking. I feel like I am giving a very important message out."

Rosenberg feels that there is a very negative stigma which society
places on people with AIDS. Said
Rosenberg, "People think that eveyone with HIV is gay, some street
bum, or an IV drug user. Saying I have AIDS is different from saying
I have cancer or multiple sclerosis."

Currently, Rosenberg is classifi-ding as having asymptotic HIV. He plans on staying an activist and educator. He works for the Penwy Community Health Center as a researcher. But most importantly,
Rosenberg does his best to just keep going. Said Rosenberg, "The most important thing is for me to stay healthy as long as possible."

These alumni will be returning to campus on Friday April 29, and will speak in the 1941 recnet of the College Center from 4:30-6:00 p.m.
They will be giving their personal accounts of life with AIDS and HIV,
and will be answering questions.

Live Music this weekend:
Area's most popular bands
Never a cover!

Daily Luncheon Specials
• Free Tacos Thurs. 4-7 "Don't Miss it!!'
• Free Buffet Fridays, "Best in Town"
• Sunday Breakfast 11-2
• Bloody Marys $1.75 Noon-2
• Pool Tables-Lots of Fun-Come Down!!

Wednesday is Ladies Night
8PM-11PM
$1.00 Well Drinks & Domestic Beer
D.C.I.Y.S.
95 Pequot Ave, New London
443-1095

It's not easy being green

It's not easy being green

Recent vandalism promoted extra patrols

Continued from p. 1

Sergeant James Minner, director of Campus Safety, confirmed that patrols have indeed been stepped up in response to increased security risks.

Minner said that Campus Safety has been monitoring the campus carefully to protect against any further incidents. Specifically, Minner noted that Campus Safety has,"concentrated more patrols in
the Crozier-Williams and Shain
Library areas."

Minner did not comment on whether more security personnel
have been hired.

Freshman Kristin Piazza has noticed the extra patrols in the library. While studying there last week, she noted that "Campus Safety walked
by twice. They just seemed to be looking around for anything suspi-
sious."

Along with the increase in patrols, students who work for Campus Safety have been patrol-
ing the library.

One student who works in the
library noted that he saw a friend
who works for Campus Safety walk
through the library on duty.

"Campus Safety had sent him in
to patrol, look around and see if there was any suspicious activity
going on," said the student.

The increase in Campus Safety
patrols is not the only security measure that has been taken.

Immediately after the first fire at Crozier-Williams, the 24-hour room
in the library was closed. The 24-
hour room, which serves as a study
area where smoking is permitted
during the day, used to remain open
all night to give students a quiet
place to study in the early hours of the morning, according to Connie
dowell, head librarian.

Since the first fire, it has been locked at midnight along with the rest of the building. dowell said.
Dowell does not believe it will
reopen at night in the near future. "It

Don't be stuck lugging
your heavy winter and
formal clothes home.

• Free pick-up and delivery
• We will clean and moth-proof your
clothes for you.
• Free Summer storage.
• Your clothes will be returned at your request next Fall.

SHALET'S CLEANERS
2-6 Montauk Avenue
New London, CT 06320
Call for info and clothes pick-up.
442-5316

AIDS comes to
Conn campus

Continued from p. 1

changed Boesle's life. According to Boesle, all the little things he
now knows can drive a person crazy.

"Sometimes I get really frustrated. Like I will have plans to do something, and I wake up the next morning and I just won't have the energy to do it. I rely on my brothers and sisters a lot. I go to my support group. But sometimes I think that I am only 20, and I really
shouldn't know as many dead
people. But I just do my best. I try to stay in the present, and not think of the past and what could have been."

Boesle does his best and deals
with what he has. He no longer
carries the label of HIV positive,
and now wears the badge of full-
blown AIDS, a term which he dis-
likes. Said Boesle, "I had no concept life could be like this. Everything is a reminder, everything I do is AIDS-related. I just know that I am paying the ultimate price for my
mistakes."

Brian Rosenberg graduated from Conn in 1987. While here he was an average Conn student; he got a 3.0.
He played some intramural sports,
and he was very active in SGA.
Rosenberg was even elected class
director during his freshman,
sophomore, and senior years. After graduating, Rosenberg opened a couple of restaurants and was on his way to a very profitable career. But after learning of his HIV status,
Rosenberg decided that he needed
to do something else. Said
Rosenberg, "I decided that I needed
something more fulfilling. I wanted something other than financial
gain."

Rosenberg now works part time
for the speakers bureau, talking about living a life HIV positive. Rosenberg
said, "The secret to my life is just living an open and honest life. Telling my family and friends,
Not hiding anything. I am honest
with myself, and I get a lot of support."

From speaking, Rosenberg has found the fulfillment he was lookning for. Said Rosenberg, "I didn't want to tell anyone at first. I was afraid of what they would think. Now I feel empowered from speaking. I feel like I am giving a very important message out."

Rosenberg feels that there is a very negative stigma which society
places on people with AIDS. Said
Rosenberg, "People think that ev-
eyone with HIV is gay, some street
bum, or an IV drug user. Saying I have AIDS is different from saying
I have cancer or multiple sclerosis."

Currently, Rosenberg is classifi-
ding as having asymptotic HIV. He plans on staying an activist and educator. He works for the Penwy Community Health Center as a researcher. But most importantly,
Rosenberg does his best to just keep going. Said Rosenberg, "The most important thing is for me to stay
healthy as long as possible."

These alumni will be returning to campus on Friday April 29, and will speak in the 1941 recnet of the College Center from 4:30-6:00 p.m.
They will be giving their personal
accounts of life with AIDS and HIV,
and will be answering questions.
April 26, 1994

News

Miller predicts "civil unrest" on campus

Continued from p. 1

rules need to be changed for future elections, but the only way that we would have a reelection would be if something went wrong [with this election] that fundamentally changed the election under the rules that we have now," said Savena Dhall, SGA president. Dhall made the final decision regarding the election.

In an official statement about its investigation into election impropriety, and the possible coercion of voters, the Election Board officially settled questions regarding the election, stating that it had "found that these actions did not fundamentally affect the outcome of the election."

The Board said that it has a 500 member organization, known as The Eric Miller for President '94 organization, which has met regularly, both during his campaign and since the election results were announced.

Said Miller, "Many of the people who voted for me were participating for the first time, and because they have been wronged, because justice has not been served, they are outraged and angry."

Miller said that, while he stated during his campaign that SGA had "special double-secret meetings," he had not known that these actually occurred until he mentioned the aftermath of the election. He said that, in the first place, although the Assembly informed the public that issues arose after the election would be decided at the SGA Assembly meeting on Thursday, they were in fact decided on Sunday, apparently without the knowledge of Assembly members or the campus. Miller said that he was upset that the campus community "had not been informed of these actions from those in power."

Miller spoke of the election improprieties he alleged. "These unfortunate incidents have proven very divisive to the student community. Now is the time for unity. We, as students, and as future alumni, need to ensure that the name of the institution on our diploma, will be in business next year, in 5 years, and in 100 years. As I said in my campaign speech, we must not only pick our battles, we must be prepared to fight for them," said Miller.

Miller said that he spoke with Don Filer, secretary of the college, on Friday afternoon. Miller said that he asked Filer to "Notify administrators on duty and the director of Campus Safety of these developments in the election investigation to head off any civil unrest."

"It is time for valid elections, not whether or not the Honor Code was breached."

The Board further stated that "any violations of the Honor Code must be directed to Sara Monaca, chair."

"Many of the people who voted for me were participating for the first time, and because they have been wronged, because justice has not been served, they are outraged and angry."

"Many of the people who voted for me were participating for the first time, and because they have been wronged, because justice has not been served, they are outraged and angry."

The Board further stated that since all students are responsible for upholdings the Honor Code, they are "responsible for their own actions, including their vote."

"I wish that more people had been involved in the decision. It seemed like senators weren't really involved. But that's just a process problem, maybe," said Troth.

"There's a lot of people on this campus that had very little faith so I feel like this will take away what little faith they had," said Troth. "Secondly, I think people are going to be more upset and SGA was against him. And it's too bad because that simply isn't the case. I desired fair elections because my attitude was that, if the students wanted to pick Eric, then they deserved him," said Dhall Monaca.

"Unfortunately, it's a situation in which Eric Miller thinks that me and SGA were against him. And it's too bad because that simply isn't the case. I desired fair elections because my attitude was that, if the students wanted to pick Eric, then they deserved him," said Dhall Monaca.

"Many of the people who voted for me were participating for the first time, and because they have been wronged, because justice has not been served, they are outraged and angry."

"Unfortunately, it's a situation in which Eric Miller thinks that me and SGA were against him. And it's too bad because that simply isn't the case. I desired fair elections because my attitude was that, if the students wanted to pick Eric, then they deserved him," said Dhall Monaca.

1994-1995 Housefellows

Jonathan Tueting
Abby J.A.

Tracy-Anne Smith
Mercedes Garcia

Blackstone
Jefferson Fuss

Jennifer Fuss
Daniel Towvim

Blackstone
Brantford

Jeff Gillson
Burlington

Nigel Mendez
Freeman

Jaay DonFrancisco
Susan D само

Hamilton
Harbuck

Savonna Doname
Delphine Auborg

Daven
Knowlton

Nicole Magnusco
Lambdin

Nicholas Malajian
Larabbe

Keyston Howard
Washington

Lazrus

Zachary Manzella
Marshall

Erika Lin
Morrison

Shauna Meynnal
Park

Stephanie Wilson
Plant

Jennifer Landigran360 Mohagen

Northcote

Sandra Curo
Smith

Aaron Jenkins
Windham

Robert Yauckoses
Wright

Economist Famous Economists Have Said:

"The way the rules are written, we're all dead"
John Maynard Keynes, British Economist

"In the long run, we're all dead"

"Eat a Recovery Room pizza in the short run"

Don Peppard, Concord College Economist

"They tell me there's a pie up in the sky, waiting for me when I die"

Jimmy Cliff, Famous Reggae Economist

"I want my pie at the Recovery Room"
Ralf Jensen, another Concord College Economist

L.A. Pizza III
437-3430 ©

Specials

443 Ocean Avenue New London Ct
CALL FOR TAKE OUT, TOO: 443-2619
Free Delivery until 1:00 AM on Friday and Saturday, Midnight thru Thursday

Specials

1/2 Price on

SAVc $2.00

Slots Long
GRUNDERs

.byte

with 2 tall psodas

FREECODA

Expires 5/30/94

Expires 5/30/94

Free $500 - $1000 weekly stuffing envelopes.
For Details: RUSH $1.00 with SASE to:
GROUP FIVE
57 Green tree Drive
Suite 307
Dover, DE 19901
Conn hosts first annual Inherit the Earth weekend
BY NATALIE H NM
Associate News Editor

Connecticut College celebrated the environment with its first annual Inherit the Earth Weekend. The two-day event opened on Saturday with a conference which focused on "Business and the Environment: Relationships for Sustainability and Profitability in a Civil Society."

Highlights of the day included panel discussions and workshops on "Ecological Entrepreneurs," and "Working with Business to Sustain Biodiversity." David Stephenson, professor at Bentley College, is a national lecturer and consultant for several prominent companies such as Ocean Spray and IBM.

Stephenson spoke about "The Natural Economy," business strategies based on ideas such as biology, quantum physics, and Asian loops, efficiency, the decay of old natural economies, "Relationships for Sustainability and Profitability in a Civil Society."

The award was accepted by Church & Dwight's Director of Public Affairs and Environmental Management, Bryun Thomlson. The award is given annually, and goes to companies around the world that are "progressing in their industries while reducing damage to the environment." "Extending protection to natural ecosystems and biological diversity," and "taking environmental initiatives that have potential for being extended throughout the world."

The Honorable Mention winner was Clivus Multrum, Inc. of Cambridge, Massachusetts, makers of self-contained composting toilets. The citation says that Clivus Multrum "does not treat human waste as waste but rather as an unreviewed resource rich in nutrients."

Claire Gaundani, president of the college, presented the award to Church & Dwight. It was a medal depicting the earth held aloft by a "waste" symbol, with deep gratitude for your leadership in caring for an earth that humanity can take pride in inheriting. "You truly are a catalyst for thought about preju-

Asian Awareness Week:
Angela Oh delivers speech addressing racism and advocating civil rights
BY KIM CONSY
The College Voice

Showcases of violence and injustice have been frequent topics of shop owners South Central L.A., false allegations of fraud and arson spurring from racial tensions, and the chaotic aftermath of conflicts with the Los Angeles riots of 1992 may seem like daunting issues to take on as students in college.

However, Angela Oh, a human and civil rights advocate and criminal defense lawyer from Los Angeles, has devoted a significant portion of her career to addressing racism in modern society.

Friday, Oh came to Connecticut College to continue her endeavor to "be heard as a voice for people who think beyond the color of their skin and their gender."

Sponsored by the Connecticut College Asian/American Student Association, Oh shared her first-hand knowledge and motivation in a lecture titled "Multiculturalism: Can It Work Today?" and met with students and faculty members from various campus clubs and organizations.

Christian Communities: Korean-American. Oh speaks at colleges and universities around the country as a catalyst for thought about prejudice issues and activism.

Oh sees the college experience as a testing ground for the decisions that people will make in their future lives. Students with racial backgrounds, "will have revealed to them what really motivates them to do the things they want to do. [Here] you have a more modest impact... and then the world offers you the opportunity to make the same kind of decisions in terms of your personal involvement as you would a student."

Oh's personal involvement has resulted in an activism that reaches beyond her duties as a private attorney. In the wake of the Los Angeles riots, she was appointed co-chair of the Assembly Special Committee on the Los Angeles Crisis. What became evident after that catastrophic event, she said, is that the same policy was in effect as had been in the 1960s and 1970s.

Oh said, "There was the same poverty, the same mistrust of law enforcement, the same lack of affordable housing, the same lack of employment for people to get ahead. Oh said the only significant difference between the two events is that instead of being a black and white issue, it is now a multicultural debate."

According to Oh, by the year 2000, the term "minority" will be a misnomer. Said Oh, "This country is really struggling with its own fear of the inevitable change that's going to occur, people of color are going to be the majority in the world."

"There's a lot of rage, she notes, and it is unrealistic to think dialogue on one level will equal reform on another. Oh feels the political activists and others who make policy decisions, though becoming increasingly diverse, still do not necessarily understand the intense reality of living in the swarm of racial tension and impending violence. Oh admits she used to stigmatize those who chose not to be active in their own communities as apathetic, "lazy, and just bad."

"What, then, does Oh propose be done in a society that is scarred with such complex dilemmas? She believes that the answer is "to work around a table" and discussing the issues."

"There's a lot of rage," she notes, and it is unrealistic to think dialogue on one level will equal reform on another. She feels the political activists and others who make policy decisions, though becoming increasingly diverse, still do not necessarily understand the intense reality of living in the swarm of racial tension and impending violence. Oh admits she used to stigmatize those who chose not to be active in their own communities as apathetic, "lazy, and just bad."

But now she insists that "they provide a certain kind of reality check for those of us who are activists."

She has found that more subtle agreement sometimes makes more of a difference in the form of voting, monetary support, and how people incarcerate. Consequently, she urges people to follow their ambitions, but to remember where they came from.

"If it is firm belief in any sort of change, however small, beginning on an individual level. "We need to come together and hear each other, there's least that first contact would've been made. There is a way for people to have their own ethnic heritage and history and be productive members of one society."
Asian Awareness Month: Keynote address by Ninotchka Rosa raises awareness of worldwide prostitution business

BY YUNO KIM Features Editor

The act of prostitution is known as the world’s oldest profession. But today this multi-million dollar industry, in the Philippines and Thailand alone, one to two million women are sold each year.

As the keynote speaker for Asian Awareness Month, Ninotchka Rosa, national chair of the Gabriella Network, spoke to raise awareness of the prostitution business. Said Rosa, “In the Philippines there are over 150 different languages spoken. In one of those languages there is a word for prostitution.”

The trafficking of women has become a driving economic force in many countries. Said Rosa, “The Philippines has become the world’s top exporter of women. Over 250,000 women in the Philippines have been exported under the guise of ‘surplus labor.’ The government had even established the labor export policy.”

According to Rosa, the money generated by this business in the Philippines alone generates millions of dollars that pay off interest on loans.

The trafficking of women has become essential in the economy of developing countries such as the Philippines. Rosa said the money is generated from the exploitation of small, poor farmers in the country. Fathers are given $400 for their daughters between the ages of 10 and 15, with the promise of opportunity.

These fathers give up their daughters with the hope that they will be given a chance at a better life. But once these children are taken, they begin a new life that is anything but prosperous.

The first stop on their road is to the room of the window of the [redacted]. The little girls are stripped and penetrated repeatedly so they will be insured they are of the proper “quality.”

Said Rosa, “One time they kept a little girl in the room for four days because her husband had been killed too much when she was penetrated.”

When the girl has been properly “prepped,” she begins her work. Clients are brought to the brothel, and the little girls are paid with wooden chips for every client they service. These wooden chips are worth one peso, or about 7 cents.

The actual money goes straight to the room where the trafficking of women has become a multimillion dollar industry. In the Philip-...
Mr. Butts has taken his daughter to work.
AND MINe TURN OUT 50 MILLION A DAY... JUST IN THIS ONE PLANT.

Hi, there! Doc! Mr. Butts here!

DADDY, ARE THERE REALLY 559 INGREDIENTS IN EACH CIGARRETT?

BuT It NO MIND, SWEET HEART, IT'S RUN OVER!

I TAKES DADDY SOME TIME TO GET UP, LISTEN, THERE'S NO FUTURE FOR YOU GENERATION OF BUTTS.

FUTURE FOR WOMEN... STCORE... I THINK THE FUTURE FOR WOMEN IS CIGARETTES IS NEVER BEEN BETTER. ABOUT 300 MILLION TIMES SOMEONE SAYS YOU INTO THE CIGAR... "Mom... JUST ONE MORE OF A MATCH..."

REMEMBER: JUST BECAUSE YOU'RE SLIM DOESN'T MEAN YOU CAN'T BECOME A FULL-BLOODE CIGARETTE.

JUST A HAMMER AND NAIL, RIGHT? RIGHT, UNLESS THIS PERIODE LAME.

HAPPY TO SEE YOU CONTAIN 6006X1L.ITY WITH/MVING, INCLUDING NICOTINE, CONA, EPICA, PERIODIC, WEIGHTS/MOTIONS, MULTI, DEPRESSION/OCULATIONS, SCARING, LIPS, PROSPE, GOSPE, BORING LIPS, COLDER THAN PUMP THE NEEDED OF A MATCH!

YOU'RE STILY... CURTAIN.

GOOD NIGHT, LITTLE BUTT! WHAD FUN TODAY, DON'T WE?

I JUST WISH I DON'T HAVE TO WAIT SO LONG TO BE SOLD FOR CONSUMPTION!

FUNNY FACE... YOU'RE NOT NATURE ENOUGH! YOU'RE STILL CURTAIN!

I HAVE NO IDEA THAT MEAT'S CIGARETTE HERE SUCH A BIG DEAL... I FEEL LIKE, TOTALLY UNEPUIRED!
Body piercing and music are an interesting new combination

By Carl Schulte
Associate A & E Editor

Ever get the urge to go to a concert, dress in leather, and get body pierced all at the same time? If so, the world just happens to cater to you. Your, my friend, can go to a Genitorturers concert.

In a mixture of music and theater unlike any other, the Genitorturers combine pain and pleasure in a concert you just can't bear anywhere else. In recent interview with Gen, the band's vocalist and resident piercer, I gained a unique insight into the world that Genitorturers embrace.

"The name," stated Gen, "is a word describing someone who is into body piercing. It is one element of what we do on stage. The only way to truly appreciate Genitorturers' on-stage show is to see it.

The rough, punk-reminiscent music combines with theatricals in a dungeon setting, where those who are willing go on-stage and get themselves pierced by performers.

There is a lot of preparation that goes into this, and an audience member wanting to get pierced must fill out forms beforehand. Those who are pierced are given full information on how to keep their piercings healthy and clean if they wish to keep it. Gen herself is a licensed piercer.

Their newest work, titled "120 Days of Genitortures," is based on the title of a novel by the infamous Marquis de Sade, 120 Days of Sodom. Explains Gen, "He was similarly breaking taboo back then, and today we are. Some things still need to be addressed, like consent. The present element of consent is in our show, too.

For Gen, ritual is an important element in her life. The world today has lost many of its taboos, and people are left with no rules of passage, no markers of their journey through life.

A piercing at a performance, according to Gen, "is done in ritual fashion on-stage. It is a rite of passage, containing a sexual element and a spiritual element." Gen, at the time of the interview, had 7 permanent piercings on her body, including one in her tongue and one in her navel. She subscribes to a type of piercing she calls "play piercing," where a piercing is done for the pleasure of the feel of the act, and then allowed to close up again.

Gen has had "at least a thousand" of those. "All stimuli coming into the body is interpretive," she explains.

The movie, though at times quite household weird, the go-...
Celtic music performed in Harkness Chapel

By Tim Devon
The College Voice

It all began with a rolling, cascading series of notes on the hammered dulcimer, effecting an ocean wave. The wave of music washed over and over again, and was — almost unnoticed at first — joined by a harp, adding a steady, quickening melody. The music built in pace until the waves were forgotten, replaced by a lively jig. This jig was the beginning of a performance given by the Magical Strings duo in Harkness Chapel Friday night.

The Magical Strings, consisting of Philip and Pam Boulding, draw on traditional Celtic, as well as a scattering of other, musical traditions, performing original and traditional songs on the Celtic harp, hammered and picked dulcimer, and the penny whistle.

The Bouldings have been performing together for fifteen years, and, in addition to having released eight records, have performed throughout the U.S., Canada, and the British Isles.

Their next song, "Gypsy Melody," was a seventeenth century piece from Wales, which, with its use of the violin and a slower pace, attempts to capture the music of the gypsies. Joining them in this pace, attempts to capture the music of the gypsies, were the Magical Strings' own student Geoffrey Boulding. The piece was simple, yet complex, with frequent harmonics, and slow and haunting, in the middle of the sea off the coast of Ireland. The island served as a metaphor during the Dark Ages, but now lies abandoned in the midst of the sea. The music begins with an other-cascade, this time faster, gentler. The song was taught to Philip by an African kora harp player, who met the Bouldings during their recent visit to America.

Another piece had Philip playing the Norwegian gneume flute, an instrument originally shown to him by his mother, an immigrant from Norway. The flute, a largish whistle made of wood, received its name because of the strangely ethereal quality of its sound. This was shown in the ancient Norwegian dance the Strings performed. Its eerie tone and high register seemed to be as magical as the name of the instrument. The frequently shifting scales and sliding notes left the listener in kind of a trance, amazed by such an interesting sound coming from such a simple looking instrument.

The music washes away slowly, becoming more and more quiet, soon being replaced by only the original cascade of notes from the dulcimer, which soon, too, vanishes, leaving the listener with a feeling of disquietude. The Magical Strings have a very interesting sound, fully encompassing many different styles, but making them sound completely natural — something unusual for those attempting world music. They played their music with passion and feeling that came across well, filling the listener with different and distinct moods of the varied places. It was an excellent performance by a very interesting group.

One of these high-speed, high-performance machines can be yours for low monthly payments. The other one is just here for looks.

Power Macintosh for $33 a month.

Visit the Connecticut College Computer Store
Hamilton House, Lower Level
Ruth Seeley at x2090, Mon.- Fri. 12:00-4:00
"Formicans," however, focuses on the translations of one culture through the eyes of another and each character's translation of what the individuals around her or him are trying to communicate.

By MEREDITH KASTEN
The College Voice

The theater department and Theatre One launched a fiercely daring performance of Constance Congdon's "Tales of the Last Formicans" as part of the theater department's "In Translation" series. The production ran Thursday April 21 through Saturday April 23. Congdon's "Formicans" is a scientific presentation of aliens' discovery about life on earth. Their observations of some highly-dysfunctional American family highlights some of the absurdities of our culture. The aliens look like people, but they wear plastic sunglasses, perhaps to filter the emotions out of their experiences or to keep their souls from escaping through their eyes.

These aliens observe Cathy (Emily Miller) and Judy (Shannon Flynn) when they are forced to move back to their husbands' homes after their high school years. Cathy's teenage son (Reggie Wyns) grudgingly agrees when her husband and children leave them for high school in Colorado subdivision. Cathy is forced to leave her friends in New York and move to her grandparents' house. Cathy's mother Evelyn (Laura Dorson) tries to serve Cathy (Emily Miller) and Judy (Shannon Flynn) a meal. Their glasses, perhaps to protect themselves from the presence of the aliens, break. The aliens seem rather incomplete and dissipatising. Nevertheless, the cast and crew created a spectacular production that was both entertaining and thought-provoking. The flowing, deceptively simple set, designed by Edward Chibiurs and Charles F. Meyer, coupled with guest designer Nancy Collins' brilliant lighting, created a visual piece that matched and complimented the style and nature of the actors' performances. The ever-evolving set consisted of a few seats that rolled in from the audience: she simply tried to disconnect the audience from the hot-tempered emotions of the actors and their detached alien counterparts. The visual spectacle of the piece had the audience recognizing the performance of the actors, rather than all elements of the production blended together to form a truly complete work of theater.

Many of the actors gave outstanding and noteworthy performances. Myers brilliantly captured the frustration and confusion of the handyman slowly losing his abilities and memory to Alzheimer's disease. His expression and movements were hauntingly realistic and emotionally painful to endure.

Keller was convincing in his attempt to show that aliens control our every move. The role of Jerry could easily be played as the stereotypical annoying neighbor, class needed, or hyperactive psychopath, but Keller fell into none of these traps. His Jerry was honest, sensitive and soulful, searching for reason and connection within a world of creation and trying to console distraught individuals who lacked his insight.

Mike Rooner executed his role as The Actor with great dexterity playing a prophetic paper boy, a trucker, a B-movie alien having technical difficulties and a steely beer-bellied lover. His flexibility and wit kept the plays action. Miller was great. She approached Cathy's exploration of her crumbling relationships with her mother, father, son and husband with courage and boldness. Refreshingly, she did not try to elicit pity from the audience: she simply tried to balance the various disintegrating elements of Cathy's life and to fill the roles of mother, daughter and friend without alienating herself. Cathy is one of the more human characters in "Formicans."

Dorson, Wyns, and Flynn gave fine performances as well. The production could not have been better and congratulations should go to all involved.

Student choreographers to perform their work May 4-6

By MICHELLE RONAYNE
A&E Editor

It is once again that time of year when many campus artists and performers are preparing for their final performances of the college community.

The dance department is preparing for a repertory performance in Palmer at the beginning of May. The concert will include works by several students including Kirsten Beem, Emily Bilezus, Suzanne Bleizard, Sarah Carlson, Jessica Goepfert, Thomas Palazzo and Freya Wormus. Also featured will be guest artist Ronald Brown, director of EVIDENCE in New York. His works examine issues of gender, class, race and implications of assimilation. This semester he worked with students from the dance department on a premiere titled "Dirt Road."

The dance runs from Waterman's right-handed Largo at 7:15 pm on Saturday April 30 by Rosenthal's "The Barrier of Seville to Gosselet's piece titled Heartbeats which takes a look at the single life in the 1990s. This performance will take place from May 4-6 in Palmer auditorium.

Tickets are $5 general, $3 for students with I.D. and can be purchased for more information call (203) 439-ARTS.

1994 BIKE SALE!
Trek • Specialized • Fisher • Kona
Mountaintbikes from $288
15% OFF ACCESSORIES
WITH THIS AD AND COLLEGE I.D.
WAYFARER BIKE 443-8250
(BETWEEN OCEAN PIZZA AND THE RECOVERY ROOM)
BY JOSH LYNN
and TAD HINZ
The College Voice

The B-lague intramural basketball season is in full swing, with 18 teams in contention for the coveted championship. The biggest surprise has been the upset Brown Derby squad, with their flowing, fluorescent green and white tank tops. Led by ex- postal Lou Malotova’s 19 points per game and Josh’s ten points a contest, this team of hacks and defensive specialists has taken the league by storm. Their first victory came against the perennial champions, the Bobcats. The bitter winter split up Ed 209, but he decided to wet his one point and put up an ex-racket shot on his own basket. Good job John!!!! Other teams to look out for include The Defending Champs, The Faculty Squads, and Magnifici-

This time of year also brings the faithful brother to The Brown Derby, The Dairy Bar, and The Donut House. Will they be around for long enough, given their injury situation. Though we truly hate to see it, Josh and Kevin ‘Chatterbox’ Hygiene, Smell, Filth, etc... ‘Low

STUDENT SPECIALS!!!!
JUNE 1THRU SEPT 10, 1994
$120.00
$160.00
5xIS $200.00
With Student LD., Subject to Availability, New Tenants Only 464·7241

The swami Donut has rubbed his

Men’s club baseball drops doubleheader

BY TARA BRASIL
Special to the College Voice

Despite losing two games this weekend, the Connecticut College baseball team is looking to make this year, compiling a 2-3 record. Led by senior co-captains Forbes Dakota and Kevin ‘Chatterbox’ Hygiene, Smell, Filth, etc... ‘Low

5x10
$160.00
5x15
$200.00

With Student LD., Subject to Availability, New Tenants Only 464-7241

Sports
The All-Anger lineup revisited

In the wild west, Dallas, Calgary, and Toronto are strong. Nevertheless, the Pacific Division is a joke; only three of the six teams cinched spots in the post season. The conference is wide open with hot goaltending games. The contenders are the pretenders. However, the swan has rubbed his crystal belly for the eventual winners. The Detroit Red Wings have all the parts necessary to bring home the coveted trophy and will triumph over the Rangers, though their goaltending might still be a little suspect. The Keenan jinx will prevail; he took the Flyers and Blackhawks to the finals, in his first year, just to lose. What will make this year any different?

Last year, the original All-Anger lineup:
(1) Hamman: Consistently bit-

(2) Crissy Haywood: Whoknows why?

(3) Tom Satran: Condescending and mean; nary a joke uttered.
(4) Board: What’s their prob-

(5) Friend Weiler: The house that hits thing, and it was a good one. As a result, the team dominated the contest 13-10.

At the Coast Guard Academy this Saturday, Conn scored a doubleheader win over New York University’s junior varsity team, which remains unbeaten with a record of 1-0. Up against such stiff competition, Conn’s performance lagged throughout both games, resulting in 8-1 and 13-0 losses.

According to Head, “Our heads just aren’t in the game at this point.” Head remains optimistic about the remainder of the season, however, and labels the current squad Conn’s “most talented ever.”

The team looks forward to its upcoming games on Tuesday, April 24, against Tufts College in Bridgeport and Wednesday, April 25 at Wesleyan University in Middletown.

Sports Shorts:
Men’s crew wins two races over weekend

The men’s crew team had an excellent weekend, with the varsity 8 winning two races on Saturday. In the first race, the men outpaced Tufts, Holy Cross, and the University of Vermont, cruising to a nine-second victory.

In the second race, the team beat Boston College and Worcester Polytechnic Institute. The team’s record, according to team captain Tim Sotonyi, now stands at 7-2. On March 16, the varsity eight finished a close second to Williams, who edged the Camels by 3.2 seconds. In the weekend before, the varsity 8 lost its first race of the season to Williams in a three-team race in Worcester, with WPI finishing third.

Next weekend, the team matches up against in-state rivals Trinity and Wesleyan, before heading to Worcester on May 7 (Floridians XVII) for the New England Championships.

Men’s tennis preps for NESCAC Championships this weekend; finishes regular season at Trinity

A young men’s tennis team has started to come together, as evidenced by the recent four match winning streak. The Camels defeated ITS 5-4, Bates 5-2, Colby 6-1, and Brandeis 6-0 (home shoppers) this weekend before the Coast Guard Academy ended their streak with a 2-5 victory on Thursday.

The team heads to Trinity on Monday for its last regular season match, before heading to Wesleyan for the NESCAC Championships. Team captain Ed Metzendorf is confident about the team’s chances, and believes the squad can finish in the top three, “The team is coming together, we’re really getting. We hope and expect to do very well at NESCAC.”
Men's lacrosse trounces Babson; Williams is next

BY JON FINNEMORE
Publisher ex officio

Again displaying the balanced scoring attack that has elevated the fortunes of the team this spring, the men's lacrosse team topped Babson 19-4 on Saturday in front of a large home crowd. Twelve players got in the scorebook, with Mark Roose (three goals, three assists) leading the way offensively. Roy Dunworth and Chris Capone each added two goals and an assist, while Rob Driscoll and Damien DePeters had one goal and four assists apiece.

The game was fairly tight through the first period, which ended in a 1-1 tie. After that, however, the men turned it up another notch, and went into halftime with a 10-3 lead.

"It was a pretty tough first quarter," commented junior attack Rob Marion, who had one goal on the afternoon, "but after that we started playing really well."

The team added three more goals in the fourth quarter, putting the finishing touches on the fourth. Tom Hoder split the duties with Ben Richardson in the net, recording 13 saves between the two.

Each Franz Shields was ecstatic about the offensive outburst of last, which has helped the team climb out of its 1-4 start to its current record of 6-5. While Conn routed Babson last year also, the team relied upon the scoring prowess of All-American Matt Shea and John Jessop to lead the way. This year, while individuals have stood out, the team has made a point to fall upon almost everybody.

"We definitely are employing more of a team look this year," Shields said. While the heart and soul of the team are DePeters and Driscoll, he said, significant contributions have come from everyone.

The game was postponed to Williams on Tuesday, then return home for games against Amherst on Thursday and Manhattanville on Saturday. Williams is ranked number one in the ECAC, and DePeters said, "Obviously, we have to make sure any given year the first year to beat Williams, but if the last four games are any indication, Williams is in for a good game."

Sailing teams look for national glory

BY TARA BRASSE, Special to the College Voice

The women's sailing team's impressive fourth-place performance this weekend at the Reed Trophy/New England Championships at Yale University qualified the team for the Women's National Championships next month.

The top four teams at the Reed Trophy qualify to compete at the championships, and now Conn's women are now setting their sights on yet another victory, this time among national competitors. Conn's team was skippered by senior Ann Remy and sophomore Tracy Haley with crews consisting of freshmen Sara Schaefer and juniors Liz Murtha and Tara Callahan. Despite a variety of conditions, Conn's women remained strong against their competitors, representing the top teams in New England. Members of each of the ten-racer teams vote to select the top ten skippers and crew members in New England.

Haley had the honor of being selected the second-best skipper in New England, and Remy was chosen as number seven. Callahan placed second among crew members.

The coed sailing team took eleventh overall among national competitors. Conn again placed third, behind Brown University and Pennsylvania in the Thompson Trophy, despite a somewhat shaky performance. According to junior co-captain Rob Erda, "Things went pretty well overall." Senior Mike Trauer said, "We had a solid performance, and still have a lot to improve on." Senior co-captain Lyn Balsamo said the team had "a first race with no mistakes and a solid performance by Ken Tyszen and Carter Page, who pulled the team into third place among its 12 competitors at the Piddly-New England Freshmen Championships.

At the Southern Series, hosted by the University of Rhode Island, Conn again placed third, thanks to impressive showings by junior Andy Doben and freshmen Jon Patton and Sarah Folger. On Sunday, the team participated in the Hatch Brown Trophy at Boston University, in which junior co-captain Seth Wilkinson and senior Jen Lapan took third in the B Division. Alex Gross and freshman Jill Gardner sailed particularly well, missing first place in the A Division by just eight points.

Both teams look forward to important regattas in the near future; for the women, it is the National Championships on May 26-28, and for the coed team, it is the Coast Guard New England Dinghy Championships next weekend.

Women's track cruises to victory

BY JON FINNEMORE
Publisher ex officio

The women's track team continued its strong season with a posting of Salve Regina and the Coast Guard Academy in a meet held Thursday at Waterford High School.

The women topped the meet's first place finishers, Conn showed off its depth, placing a number of individuals in the top three. Among those athletes were Jennielle Devine (second in the 800 meters), Leah Bower (third in the 1,500), Ali Christoph and Kate Wilson (second and third in the 3,000, respectively), Christina Buchanan (third in the 5,000), Jen Morton (third in the 100 hurdles, second in the triple jump), Angela Grano (third in the 400 hurdles), and Jenn Beno (second in the hammer throw).

The women sent half their team to Holy Cross on Saturday for an optional meet in which Menendez and Dane each set personal records.

Additionally, Balsamo has provisionally qualified for the NCAA Division III Championships in the 10,000 meter event, recording a time of 37:40 in the Trinity Invitational last weekend. She is also awaiting word on her invitation to the NCAA meet in the 5000 meters.

The team is prepping for the NESCAC Championships, being held this weekend at Williams.