TRAVELING LINES

For quite some time, the conduct of some Trinity College students has been a matter of growing concern. Asking questions in the mind of many. In a recent interview, it was found in the Trinity Triad, a Trinity senior voiced an interest in evaluating fraternity fractions as the cause of faction with in the student body. It is the opinion of the student conduc- tivity of the student body.

The fraternity system is objectionable because it creates a division in the student body. If one establishes a difference in the so- cial status between fraternity and non-fraternity men, there develops a respect and an outright antagonism. The letter writer states that one differentiates fraternities is another factor of disunity among stu- dents.

The fraternity sets social life above all else. As a result, some students are led to believe that grades and values become misoriented. In- deed, one can not teach or to conduct study in educational doctrines are always changing. In spite of

The Pirandello plans to use outstanding student talent in different areas (lyricism, etc.) should take such factors into consideration. The Pirandello retains a reputation of being the quiet corner in the exercise of music of a high standard. Classic and modern works were in the form of sonatas, duets, and trios. The Pirandello had provided a difference in the performance of each piece. It can be found at the back of a large Chinese brush-stroke.

Dear Editor:

We were very pleased and surprised to see the last issue of ConnCensus. Please, because of the level of creative ability and originality; surprised, because of your initiative and frankness.

For too long people have been criticizing our school paper without being able to state what was wrong and without doing anything to improve it. Criticism is constructive. For the April 1 issue, however, only praise and laughter could be heard. Newspapers were rushed over to the dorms Thursday afternoon, the scene was quite a change from flocked around the bell desks, people ran from their rooms and loud laughter could be heard. BRIDGE BANTER

The first hand, today, shows a simple rebid by the opener. The second hand indicates a deviation from established principles and the third hand illustrates a concession used by responder after an opening bid by his partner of one No Trump.

S: K XX; H: A Q J XX; D: XX; C: Q XX

You opened with one Heart and your partner bid one Spade. What is your next bid?

2 Hearts. You should raise your partner's suit if you wish to sound aggressive. However, you have very little excess values and cannot afford to raise him.

S: A K XXX; H: Q XX; D: A J 10 X; C: C

Your partner bids hearts and has supported your diamonds. He then bids 4 No Trump. What is your response?

6 Diamonds. The 4 No Trump bidder is the only one to decide on the final contract. However, there is one exception to the rule. Your response to his 4 No Trump ordinarily would be 5 Diamonds, showing one Ace. If you do this, you feel your partner would be discouraged from Slam. Therefore, when the responder's hand contains a void, he may bid Slam directly over the 4 No Trump bid.

S: Q XXX; H: A XXX; D: K J XX; C: J

Your partner opened with one No Trump. What is your answer?

2 Clubs. This bid shows a minimum of eight high-card points and a holding of at least four Clubs in one of the major suits.
