Senior Class Presidential Candidates

Laurie Heiss

The candidacy for class reps does not involve any particular issues except perhaps communication which is a function of the ambition of the dorm reps. The job itself does not involve a martyrdom of work done by one person or an executive board. Rather, the efforts of the president are dependent on the willingness and energy of the reps. I won't promise more or better or different activities (except graduation) until the support of the reps is there because I will not run a one, two or three-man show. I'd like to coordinate this effort though and have enduring interests in SGA affairs. I know what I'm getting into and have abundant vigor, but mine alone is useless. Be energy conscious and elect good council members in your dorm. Thanks.

Steven James

I believe that the Senior Year is an important time for the individual and for the college community. As Class President, I must continually strive to create the framework for a rewarding year. This framework will arise through the responsiveness of our government to the needs and desires of our class. My emphasis will be on fund-raising for I feel that by having the necessary financial support, we will be able to have diversified events and thus move closer towards a stronger class unity. This framework will also emerge through the utilization of the talents and personalities of our entire class. I deeply hold the conviction that we have the potential within our class to create both a successful and an enriching senior year.

Through my involvement over the past three years, I have gained enough experience to make me feel confident in my ability to institute the necessary programs and policies to create this framework. I believe that we can create a successful senior year and thus I ask for your vote for Senior Class President.

Carolyn Nalbandian

I, Carolyn Nalbandian, am running for the office of Senior class president.

As a candidate for this position, I am willing to take your apathy and turn it into something which will benefit our class. I realize the task involved in stating this; but I believe that in our Senior year, we can become a cohesive force which the other classes will want to model themselves after. Our class should be the powerhouse for which high times and fruitful activities flow.

In the experience which I have attained as class representative for two years, social chairman of J.A., and Advertising editor of Pundit and Koine, I feel qualified to be the initiating force behind a successful year for everyone.

After three years at Conn., don't we deserve something more than "seniority?"

Richard McLellan

My name is Richard McLellan and I am running for President of the Class of 1978. I am a Government and American History double-major, and an also somewhat active in the Music and Theater Depts. Last semester I served as Social Chairman to Branford. This, of course, gave me a seat on House Council and Social Board. In this capacity I won a unanimous vote of confidence from my dorm. I know what kind of hard work will be necessary to fulfill my duties, and have already planned on lightening up on my course load, should I be elected.

As seniors next year we will all, in some ways, be expectant of what lies ahead in the real world. It won't be long before these days of exams and papers turn into memories of good times and good friends. I will try in every way possible next, to make these good times for you to remember later on. It's too late to be apathetic, so come on out and vote.

P.S. There is still time to contribute to the Junior Class Talent Show.

Senior Social Board

Jonathan Graham

My name is Jonathan Graham, and I am a candidate for the position of Senior Class Social Board representative. My reason for nominating myself is a desire to have a well rounded schedule of activities and events, both for the Senior Class and the student body as a whole, throughout the year. Advice and criticism are important in maintaining the proper perspective in any position, and if elected, I intend to seek the opinion of people, to keep the Social Board an open, flexible institution. The social events on campus should be reflective of the desires of a diverse student community, in order to be successful. There are enough people on campus dedicated to having a good time, that there should be no lack of interest or participation in a wide range of activities. I plan on devoting time and energy to this job, so support me with your vote.

Secretary-Treasurer will be appointed

Senior Candidates for Judiciary Board Chairman

Mary Barrett

My name is Mary Barrett and I am running for the position of senior class Judiciary Board representative. Although I have not previously served on the Judiciary Board, I do feel I am qualified in seeking this job. Three years as a member of the Connecticut College community have given me ample exposure to the Honor Code and the problems and benefits that arise from such an Honor system. I value highly the assumption made by such a system — that I am a person of honor, living among other persons of honor. I feel this assumption is based on enough fact to be applicable to this community, and therefore that the Honor Code deserves our support. When actively supported and enforced, the Honor Code is meaningful and effective. I would like to take part in that active support as a member of the Judiciary Board where I feel I can make a positive contribution towards maintaining a viable Honor system.

Donald Capelin

My name is Don Capelin and I am running for Senior class Representative to the Judiciary Board. As for my experience in student activities, so as not to bore you to death, let it suffice for me to say that I have been quite active on campus. I'll be happy to

I spent the fall term of this year at Williams College, on the twelve college exchange program. While this may not seem a qualification for office here at Conn., I assure you that it is. At Williams I found that Conn. College, like so many things, had to be viewed from a distance to be truly appreciated. Pardon the corn, but it's true. I realized what we have here and I like it, want to preserve the good aspects and change as many of the bad aspects as is possible.

I've heard that the position I seek is not an easy one. I'm not looking for an easy job, just one in which I can help. I see the position of Senior Class Judiciary Board Representative as a viable means of accomplishing this. Fellow members of the class of '78, I am asking for your support

Steven Certilman

I am running for senior class Judiciary Board representative because I'm concerned about safeguarding this campus while at the same time protecting the reputations of those merely involved in harmless play.

Michael Colnes

After much thought, I am running for reelection to the Judiciary Board. After serving three years, I have had to seriously consider what more I could offer in a fourth; I came up with the following: First and foremost as a member of the Conn. College community I have a personal interest in the direction of J.B. policy. I have had the opportunity to develop a clear and concise image of what that direction should be. As long as I am convinced that my views reflect those of some substantial portion of our community, then they deserve representation on the board.

Secondly, the board has been steadily progressing towards several major policy decisions over the last several years which may well be settled during the next term. My role on next year's board could well be to speak for some of previous boards' reasoning in these matters, so that they may be balanced against the views of new board members.

My view of the role of the Judiciary Board was also a consideration. I feel that the board should serve as a communication bridge between the abstract honor code and the students, faculty, and administration which comprise our community. Its job is to interpret the honor code, and to weigh any interpretation against the realities of living and studying at Connecticut College. The board is the instrument through which the honor code may be molded to meet our needs.

These considerations, as well as a look at what I have or have not accomplished in what I set out to do on the board have led me to run again. I ask for your support and your help, that next year's board may be as productive as possible.

Jr. Presidents

Matt Newman

As a sophomore I have gained much insight from our college community in the time I have been here. I have come to the conclusion that just wanting to be unified is not enough for any class, organization, or interest group. To be realistic, we as the class of 1979 must look ahead not only to next year but also at the next two years. How can our class organize itself effectively enough to influence positive and necessary changes in our school government and community? In this vein, I announce my candidacy for the presidency of the Junior Class.

The only way to bring a class together is to have more class functions. Class officers should serve the class, and the only way I can be truly beneficial to our class is to organize many more social and academic functions.

Thank you.

Junior Judiciary Board Candidates

Audrey Cutler

The experience gained from serving on the Judiciary Board has given me the insight needed to act as an objective and competent representative. It is difficult to formulate a platform when running for a position such as JB. Members of the Judiciary Board are obliged to protect the accused by not revealing any personalities involved in a particular case. Therefore, the confidential nature of Judiciary Board cases provides esoteric information which may place the board in a clandestine light.

Many students may then question their representation in the judicial process of the college. In an attempt to expand the students' involvement with the Judiciary Board, I strongly support the re-implementation of the JB log and frequent Judiciary Board policy meetings, open to the college community. Personally, I would be willing to discuss the school's judiciary procedure and policy with any student. Such discussion would serve to broaden the students' representation on the board. Judiciary Board members would then be able to represent a broad spectrum of viewpoints, concerning the honor code, which would in turn allow them to arrive at fair and just decisions.

Presently, the board members offer varying and diverse interpretations of the honor code. These opinions range from strict enforcement of policy to a more lenient and relative perspective. The Judiciary Board's representative nature can only be secured through the inclusion of numerous viewpoints.

I urge all student members of the Connecticut College community to vote for their respective class officers, to allow for equitable representation.

Jay Greenspan

My name is Jay Greenspan and I'm running for my second term as a member of the Judiciary Board. I have gained much from my first on J.B. The actual cases and proceedings have proven interesting and I have obtained some degree of fulfillment from helping to promote and continue the Honor system. But as far as a new campaign strategy, my first term has come up short.

I do not propose any drastic changes in J.B. policy, and I cannot find any reparable faults in J.B. actions. The major difficulty in the actions of the Honor system as cited by its critics, is that not enough students take it seriously. I believe that this problem, although admittedly existent, has been exaggerated by the pessimists on campus. But even so, this problem deals with the students' integrity, which can be little affected by J.B. policy.

The Honor system is the result of some very idealistic views. J.B. acts as a tying force between this idealism and reality. I emphatically support controlled idealism 'on campus,' and I appreciate the rewards that our idealistic system affords.

I seek the position on J.B. not to help myself to get into a graduate school, or enhance my social life, for it shall do neither. I seek the position because I feel that I can place valuable input into determining J.B. actions. And although I can support the Honor Code as a member of the Connecticut College Community, I can do more in this area as a member of the body that defends it, the Judiciary Board.

Social Board

Vance Gilbert

You know me.

Fred Murolo

My name is Fred Murolo and I am a candidate for social representative for next year's junior class. I have frequently helped to organize the work on social events on campus and this would be valuable in my role as social representative. I would like to see the class of 1979 very socially active in the coming year. So with your help we'll have a good time.

Candidates for Sophomore President

Eric Schoenberg

At the time of the Student Government elections, there was much talk about the problem of 'student apathy.' I do not believe this is the major problem. Students become apathetic when they have no way to speak out and be heard. Why should people bother to be concerned when no one listens? It is up to the elected officials to seek out and represent the students' views. To achieve this, active leadership is needed.

It is also up to the elected officers to promote class functions and school events. However, to be successful, this requires input and assistance from the class as a whole. This is crucial.

I believe that I can contribute to the Class of 1979 by helping it do as much as possible for itself and for the school.

Please vote.

Jr. Treasurer

Diana Ridgway

My name is Diana Ridgway and I am running for Secretary - Treasurer of the Junior Class 77-78. This is the first year that this position will be an elected one, which emphasizes its importance.

I have served on House Councils and I am enthusiastic about campus government and student power. After attending the all-campus forum to discuss student government problems, held on April 6, I became more personally interested in student government. I felt discussion was a good start, but a very limited one, and now it's time for the action. I then decided to become seriously involved and run for a student government office.

Michael Litchman

I would like very much to be President of the Sophomore Class. I wish to devote my time and ample energy to the revitalization of Student Government, and to ensure that we have a Student Government that listens, not only to its own officers, but to the Student Body, from whom the power of Student Government is derived.

Student Government is at a crossroads. As part of its evaluation, a committee of College Council is deciding the future of that body; which is the only mode of communication between students and faculty on this campus. Our class is not represented on that committee!

'Only a cohesive class can act intelligently'

The future of Student Government is at stake, and I would assure that changes made will be ones that our class approves of, since we expect to be here for three more years. I would get on that committee! We need both a voice in Student Government, and a pair of ears in the Sophomore Class, and I would like to be both.

The visibility of the Class Council is also in danger. As a member of our Class Council this year, I think that with mutual respect, and an atmosphere of freedom of expression, student opinions can be brought across, and the Council will have served its purpose as a sounding board.

As President of our class, I would be an organizer, a mediator, and a collector of ideas and opinions. In co-operation with the other officers you elect, and with your support, Sophomore Class Government can be your Class Government.

Needless to say, the Class Presidency is an important, functional office through which many class objectives are brought to the surface and then acted upon. The office itself is mainly of an organizational nature involving memberships on various student governmental bodies ranging from the College Council to the Constitution Committee. Aside from this functional aspect, however, the main purpose of the Class President must not be blurred by these organizational tasks. Rather, as I see it, the President's purpose is an outgrowth of these organizational, governmental bodies. My concept of Class

Larry Menna

President is that he must, along with the other class and student government officers, obtain a consensus of class needs and wants; herein lies the most demanding aspect of the office. In order to accomplish what the class as a whole wishes, the coherency of the class is a must concerning class policy and its subsequent implementation. The Class President provides this vital leadership toward achievement by remaining closely attuned to the opinions of the class itself. Here, "unity" is the key word; it is the focal point toward which the Class President must direct his energies. Only an unified, cohesive class can act intelligently and responsibly. The Class President can, in conjunction with the other government officials, not only help provide for the general welfare of the college, but also for the specific desires of the Sophomore Class. This much needed unity as well as the organizational function of the office of Class President is what I will strive to accomplish as Sophomore President if elected.

Janice Mayer

Class Government has the potential to be as energetic and essential to the community as any other component of student government at Connecticut College. Unfortunately though, it seems to lack the unity that the Dorm Councils maintain, and the interest that the College Council and Judiciary Board stimulate in the community. Therefore, the goals that the Sophomore Class President should set are the unification and solidification of the Class Council, and the maintenance of interest among the Class members, as to the functioning of their government. More specifically, the Class Council should work as a team. — the President should realize that the role that the Representatives play is equally as important as his or her position, for they reflect the views of the students.

Also, the members of the Class should be kept notified by their class officers through their Representatives. Logically, the members can't be expected to participate if they don't know the issues or events being planned.

My approach to the role of Sophomore Class President would be an open one. Any and all suggestions would be welcome from the Class members. I would strive to represent the class consensus at College Council meetings, and foremost, I would try to exact the potential our Class has to offer by establishing the Class Council as a group effort from the beginning.

Thank you for your consideration.

Michael Litchman Larry Menna Janice Mayer

Sophomore Secretary-Treasurer

Susan Brewster

This year I enjoyed serving as Secretary-Treasurer of the Freshman Class and would again like the opportunity to work for the Class of 1980. The importance of this position is often overlooked when, in fact, it represents one of the most influential positions on the class council. As an elected voter member of the class, the Secretary-Treasurer's vote should reflect a thoughtful understanding of past and present class procedures. The position of secretary-treasurer requires an efficient and responsible person who will inform the class of the activities of their government, and one who will keep the class records in order. Having both the experience and the enthusiasm to participate in the student government I, again, offer you my services as your class Secretary-Treasurer.

Karen Frankian

My name is Karen Frankian and I am running for sophomore class Judiciary Board representative. There are two concerns which best reflect my reasons for running. Firstly, I consider it of great importance to actively uphold the Honor Code. Secondly, I believe that aiding other students in gaining a better understanding of what the honor system is and how it works is integral.

The Honor Code is a vital part of our college community. The duty of reporting infractions and abuses is one of my concerns. If current policies are not being fully executed, then there are changes within the system that can be made. The policy that the Judiciary Board takes however, is going to, in the long run, reflect the reputation of the college and the integrity of its community.

Susan Brewster

Setoria Jackson

Setoria Jackson

My name is Setoria Jackson and I am running for Secretary-Treasurer for the Sophomore Class. As a freshman I have not been very active in affairs that pertain to the student body, but I have to start somewhere, and I believe that now is the time for me to become involved. I am very interested in the affairs of the student body and would enjoy being a member of the Sophomore Council along with my colleagues.

The responsibilities of the Secretary-Treasurer are to record and distribute the minutes of all the meetings, and be responsible for keeping accurate records of the class finances. In addition to reporting regularly to the Class Council, the Secretary-Treasurer assumes the duties of the president in the event of his absence or upon his request. If the Presidency becomes permanently vacated, the Secretary-Treasurer shall hold the office until a new election for the office can be held.

Though I have not been involved in Student Government affairs at Connecticut College my high school Student Government experience has given me a sufficient reason to believe that I would be well qualified for the position. I was a member of the Student Council for 4 years which involved taking minutes of meetings and reporting back to the members of my class. I was also secretary-treasurer of various senior-related activities. This year I am a member and also secretary-treasurer of the Gospel Choir, "The Black Voices of Pride," here on campus.

Give me your vote on election day and I will prove my capabilities to you. Thank you.

Candidates for Sophomore Social Board

Celayne Hill

My name is Celayne Hill, and I live in Larrabee. I am not going to bore you with a long list of my credentials or qualifications. I am running for Sophomore Representative on the Social Board. I can promise no miracles. If I am elected, I would serve on the Social Board representing my class, and their ideas. I have been here at Connecticut College for almost a whole year, and changes can be made, only for the better. I would like to raise the level of activities here at Conn. I know there are many people who talk all the time about what should be done, and if I am elected, I would be elected to work along with you in getting your ideas and opinions voiced. Only you, the Sophomore Class, know what you want. With the efforts of the many creative minds we have working together, there is no reason why we cannot make things work the way we want them to, for the better, and to make the necessary changes needed. If I am elected, I would be working in the interest of my class.

Laura Novick

A little excitement on the weekends, and maybe even on the weekdays, never hurt anyone. In fact, diversions from study and work have proved to increase one's efficiency when one has to work. I think things can get rather slow around here. On weekends, in particular, there is not always something exciting going on, and I want to help to get a little more organized excitement into our lives at Conn. Two of my better known qualities are my skills at both organizing and partying! As Sophomore Social Board Representative I could put these skills to good use in suggesting and arranging ideas for parties and other social activities around campus. I am willing to give you my time so that we can all see some progress in these areas. Please vote for me, Laura Novick, for Soph. Soc. Bd. Rep. Thank-you.

Food Day, April 21

Food.

You eat it every day. Maybe even two or three times a day, if you're lucky.

But did you ever stop to think about the food you eat?

Really think about it?

Do you know what's in your food? The pesticides, preservatives, hormones, additives, and other mysterious "fine print" ingredients?

Do you know about the components of your diet, like excess fat and sugar, that can contribute to tooth decay, obesity, bowel cancer, diabetes and heart disease?

Do you know why people all over the world, even right here in the United States, are starving? And why the U.S. is providing less food aid than it did ten years ago?

On April 21 we're going to take one day and talk about all these things. With teach-ins, rallies, workshops, food fairs, conferences, special meals, events. And with a special emphasis on nutrition — the links between diet and disease.

Food Day, April 21, all across America.

Do your body a favor.

Be there.

Candidates for Sophomore Judiciary Board

Peter Robinson

My name is Peter Robinson and I am running for one of the two Judiciary Board positions allotted to the sophomore class. I am running because I want to get involved and I feel I will be able to work with the new chairman, Jerry Carrington, quite well.

If elected, I would like to help Jerry with his reforms of the 'fink-clause' and of the matriculation process. It is most important to inform and educate willing to give up a lot of your own time. If elected I would be easily accessible and very willing to give up my time because I feel that if you are on the board, you have to be responsible and being accessible and giving up time are a member's responsibilities. If elected, I hope the student body would feel free to come and talk to me because I have always enjoyed a good conversation. If you have questions or suggestions, feel free to come. Besides being a member of the board, if elected, I would also be a member of Class Council,

Joel Mishkin

My name is Joel Mishkin, and I am running for the position of Judiciary Board member for the sophomore class. I was a member of the board this year, and I would like to continue in this post.

This past year has given me great insight into the board and its functions. At first this year, I was a bit confused, as any new member would be as to the board's goings on, however, as the year progressed, I learned what to look for in cases, what questions to ask, and also perhaps most important, how to make students before the board feel as comfortable as possible. Because of what I've learned, I have become a more efficient board member and very capable at handling cases.

During this past year I have seen too many students before the board who were unaware of matriculation and all it implies. Therefore, I would like to implement better ways of informing upcoming freshmen about matriculation, the honor code, and especially plagiarism.

Also, I feel that I have been very accessible to the college community, and have been more than willing to discuss hypothetical cases and possible outcomes if they were brought before the board. This, I feel, enables the community to have a better understanding of the board.

I feel that I can be an effective board member for next year because I have experience, new ideas to further utilize this experience, and an attitude to allow a flexible approach towards the board's cases. Therefore, I ask for your support in the coming election. Thank you.

Peter Robinson

Karen Frankian

Joel Mishkin

Celayne Hill

Laura Novick

In order for the Judiciary Board to effectively function, students and faculty must realize their obligations as far as reporting academic and social infractions are concerned — either their own or someone else's. This is why an understanding by students and faculty alike, that loyalty in maintaining the fine reputation of Connecticut College is primary to the effectiveness of the Judiciary Board and the Honor Code.

I want to become a member of the J. Board. There is no question as to my willingness to become involved in and work for the Judiciary Board and its goals.

the incoming freshmen of the honor system Conn. operates under. The freshmen have to be made aware of the responsibilities they assume when they matriculate. Even though I have not been a member of the board, it has been an interest of mine for quite some time. I attended both of their open forums and I have talked to quite a few of the members about the responsibilities of a board member and also about the problems with the present matriculation process.

I feel to be a Judiciary Board member you have to be accessible to the student body and which I consider as important as being on J.B. because the Class Council is the class of 1980's representative to the Student Government and the administration.

I consider myself a level-headed, fair-minded person, which I consider important characteristics for a member of the Judiciary Board, because to deal with the cases brought to the board, you have to be objective. And when it comes to the punishment, if there is any, you have to be fair and not too harsh.

I am sure that I can do the job and do it well. Please give me your support and vote for me, Peter Robinson.

Theatre in Shakespeare's day

"Do they not draw the people from hearing the word of God, from godly lectures and sermons? Do they not induce whoredom and uncleanness?"

A quote from a New London sermon regarding X-rated entertainment? No, from olde London in the 1570's denouncing lust, liquor, and other diversions that busied audiences at show-time.

In Shakespeare's day during the late 1500's and early 1600's, play-going was popular entertainment in London. A traveling group of actors quickly attracted crowds and instant theaters were set up in any available space.

England's first building that brought acting troupes in from the squares and inn-yards to a real playhouse was named simply the Theater. Admission was priced at a penny for groundlings and two or three pennies for richer patrons.

All did not go smoothly, however, for theater had its critics. Not critics who reviewed dramas and wrote up nasty critiques of performances, but censorious Puritans who objected to theater as a sin-breeding ground.

The Puritans deemed theater to be lewd, what with it being the Devil's invention; and their pamphlets scored it as a meeting place for harlots and their customers.

The authorities of the City of London assailed the theater as a propagator of crime and riots and as a likely place to pick up the plague.

With the Puritans and City magistrates dead set against the stage, and the twenty-one-year lease on the land expired, the owner of the Theater formed a syndicate that included actor-playwright Shakespeare; and the search to find a site to build a new playhouse began.

The location would have to be in the suburbs to be out of the jurisdiction of the City magistrates or within a "liberty" ( a City area exempt from jurisdiction).

Theaters built in such areas raised a flag high on a pole to indicate to the citizens of London that a play would be performed.

A suitable place was found and leased near the southern end of London Bridge close to two other playhouses, the Rose and the Swan.

Luckily for the syndicate, the landlord of the old lease was "out of town," so carpenters were engaged to remove the timber from the Theater and begin construction on the new playhouse.

The timbers were marked and re-used to build a large part of the new Globe, which was completed sometime in the summer of 1599.

The Globe and its company enjoyed great success, and in 1603 the players were authorized by royal decree to play as the King's Men.

Countless critics assert that until the playhouses were closed under Cromwell in 1642 that the Globe was rated second to none.

And there you have it: a look at the days of theater when shows and audiences were noted for their own stunning performances.

Chamber music plays a new note

by Lawrence Walters
 On Sunday, April 17, at 2:30 p.m. in the College House living room the premiere of a totally new type of student recital will take place.

The INFORMAL STUDENT CHAMBER MUSIC RECITAL WORKSHOP consisting totally of original student compositions will be the first recital in Conn's history in which the audience can take an active part. The recital will be more an educational experience than a concert performance.

Two part pieces composed by John Brolley, Mitch Pine, Lisa Quinion, Connie Smith, Jack Wade, and Larry Walters will be played and then the audience and the composers will briefly discuss how the work was composed, what the piece's themes are, how the different parts of the piece are present in relation to each other, the composition's texture and mood, and any other questions anyone may have related to the composers work.

This workshop will be an invaluable experience for anyone interested in learning how a composer writes different styles of music and what is contained in each of these musical forms.

Anyone wishing to attend is strongly encouraged to do so, whether you have a limited or extensive knowledge of music.

Harvard professor on Shakespeare

by Doris Lidestri

The "kick-off" that began the week of the Shakespeare Festival was made by Professor Harry Levin on April 7. The Harvard English professor escorted his Dana Hall audience through "Two Scenes From Macbeth."

Peter J. Seng, Professor of English at Conn, introduced the Shakespearian scholar and noted that he had studied under Levin at Harvard twenty-seven years ago.

Levin described the dark restlessness of the play, saying that in its existence had become a waking, walking dream. His vivid reference to "the smell of blood" on Lady MacBeth's hands brought a sharp gasp from the audience, while his puns on several maternal-deprivation theories drew chuckles.

Levin, a handsome, silver-haired man, displayed a scholarly command of knowledge that he presented with "asides" of engaging bits of theater trivia.

The week-long festival celebrating the work of Shakespeare is supported by the Ida Gibson Preston Fund.

Professor Wiles revisits Conn

The Rev. Gordon P. Wiles, professor emeritus of religion at Connecticut College, will deliver the second "De Litteris" series lecture Thursday, April 14, at 7:30 p.m. in room 113, New London Hall.

Prof. Wiles holds a seminary diploma from Westminster Theological College, Cambridge, England, and has done additional graduate study at Princeton Theological Seminary.

Yale University awarded him an M.A. in religious studies and conferred on him a Ph.D. degree for his research in Pauline Studies, the New Testament area for which he is well known.

He received the B.A. and M.A. in classics from Rhodes

University, South Africa and a B.A. and M.A. in theology from Cambridge, England.

The topic of his paper will be "South Africa; Grounds for Hope?"

Prof. Wiles has provided the following background for the lecture, which is sponsored by the Connecticut College Committee on Lectures and Discussion, is open to the public at no charge.

I was born in South Africa in 1909 and lived there until 1951, except for a few years in England for study at Cambridge University, 1931-35.

As a Presbyterian minister in South Africa I was a vocal opponent of racial segregation and was associated with such liberal leaders as Jan Hofmeyr (liberal Cabinet Minister), Alan Paton (champion of the blacks), Professor Z.K. Matthews (black leader and for some time an official of the World Council of Churches), and others.

I left South Africa permanently, because of my opposition to the mass of repressive legislation introduced at that time by the newly empowered National Government under Dr. Malan— from 1948 on. I said goodbye to my South African life and breathed a freer air in America, where I became naturalized.

My recent return to visit South Africa, after a lapse of twenty five years, reintroduced me to the tragedy of apartheid, mounting to a climax under the present National Government under Prime Minister Vorster. The riots of Soweto and Langa had just erupted. I met many of those whites (rank and file, and leaders) who oppose the government and its apartheid policies.

My sense of the evil of apartheid, the obduracy of the government, the rising black militancy, the increasing white opposition, and my understanding of what a race and civil war could do to South Africa and the inevitable disaster that would follow—all this lies behind my paper, "South Africa: Is There Any Hope?"

Professor Emeritus of Religion Gordon Pitts Wiles

Pundit is publishing this issue as a supplement to our regular set of weekly editions. It is simply a result of the SGA's need for a forum to publish the platforms of its various candidates; this supplement does not attempt to include all of the week's news, features, fine-arts, and sports.

Next Thursday, April 21, Pundit will publish an expanded edition for Parent's Weekend. Featured will be a study (in both photos and words) of the best rooms on campus, the lottery process, and the new Housefellows.

Eagle and Charley say 'Sorry'

An Apology to Sharon McIntyre
 "In the course of hard academic studies, relaxation is the key to survival." (Dwight Stones, 1976) Here at Conn., Dorm Hoops is one source of relaxation for the athletically inclined. Due to student interest, we were asked to write amusing articles to keep the Pundit readers abreast of the league results. Obviously, we did not always amuse. Therefore, we would like to take this opportunity to apologize to Sharon McIntyre, who complained about our April 7 column. We would also like to thank all the rest of you who have taken our humor in the spirit in which it was intended.

Signed,
 E.C.&C.T.

by John Rothschild
 The Connecticut College Men's Lacrosse team challenged Notre Dame for four quarters here Friday afternoon. The outcome was a 9-5 defeat. C.C. gave a hundred per cent effort and proved that the team is not only talented, but also able to compete with powerful opponents.

Unfortunately, Friday was unseasonably chilly. The estimated three-hundred plus crowd braved the cold to urge the Lacrosse team to victory. The entire squad was uncontrollably psyched after six weeks of diligent practice. Initially Conn. was down 4-1. Davenport Scott, after consuming two pounds of raw meat, scored our first goal. The battle had begun. The infamous Beaver (Stallone) Morrin, energized after drinking five slightly undercooked eggs, scored our second tally. Connecticut's bid for victory fell short. However, Bear (Worm)

Kobak, Peter Stokes, and Bob Daleta also contributed goals. Special compliments must go to Jim "masochist" Glick who performed admirably. Speaking of Moore, his absence was felt and we are all awaiting his comeback, which would certainly strengthen the team. The vicious rumor that he is holding out for more money is presently unsubstantiated. There are a few other false rumors that must be rectified. 1) The Conn. College Lacrosse Team did not rent rooms in Lawrence and Memorial prior to the game. 2) The vast improvement over last year's team is not due to recruiting an entire team of Coast Guard Cadet athletes.

Much of the team's improvement is due to an excellent coaching staff and their Lacrosse tips. Coach Courtney had much trouble teaching Peter Musser how to field ground balls. Courtney brilliantly painted the names of twenty-five freshman girls on each Lacrosse ball. Now Peter can chase them and pick them up, which will hopefully enables him to shoot and score.

On the serious side, I hope the Connecticut College community is proud of our new second year Lacrosse team. (I hesitate to use the word "club"). The Captains, Bear, John Moore and Beaver, have done admirable jobs as team leaders. Our goalie, Jim Glick, has played with dedication, drive and talent. (He stopped seventeen shots against Notre Dame!) We are constantly getting better due to our three underrated coaches, Jim Courtney, Larry Roberts, and Pete Guille. I wish to extend special thanks to the crowd and their sincere participation. The Lacrosse team has finally acquired a commendable reputation. Notre Dame may be lucky that we do not play them again this year.

Quad I, Ham-Wind picked as favorites

by Eagle Crow
 And Charley Tuna

(Monday) Just as the Red Sox are seeing their play-off hopes fading, our esteemed Commissioner and his Lambdin-Lazrus club saw their slim play-off hopes go up in smoke Monday night. John Katz burned the twines for 18 first half points and then teamed up with Saul Rubin to hold off a last ditch come-back by the L.L. Beans. Down by 12 with 5 minutes to go, Ted Rifkin led the surge which was to fall fatally short as Off-Campus won 110-98.

Hamilton-Windham established themselves as playoff co-favorites by mowing down three potential Shinault Cup challengers in one week. Lionel Catlin (20 pts.) led teammates Mallison (12), Mykrank (10), and Ives (8) to a crushing 54-41 victory over Off-Campus. Catlin couldn't miss against Harkness and his 31 points left Mr. G & Co. looking like they'd been hit by a Lionel Train. (He did a non-stop on you, choo-choo!). Following their 48-35 win, the team then reverted back to a balanced attack in a come-from-behind victory over Quad I 41-36. Both these teams have won their division titles and are looking for a possible rematch in next Thursday's title tip-off.

Quad I rebounded from their defeat as they pasted the West Side 69-43. Although Quad placed three men in double figures, the big story of the game was the reffing which seems to have been handled by the "two blind mice." The final tally shows 13 fouls called against Quad as opposed to 25 on West Side. This game was played for pride as both teams are already in the play-offs.

/// Lionel's great defense and awesome offense are what makes Hamilton-Windham a championship favorite. ///

Hopefully, the refereeing in the play-offs will be more consistent with the rules of modern warfare.

In other action, Harkness continued to stumble into the play-offs as they were crucified on the day before Easter by the Morrisson Catholics 53-51. McCauley, McCarthy, and Fiskio combined for 38 of those points, the clincher being a turn around banker by McCauley at the buzzer over the heathen Hebe, Jeff Sado. It was not a good day for the Matzoh boys. Harkness did manage to break into the win column by beating a crippled Alumni team 66-36 and a hapless Quad II outfit 76-40.

J.A. clinched the fourth and final play-off spot in the South by defeating Freeman 52-47 as the Gator outshot the Berg 24-20. They continued on by greasing past tough-luck Burdick I despite the valient efforts of Ken Gradner and Ricky Siegel. In spite of a mediocre record, Burdick I has played some solid ball. They have lost six games by 3 points or less, the harshest loss being their 49-47 overtime heartbreaker to the Faculty Headhunters last Wednesday.

K.B. I sewed up the final play-off spot in the North by beating J.A. 46-43 and snapping a 6 game J.A. win streak. Once again the Gator won the battle, outscoring Big Red 24-22 but his teammates could not provide enough help to win the war.

Crow and Tuna Player-of-the-week: Lionel Catlin

Lionel's great defense and awesome offense is what makes Hamilton-Windham a championship favorite. The Ham-Wind strategy is simply, as Lionel says, "Just give me the ball and I'll put it in the hoop." Crow and Tuna Play-off Picks: Quad I and Hamilton-Windham Both of these teams combined deadly outside shooting with tough inside play by their big men. The speed of Perry and Fiderer has produced many points for Quad this season and the pressing 3-2 defense of Ham-Wind. has also produced numerous quick baskets. The tough 2-1-2 of the Quad has shut down high scoring opponents as well as produce fast fast break opportunities. Bench strength is another plus for these two teams since many times the outcome of a game is decided not by who is playing well but by who is riding the pines in foul trouble. Should either of these teams not win it all, look for West Side or Faculty as long-shot possibilities.
