College Faculty Votes to Join Princeton Language Program

The faculty of Connecticut College has voted to accept the invitation of President John M. Solo of Princeton University to participate in the "Cooperative Undergraduate Language Programs." In his letter of invitation President Golben wrote, "The program will make available to talented students the opportunity to study intensively languages which are not taught at an advanced level at the student's home campus, and to combine this language training with studies in the area of interest.

The Program includes Arabic, Chinese, Japanese, Persian, Turkish, Russian, and relevant studies in the humanities and social sciences. Students participating in the program will spend their junior year at Princeton. They must have at least an elementary knowledge of the language they wish to study, acquired either at the college or at an approved summer school. Financial aid for intensive summer courses is available through the Program from the alumni association's grant. After junior year at Princeton, students will spend the second summer of language training or of pursuing a second major.

The students will return to their home campuses for senior year and the Arabic, Chinese, Japanese, Persian, Turkish, Russian, and relevant studies in the humanities and social sciences in their senior year.

It is expected that most interested students would plan to do postgraduate work in the Near Eastern, East Asian, or African areas. Their graduate studies would benefit greatly from the linguistic competence the Princeton consortium has gained. It has shown that the national need for qualified men to teach these languages is met, increased, since the number of these educators is growing at the graduate level, and also, by the growing number of these young people in the pioners in making provision for them to train in the areas of real significance to their departments and to the undergraduate level.

Undergraduates applying for admission to the Program will find that there are two requirements for admission: a distinguished academic record and evidence of critical language, or the equivalent.

She has written numerous articles in this area for Canadian Historical Review, Victorian Studies, and The American Historical Review. Her book on "Invention of the "Collegiate Model," was published in a collective volume on The British. "Collegiate Model," 1911. She has also been appointed a visiting professor at the University of Durham in 1962-63. Beyond the Bond

We were alarmed at the wealth of misinformation circulating and felt that this would concern the Mardi Walker case. This information has resulted in the formation of hasty judgments which cannot be eliminated by a simple statement of the facts as presented in our article. We would hold that all concerned would talk as we have done with Mardi and be as impressed as we have been with the sincerity and willingness to cooperate which she demonstrated.

When we realized in our discussion that our actions concerning this affair have had widespread coverage not only in the Connecticut newspapers, but in newspapers and on campuses covering much of the East. The Atlanta papers gave much publicity to the campaign. They exhibited an open admission at the fact that Mardi was not just one Northern zealot whose plight would be ignored or discounted by the majority of other students. She had the backing of a college composed mainly of other white Northern students willing to defend the courage and ideals of a fellow student. The people of Atlanta are aware of the student's careful consideration and they would have had we not successfully completed such a campaign.

Joanna Warner received a special delivery letter from Wills College in Aurora, New York stating that they had held emergency meetings and had agreed to aid us in any way that they could. They were willing to start a fund drive for a student at another school with which they had no personal connection. The Brown and White at Lehigh University used Mardi's plight as a front page spread introducing a Food Fair Fund Drive which they were beginning.

What we are attempting to do in presenting all this factual data is to awaken those who do not see the far reaching effects that our actions have had. We were aiding one of our own, and the implications of this act go far beyond that of aiding any student in distress. We have given a vote of confidence to all the other potential Mardis here and at other Northern schools. They know now that there is much support behind them and their ideals. Not all students may have been as impressed, but the fact remains that this has had far broader implications and repercussions that our student government had expected in proposing such a move.

We wish to express our great satisfaction with the resulting situation. It has shown us that first of all our activities here can be important and even crucial and secondly that we are not alone in our problems. Other campuses fear the same apathy and their leaders look with approval at the concern and enthusiasm demonstrated here. We hope that this enthusiasm has been aroused mainly with the passing weeks and that Mardi will be able to reach most of the campus with the message that our action has been one of the most important contributions to an ideal to which she was willing to give all.

Several unsuccessful attempts to improve race relations and to ease the social surplus among the whites and blacks in the United States was a Negro and a white group of young people who probably received more attention than the actual problem of racial discrimination. We were trying to prove some facts, while the questions we were trying to prove were that we as whites were not all as fair and open-minded as we claimed to be. And it would have been all right if I had known that the Negro and it would have been all right if I had known that the Negro and

Students Mobbed, Attacked Gaining Faculty Show Info

The Palmer parking lot was packed with students early Thursday afternoon, and it was not uncommon for one to see a large number of students talking among themselves and trying to figure out what to do. One of the favorite topics of conversation was the upcoming faculty show, which was scheduled to take place that evening.

One student, who was attending the faculty show for the first time, said, "I've heard a lot about it from my friends, but I'm not sure what to expect. I hope it's as good as they say it is."

Another student, who was a repeat attendee of the faculty show, commented, "I always enjoy seeing the professors in different roles, and this year's show promises to be even more entertaining than usual."

Felix Greene Presents Views
After Extensive Trip in China

Article from People's World
San Francisco (February 15, 1964)

Felix Greene, who recently returned from his third extensive trip through China

For the criticism expressed here last Wednesday (Feb. 12) by Felix Greene, who recently returned from his third extensive trip through China, there is yet another side to the coin that few are willing to admit.

China, which is so often cast in the negative light of the world's press, is not the place where socialism and communism have not made an impact. It is a country which has made great strides in the development of its economy and in the improvement of the living conditions of its people. The Chinese people are proud of their achievements and are determined to continue on this path of progress.

In short, China is not a place of ignorance and poverty, but a land of opportunity and promise. The Chinese people are working hard to improve their standard of living and to build a better future for themselves and their children.

Religious Fellowship Sponsors
Grade School Tutorial Project

Dwight D. Eisenhower once said, "The best government is as good as its people." Our students are proof of this statement, as they are dedicated to helping others.

Our students understand the importance of education and are committed to making a difference in the lives of those around them. They understand the power of knowledge and are determined to pass it on to others.

It is important to support our students in their efforts to build a brighter future for themselves and their community. The Religious Fellowship is proud to sponsor this grade school tutorial project, which is designed to help students improve their academic performance.

That's why we are excited to announce the launch of our new online program, "Personalized Learning," which is tailored to meet the needs of each student. Our program is designed to help students develop a strong foundation in their chosen subject and achieve their academic goals.

We believe that education is the key to success and we are committed to providing our students with the resources they need to succeed. With "Personalized Learning," we are confident that we can help our students reach their full potential.

Don't miss out on this opportunity to support our students and help build a brighter future for tomorrow's leaders. Make a donation today and make a difference in the lives of those around you.

Let's work together to create a better future for all.
Freshmen Give Modern Farce; Sophomores, Allegorical Play

Last Friday evening at Compo Hall was presented a humorous, allegorical play. The scene was drawn from the classicalchoice, as it is difficult for the cast to make any mistakes. The director had selected his relatively high brow socio-economic characters for the cast, and the students enjoyed the fare. After the performance, the audience was divided into two groups: those who enjoyed the farce and those who did not. The farce was a hit with the majority of the audience, while the allegorical play was not well-received. The farce was a success, while the allegorical play was not well-received.

College to Continue Exchange Program

The Coca-Cola Company will participate again this summer in a one-week exchange program with Howard University in Washington, D.C. The purpose of the exchange is to allow students to become acquainted with the various aspects of urban living at both institutions. The exchange operates on a reciprocal basis: students from Howard will stay at Connecticut College, while students from Connecticut College will visit Howard. The entire program is marked by its flexibility, with no planned activities involved at any time.

The Most Costly Oil

The oil that is the most expensive is that which is used in the production of fine art. These oils are often used in the creation of paintings and sculptures, and are valued for their unique properties and the way they interact with the artist's hand. The cost of these oils can vary widely, depending on the quality and rarity of the ingredients used.
