Industry and Education

Because of the rising cost of education, the support of liberal arts colleges has become a pressing problem. The formation of the New England Colleges Fund is the latest and most effective means for business and industry to offer broad support to independent liberal arts education in New England.

There are three possible solutions to the increasing need for financial help. The first is to increase the tuition of the colleges, the second is greater support from each college’s own constituency, and the third is to solicit government support. Of these possible solutions, these solutions are not practical or desirable, and the most logical step is to seek support of business and industry.

Industry has been offering increased support to education through foundations, research grants, and gifts to local colleges, but regional groups such as the New England Colleges Fund are solving the question of how companies can effectively give to educational institutions. One half of the contributions received is divided equally among the twenty-three major colleges and universities represented by the fund, and the remaining half is distributed according to the number of liberal arts degrees granted by each institution.

The colleges are asking for this aid, so not only for additional buildings or endowment, but for additional working capital to meet the increased costs of operation. With the easing of financial stresses, the colleges will be able to plan intelligently to serve the needs of private education. Liberal arts education is vital to the whole country, and with a more equal distribution of financial help to the colleges in the fund, the New England College’s Fund is the logical means for business and industry, but it is providing a means for raising the standards of privately supported educational institutions.

Faith Gulick, Esther Pockard directed the production and was backed by Janet Foos and Deen Feinstein as stage managers. The production was directed by Laura Ellman and Sybil Weir, the costumes by Marc Waterman, and a chorus: the poetry by Diana Dow; the properties by Janet Foos; and the makeup by Peggy Mark. The show gave the entire Class of 1956 a chance to display its talents, and the spirit with which the production was put on infected the audience so that the atmosphere was as lively and exciting as that of any successful pre-Broadway run.

After the show, many of the fathers and daughters migrated to the nightspots of New London to finish off the evening with dancing and more fun. On Sunday morning, Mr. Baird of the English Department spoke in chapel, which many fathers and daughters attended. After lunch many of the parents began to leave and the campus returned its normal routine until again next year when it is time to post cal on father.

Two Diesel Engines Generate Light, Power on Campus

by Suzanne Rosenbichler

When you turn on your light or flick the knob on your radiator you probably never think of all the mechanical power and human effort that brings the heat and light springing forth.

Unlike many other colleges, Connecticut College generates its own electricity. The present power plant was erected in 1898 after the old power plant was completely demolished in the hurricane of that year. What we now have is an outstanding example of what can be done with Diesel engines in a well-planned power and heating plant; this is the Diesel steam combination that was first inaugurated at that time. After the hurricane, the college was completely without heat and light for forty hours, while New London was without power for two weeks.

The Diesel steam combination, which was installed in the interest of operating economy, affords the college a high degree of power balance. There are two De La Vergne Diesel engines with 225 horse power each, a steam turbine, 200 horse power, and a Corliss engine, 125 horse power. The vault is kept down to 200 volts and in each building on campus there is a transformer where the voltage is stepped down to 220, 110, which is regular voltage. The total output is 500 kilowatts and at present the plant is running very fatly at its peak. There are hopes of adding another unit which really has been necessary by the many additional buildings on the campus.

Of interest to those who live in Soph Quad and who find it difficult to make their doors by curfew, will be the fact that there are underground tunnels that lead to Blackstone, Bradford, Plant, and New London hall, from the power plant. Steam runs through pipes to all the buildings where it is turned into water and pumped back to the plant.

In one winter day the college consumes about 1,000,000 cubic feet of gas which would supply the average family for one year. Presently coal is used for heating purposes but it has been some talk of oil being used in the future.

Minimum of Noise

Due to its location in the middle of the campus, it is necessary important that the plant operate with a minimum of noise. The Diesel engines run so quietly that it is impossible to hear them outside of the building at all and the fact that the office of the plant is located in a room directly over the two Diesels is, in itself, indicative of their quietness.

The chief engineer for the past twenty years has been Mr. Vonder Leer. The staff consists of three engineers, three firemen, one engineer and one space fume. There are also six maintenance men, electrical, plumbing and mechanical. All this and much more lies behind the light and heat that we take so much for granted.

Another year comes to an end at Connecticut College. There are many happy memories beginning with the freshman胸怀和大笑, and ending with the final exams. The first group of freshmen express their excitement and nerves as they move into their dorms.

The final concert for the year was held on May 10, featuring works by Mendelssohn, Scarlotti, Debussy, Brahms, and Delio Joio. The concert was well-received, and the audience was thrilled by the beautiful melodies and harmonies.

The French Department Prizes were awarded to students for excellence in French. The Savard Prize of $10 was won by Agnes Fulper '58, and the Cultural Office of the French Department presented the Theodore Bodenwein Prize of $25 to Joyce Adams '55.

The annual Coast Guard Mixer was held on May 10, with the participation of New London's Coast Guard. The mixer was a lively event, with music, dancing, and drinks.

The French Department also celebrated the French Week with a vibrant display of culture and language. The students dressed up in traditional French clothing and performed traditional dance and music.

The annual Crop Sale was held on May 12, with a wide variety of items for sale, including clothing, shoes, and household items. The sale was a great success, and the proceeds were donated to charity.

Another year begins at Connecticut College. The first group of freshmen express their excitement and nerves as they move into their dorms. The final exams are a time of mixed emotions, with some students feeling confident and others feeling anxious. The graduation ceremony is a time of celebration and achievement, with many students earning their degrees and moving on to the next chapter of their lives.

AA Awards

Coordinator and Senior Class Representative.

Additional Awards

Three other awards were made at the banquet. The Charlotte Pyle Memorial Trophy, which is given each year to the best athlete in the college, was awarded to Peggy Shaw for the second year in a row. During the first two football seasons. Peggy made house teams in hockey, volleyball and basketball. She also served as AA Photographer this year and is the Team Sports Coordinator for next year.

The "C" award is a prize given to one girl in each of the underclassmen who has contributed most to the Athletic Association throughout the year. This year awards were given in only the Sophomore and Junior classes.

Sinee Badenhausen '57 received one of the awards. She has been on Council this year as Sophomore Class Representative, and has done all the paper work necessary for the initiation of the new award system.

The other "C" award was given to Nancy Sultanek '56. Sinee was Social Chairman of the Athletic Association and is its next year's president.

No Plants

The Botany Department wishes to announce that household plants may NOT be left in the greenhouse over the summer. Neither the space nor the personnel will be available to take care of the plants. Students should plan to make other arrangements for their plants.
