President Ames says 'no' to Request for extra exam days

by Michael J. Ganley

President Ames has denied the request by both the Student Assembly and College Council to extend this semester's review and exam period by three days. Although the Student Assembly gave its unanimous approval to the resolution calling for the calendar revision on Sept. 10, as did the College Council, the very next day, President Ames said that the addition of three days to the semester was just not possible.

In a letter dated Sept. 24 to Rick Allen, president of the Student Government Association, President Ames stated, "After giving the matter much thought and after consulting as widely as I could, I have come to the conclusion that we should not alter the calendar this year. The primary reason for this is a budgetary one. To increase the number of days in which the college is open by three this semester, and three next semester, would add, according to our best estimates, somewhere between $10,000 and $15,000 to our expenditures. At this point I see no way that a transfer of these funds could be brought about without seriously affecting another area of college operations."

Despite such budgetary limitations as cited by President Ames, Allen remained adamant and declared, "I think the students should demand those days. It is ridiculous with an $11 million budget to say no because you don't have $10,000 when it means our education, our future, our performance on our tests ... We are willing to sacrifice something to get to stay here and do well in our courses and learn; that's what we are here for."

Allen, insisting that the issue is not closed, called for students and faculty to unite in a decisive majority to press for the calendar extension.

Another member of the College Council, Chaplain David Robb, voiced a similar position and termed the resolution calling for Security budget cut; South Campus patrol out

by Linda Batter

The Security budget has been slashed by an undetermined amount, causing one and a half guards worth of manpower to be cut. Chief O'Grady is waiting for a final budget from President Ames and E. Leroy Knight, college treasurer so that he can figure how much money he has to work with.

As a result of the expected cut, Chief O'Grady had had to discontinue the Security guard foot patrol of South Campus. When asked about the possibility of reinstituting the South Campus patrol, Chief O'Grady said, "I can get the man if I can get the budget."

President Ames said that a one man cut in the Security Force puts the manpower level the same as it was in 1973-1974. He said, "We felt that if we could get student co-operation in keeping doors locked, we ought to be able to run a secure college with the 1973-1974 staffing level."

Chief O'Grady said that last year he had worked hard to improve the quality of the Security Force and now he will have to work with less manpower and less money. To help tighten things up, the guard who has been working nights in the library will be shifted to Crozier-Williams to evict unauthorized people there and keep activities under control.

When asked what the impact of the manpower cut of one and a half Security guards will be on the effectiveness of campus security, Chief O'Grady said, "It's bound to cut down on it."

Student Assembly endorses referendum Supporting Electric Boat strikers

by RoseEllen Sanfilippo

Last Wednesday, student members of the college Strike Support Committee, which was established to aid the rank and file members of the Metal Trades Council in their strike against Electric Boat, appeared before the Student Government Association with a resolution.

The committee's resolution, which was introduced to the association by Ann Ramage, the house president of Freeman, is an endorsement of the strike against the division of General Dynamics. The resolution's jurisdiction to support issues beyond those of the Connecticut College community.

It was widely agreed that the student government did have the right to involve itself in such matters, as Conn. is a member of the New London area and its surrounding communities. It was pointed out that in the past the associations has supported such organizations as: the United Farm Workers and the National Student Congress against racism.

Although the Student Government Association did approve the resolution, they did not consent to an amendment that would have granted $150 to the MTC's rank and file newspaper. This newspaper, which has no funds of its own and which is produced by labor donated from the rank and file, is the workers' only form of communication at the present time. Communication, the workers claim, is vital in any effort to coordinate a strike and to encourage picketing.

The resolution is another product of the Strike Support Committee which has been sponsoring informal discussion sessions between students, faculty, members of the MTC. These meetings have been part of the committee's attempt to increase the college community's awareness of the unsafe working conditions at Electric Boat, and of the proposals by management to eliminate craft distinctions through Article 40.

It is feared that Article 40, which is known as the article for interchangeability, will lead to even more hazardous conditions when laborers are told to perform jobs in a trade they are not trained in. The MTC also feels that this article could lead to massive layoffs culminating in a reduction in workers from 10,000 to 6,800.

The resolution reads as followed:

English Professor Jane Smyser dies

Prof. Jane Worthington Smyser of 5 North Ridge Road, New London, a member of the Connecticut College faculty since 1942 and chairman of the English department from 1969-71, died yesterday morning at Uncas-on-Thames. She was 61.

Mrs. Smyser gained international literary recognition as a Wordsworth scholar. In 1974 Clarendon Press of Oxford University published a three-volume edition, The Prose Works of William Wordsworth, which she edited in collaboration with

W.J.B. Owen of McMaster University. This was the first scholarly edition of the English poet's collected prose to be published in this century. The Times of London called it "magnificently edited."

Yale University Press in 1946 published Prof. Smyser's Wordsworth's Reading of Roman Prose. Her articles for scholarly journals include The Epigraphs to the Poetry of T.S. Eliot; Coleridge's Use of Wordsworth's Juvenilia; and Wordsworth's Dream of Poetry and Science.

In 1952 Mrs. Smyser was one of 25 women in the U.S. to be named a Fellow of the Fund for the Advancement of Education. Her research was also supported by grants from the Ford Foundation and the American Council of Learned Societies.

She was a graduate of Wells College where she was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and in May, 1974, was awarded a medal of distinction by the Wells College Alumnae Association at its Centennial Commencement. Her A.M. and Ph.D. degrees were conferred by Yale University.

She is survived by her husband, Hamilton M. Smyser, professor emeritus of English and former department chairman at Connecticut College.

Recycling plan supported

by Rose Ellen Sanfilippo

Five years ago, Connecticut College established a committee for the purpose of making the college an "environmental model." This committee was created as a response to a 1971 study by a Governor's Committee to develop an environmental policy for the state of Connecticut.

One section of this study read, "Every school ... should be an environmental model, with its site, buildings, heating, disposal, transportation, and consumption exemplifying optimal environmental practices." It is to this end that the Connecticut College Environmental Models Committee has worked.

Last Wednesday, members of Survival, a student environmental group, which also works with this goal as a priority, appeared before the Student Government Association. Keeping this goal in mind, they brought with them a resolution urging the college to adopt a new recycling program.

A spokesman for Survival, Harry Lowenberg, stated that, "Survival has run a recycling program on campus because a recycling program is essential to an environmental model." He

Education must come first

Sacrificing the quality of our education to stay within the new budget is asking too much of the Conn. students. President Ames has turned down a Student Assembly-College Council request for three more exam days on each of the two semesters this school year, explaining that there are no financial provisions for it in the budget.

Perhaps the Student Assembly and College Council should have exercised more forethought and argued for changes last year when the calendar was set. Why, though, should over fifteen-hundred students be penalized in their studies this year by inaction of a few last year? Student Assembly has realized now where its responsibility lies on this issue; maturity in thought usually allows room for flexibility in action.

President Ames claims that roughly ten to fifteen thousand dollars will be needed to keep the college in session these days. He also said that even if that kind of money were found, it is just as badly needed elsewhere. We are all interested in receiving the best education possible; if the addition of six days to the calendar will best serve the educational needs of the college to provide those days for study and examinations.

If the Student Assembly and College Council strongly back the addition of the exam days, it is the President's responsibility to honor that request.

We need to be aware

Over Ten thousand members of the Metal Trades Council (MTC), employed in Groton, have been on strike since July 1, 1975. Some MTC members have been on campus attempting to educate the college community about the issues involved in the strike.

The presence of the MTC members on campus offers the college community a rare and valuable opportunity to learn about the problems, conflicts, and hardships of a strike. The interests of management are just as important to consider; Unfortunately, all invitations for Electric Boat management to visit campus have been refused.

It is essential for us all to learn as much as possible about this strike which is hurting the whole community as well as the families of the strikers. It is important for us to consider the issues which are grave enough for over 10,000 people to be going without job pay for three months.

We support the presence of the MTC workers on campus and hope that the college community will listen to them and gain a fuller understanding of what a strike is.

strike back

To the Editor:

It has been brought to my attention that a number of students objected to the presence of striking workers from Electric Boat on campus last week. If these students feel this way, we might as well build a second Wall of China and have done with it. Students may be surprised and dismayed to discover that the "working class", that dreaded sector of society that we "intellectuals" try to ignore, has much to offer us. They could open our eyes to the realities which face the majority of Americans every day.

What excuse could there possibly be for deliberate ignorance of the workings of the society in which we will one day function? Regardless of the position we may hold in the future, an understanding of this nature is of great importance. These workers have more to present than strike support pleas. They can tell us, among other things, why and how a union works, what is involved in manual trades, the truth about on-the-job conditions, and the repercussions of these conditions on home life.

Some students claim that the workers were coercive, yet they did not in any way force the students to listen to them. They depended on the good will of the campus community to take it upon ourselves to find out what is going on at EB. If they seemed too "pushy," it is because they were addressing a group totally unaware of, and unsympathetic to, the gravity of their situation. They were attempting to penetrate this barrier of apathy and ignorance.

It is high time workers and students began understanding one another. We can learn a great deal both in supporting the strike now and by establishing a permanent rapport with the working community. Instead of becoming indignant, appreciate the workers for what they can teach us ... College is, after all, a place of learning.

Sincerely,
Donna Diamond

Dear Editor:

In the six years I have been taking courses at the college, never has it gotten so bad that one can't find a bar of soap for a shower.

But, then again, we didn't pay all this tuition to build a library that will be outdated in ten years.

College council keeps busy

by Lynda Batter

College Council granted a fund request for the Chick Corea concert last Thursday. Unanimously, the Council granted a $3,100 loan and a $3,100 gift to the Social Board Concert Committee to finance the November 21 Corea concert.

Keith Ritter and Buzz Baer, committee members, expect a sell-out crowd for the concert. Tickets will go on sale October 5 for Conn College students and October 13 for outside patrons. Prices will be $5 and $4 with a Conn I.D., $6 and $5 reserve, and $6.50 and $5.50 at the door.

Council also authorized funds for the establishment of a Literary Journal to be published monthly. The Journal has been given a $250 gift and a $500 loan for the year. Walter Palmer, the Journal's champion, has promised to cease publishing if the Journal does not prove successful.

Palmer is enthusiastic and optimistic about the Journal. He communicated to Council that the Journal will provide an alternate form of popular reading on campus not already provided by present student publications.

Theatre I was voted to be exempt from the $100 club financing system and will be financed as it has been in the past. The Literary Magazine had its rights to a budget exemption rescinded; the Finance Subcommittee of Council will reconsider the financial status of the Literary Magazine.

In other business, Council considered the Judiciary Board policy changes presented by Leslie Margolin and agreed to vote on them at this week's meeting.

A letter from President Ames denying the request for three additional exam days on this fall and spring semester was read to Council. Both Student Government President Rick Allen and Junior Class President Scott Vokey expressed their dissatisfaction with President Ames' letter. They both support the extra exam days. Rick Allen has promised that both Student Assembly and College Council will consider action on the denied request.

Mr. Rick Bogel submitted his resignation from College Council; another faculty member will be elected in his place within the next few weeks. The next Council meeting will be today — Thursday — at 5 p.m. and will consider the Judiciary Board policy changes, the establishment of an Athletic Board to oversee sports clubs, and the Calendar.

Smoking referendum Drawn up by board

By Bonnie Greenwald

Following a complaint at the Judiciary Board meeting last Sunday about smoking in the dining halls, Leslie Margolin, chairman of the board brought up the matter in Wednesday's Student Assembly meeting.

The executive board of the assembly is now in the process of drawing up a referendum to ban smoking in Harris or possibly to divide the dining hall between smokers and nonsmokers. According to Rick Allen, Student Government President, the dorm dining halls are too small to divide. However, should the students pass a referendum to completely ban smoking, then it would be prohibited in all dining areas.

Rick was also going to look into the existing smoking regulations. He explained that smoking in the classrooms may already be a violation in which case no new referendum would be needed, but only the enforcement of the already established rules.

Friction in Fire Dept. Continues

Friction between New London's volunteer firemen and unionized paid fire fighters continues to grow. Last Monday, in a meeting with C. Francis Driscoll, City Manager, the union blamed the recent vandalism of paid fireman Robert Feliciano's equipment on the volunteers. The vandalism occurred shortly after Feliciano was given a 5-day suspension for telling volunteer firemen not to aid in the fighting of fires.

In a related matter, several weeks ago a complaint was raised by the paid firemen against the volunteers' practice of drinking in the firehouses. This complaint led to an administrative order prohibiting drinking and gambling in the houses. Exceptions will be made for "festive occasions."

In response to this order, the president of the volunteer association, John Fargo, had this to say to the Day: "I've never heard of a volunteer company not being able to drink in their own firehouse. It's something they've been doing from year one."

No Sidewalks

Last February, the state ordered that 120 children be bused to school as a result of "unduly hazardous" walking conditions on Chester Street, which contains no sidewalks. The city has just allocated $240,000 in federal Community Development funds to place sidewalks along the street, and thereby eradicate the state order. Almost all of the children, kindergarten through sixth grade, live less than a mile from the school.

Job Cuts at Naval Center

A spokesman from the Navy has told U.S. Rep. Christopher Dodd that the 208 job cuts from the Naval Underwater Systems Center will be dispersed over the next several fiscal years. Originally, the cuts were all to occur this year. This revision is said to be the result of a Congressional directive.

The last fiscal year saw the elimination of approximately 200 jobs at the center.

MTC Members Arrested

Last Monday, two more members of the Metal Trades Council were arrested on the picket line at General Dynamics-Electric Boat. The Groton Police charged David Gill and Edward Fortier with disorderly conduct. They were alleged to have been blocking traffic at the E.B. parking lot near Mumford Avenue. It is within the legal guidelines of picketing to momentarily hold up traffic.

This Monday, Ray Bedard, an MTC strike coordinator, was arrested for unknown charges. He is the last member of the MTC to be arrested to date.

E.B. talks at impasse

by Rose Ellen Sanfilippo

Negotiations between the MTC leadership and the management of General Dynamics-Electric Boat are in the midst of a seven week impasse. Attempts by W.J. Usery, Director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, to revitalize the bargaining sessions have gone nowhere.

On Friday, Mr. Usery met with MTC President, Anthony DeGregory and later on the same day with the Director of Industrial Labor Relations at E.B., George W. Roos; he spent a total of 12 hours in Connecticut. His meetings were aimed at engendering an atmosphere that is conducive to negotiations. However, John C. Zancanaro, a spokesman for Mr. Usery, was quoted in The Day as saying, "We were unable to establish any basis for an immediate resumption of negotiations."

Negotiations in the strike, which has now entered its thirteenth week, continue to be deadlocked over the dispute involving Article 40. Both parties refuse to back down on this issue of work practices and assignments.

The management of Electric Boat has adopted an "all or nothing" position on this article, which if passed would leave the company with unchecked power continued on page five $6.50 at the door with a one dollar discount for Conn. College students.

One of the most important aspects of this concert is that it is a test case. Many questions have to be answered, foremost of which is: can students put on a rock concert at Conn. College and not send the school into hock? The debacle of the Poco concert has made school officials rather wary of loaning students the money, especially in the tight economy. The risk of damage to Palmer Auditorium itself is also a consideration.

The promoters of the concert, The Buzzard, Todd Cipolla, Keith Ritter and Cindy Ericson, have taken several measures to ensure that this concert will be only the first in a continuing series. "We're gonna stress to everybody that they can get as blasted as they like before the concert," said The Buzzard, "but once they come into the hall, they gotta be cool about smoking and drinking." "We don't hink that restraining yourself for an hour at a time is that much to ask," added Mr. Ritter.

What is a "Return to Forever?" It is a band with Chick Corea on keyboards, Stanley Clarke on bass, Lenny White on drums, and Al DeMeola on guitar. Return to Forever has been able to concentrate on reaching out to audiences principally because the problems of technique with which most bands grapple have been taken care of. Corea's development is a case in point. At first his reputation as a composer and keyboard virtuoso was confined to an elite circle of musicians. Miles Davis, Elvin Jones, Mongo Santamaria, Herbie Mann, and Stan Getz employed his services as a pianist. John McLaughlin, Larry Coryell, and Gary Burton recorded his tunes. Circle, which Chick co-led with Anthony Braxton, Dave Holland, and Barry Altschul, astounded fans of rarefied improvisational music Continued On Page 9

Extra exam days-- vote today

Student Assembly believes that it is imperative that three exam days be added to the first semester calendar. These days would extend the calendar from December 19 to December 22.

These additional days are necessary in order to have ample opportunity to prepare for our exams.

This proposal has been unanimously endorsed by Student Assembly and College Council. President Ames, in a letter to the Student Government Association (SGA), denied our request stating that it would be too expensive ($5-8,000) out of our $11 million college budget.

The referendum:

Do you support the position of the SGA that these three days are essential?

Yes No

The referendum vote will take place in dormitories today and Friday morning. If the referendum is supported, it will be presented to the Board of Trustees before their meeting this Friday. Student Assembly also passed a unanimous resolution that further action will be taken if the college does not approve the endorsed referendum.

PATRICIA HEARST

Miss Hearst's affidavit claims that she was not a voluntary member of the Symbionese Liberation Army and that she now wishes to return to her family. Several complications regarding the authenticity of her affidavit are now being investigated.

Two days before the affidavit was signed, Miss Hearst claimed in a tape-recorded jail conversation, that she considered herself a "revolutionary feminist" and that she was afraid of being restricted to her parents' home. Aware of the fact that some of her conversation would be recorded, she freely declared, "my politics are real different from, a way back when," and, "I don't want to have the bail saying where I'm a prisoner in my parents' home."

The police are investigating the possibility of Patricia Hearst's involvement in a bank robbery and committed last April. Apparently a marked bill from that robbery and bullets resembling those used to kill a customer in the bank were found in her apartment.

The judge is considering Miss Hearst's bail and has ordered a psychiatric examination for her. He has also sent the tapes to be evaluated by psychiatrists.

ENERGY PLAN

President Ford has proposed a $100-billion energy plan which was originally sponsored by Vice President Rockefeller. The three major goals of the plan are: 1) development of new technology to produce domestic energy supplies; 2) development of technology to support national nuclear power programs; and, 3) expansion of electrical power generation from coal, geothermal, and solar sources. Mr. Ford's plan aims at a long-term solution to the energy problem and affords additional jobs to be created, thereby aiding the present recession.

FCC POLICY STRICKEN

The Federal Communications Commission has passed a new ruling which no longer requires radio and television news conferences and debates of political candidates to give equal time to all opponents. Now the networks are free to determine, according to news value, which candidates will receive equal time.

This new policy is extremely beneficial to President Ford in that he can now conduct a televised news conference without the assurance that his Democratic opponents will necessarily get equal time.

WEEKEND FLOOD

Over a five day period, the metropolitan area of N.Y. received eight inches of rain. The three factors which are assumed to have caused the flood are the mass of wet air from hurricane Eloise, the low-pressure system which carried it north, and the stationary front which kept it there.

The consequences of the flood range from two deaths in Westchester to hundreds of families being driven from their homes in various N.Y. suburbs. In Wayne township, 140 families were forced to evacuate their home when the Passaic River extended over its banks on Friday. In Queens, 3500 telephones remained out of service, and in Westchester, 7000 residents received no electricity.

Bookstore reveals financial structure

by Mimi Ginnott

The Conn. College Bookstore, which is managed by Mrs. Dorothy Riley, has undergone price increases in direct proportion to those imposed upon the publishers. In response to student concern over course book expenses, Mrs. Riley has offered an explanation of how the money is distributed and where the profits and losses eventually fall.

Every book in the bookstore is priced according to the price listed on the invoice. The publishers place the price labels on the books before shipment, and the amount of increase on books from year to year depend upon the particular company's background expenses. Mrs. Riley explained that these range from the expenses of salesmen who visit faculty members: their travelling expenses, food, hotels, gas and car, and wage increases; to the cost of printing the books, shipping them to a bindery, and then shipping them on to the distribution points. Although these expenses are valid and accountable, several books show a radical and unexplainable hike in price. Mrs. Riley assumes that these increases lead to direct profit and she admits that "some companies are increasing prices unnecessarily."

The bookstore operates through dealers, and the books are divided into two basic categories: trade books which are purchased at a discount of 20 per cent or more, and text books which are purchased at a discount of 20 per cent of less. Mrs. Riley said that she chooses to work with some dealers who may be more expensive because they provide faster service on deliveries and are very prompt when it comes to re-ordering.

One of the largest causes of loss for the bookstore involves returning books which have been over-ordered. Mrs. Riley explained that the companies allow 20 per cent of the books to be returned free of charge, but all books over that limit are fined 10 per cent of the original cost. "Last year we lost $1000 on our returns because they were too heavy," and Mrs. Riley went on to discuss the difficulty which professors have in predicting the number of students who will be taking a particular course.

In answer to the possibility of saving the extra books for the following year, Mrs. Riley said, "this is bad academically. This is unfair to you as students not to have the best book to study from." She illustrated her point with the example of a new edition of a book coming out the following year, whereby the former edition becomes a dead loss to her.

Proposed group will Act as ombudsman

by Lea Seeley

A proposal has been brought before Student Assembly to establish a body of students, who will be immediately concerned with college grievances. The proposal, originated by Ted von Glahn and Laurie Heiss, is still in the planning stages.

The proposed grievance committee would act as a clearinghouse for grievances and requests presented by any member of the college community, and would help channel complaints to the proper committee, or most capable authority.

Students believe there is a serious need for an efficient accessible grievance body which could handle requests or quickly redirect grievances to the proper area. The committee would serve not only students and faculty, but also the administration and employees of the college community.

The amount of power ascribed to such a body and its exact format have not yet been determined. The two originators of the proposal, and three house presidents are presently drafting a fully defined proposal which will be presented to Student Assembly the near future.

Interested community members are invited to contact Laurie Heiss (box 567) or Ted von Glahn (box 1795).

85 graduate students Pursue MA at Conn.

By Bonnie GreenwGD

Though Connecticut College is geared for the undergraduate, the graduate program for Master's candidates is one of a number of programs which began as a response to community needs.

Historically, the program, which today consists of 85 students, was initiated following WW II when many veterans desired to expand their education, especially into new fields. It is this historical development in the program which in part accounts for the discrepancy between grad-student tuition and that of the undergraduate.

Originally, the grad student was thought of as a special student and so was asked to pay the same price. However, it has now become apparent that a great deal of time is devoted to the graduate student. For this reason there was a small rise in price, to $275, in comparison to the price a special student would pay, effective this year.

However, because of the way the program developed, the masters candidate pays only $2130 per year in comparison to the non-resident undergraduate who pays $3450. According to Leory Knight, treasurer, a review of this is expected some time this year.

Masters degrees are offered in 14 departments including an Master of Arts in Teaching and a Master of Fine Arts in Dance.

The community need is particularly apparent in the MAT for Experienced Teachers. Comprising the largest group of students, 35, the program is designed for the secondary school teacher who is teaching but wants to deepen and broaden the knowledge of their subject. As Marion Doro, Director of Graduate Studies pointed out, there are often new fields opening up which the teacher wants to make himself familiar with.

Each department decided if they wish to offer a Master's program, taking into account their resources and the priority of the undergraduate program. For example, the dance department would accept only two candidates for the MFA in dance because of lack of resources.

In contrast, the psychology department has established a large graduate program with 24 students participating. While in many departments, the Masters candidates work along the lines of undergraduate courses and supplement them with additional work, in the psychology department there are 21 graduate level courses.

The graduate candidate is required to complete four year courses or eight semester courses and in many cases this includes a thesis. Comprehensives are required if a thesis is not.

The main feature of Connecticut's graduate program according to Ms. Doro is the coordination between what a student is looking for and what a department is offering. This often leads to a great deal of self tailoring of a student's program.

Chavez' UFW triumphs; Grape boycott continues

by Beth Stenger

Under a new state farm labor law, elections were held during this past month in the California harvest fields of grapes, lettuce, and many other crops, to determine the workers' choice of union representation.

The bill, which became law August 28, guarantees the right of secret ballot election for the workers, and necessitates negotiation for contracts with the union chosen by the workers. An Agricultural Labor Relations Board has been set up to hold elections and certify the results.

As of September 23, the United Farm Workers have won elections at 74 of the farms, and the Teamsters Union 68, most of the Teamster wins being on small ranches. The results of the Gallo election, which is perhaps the most significant, are currently being contested.

A United Auto Workers observer who visited California recently declared, "If the elections were held according to the law, Cesar Chavez would win 99 per cent of the votes."

The elections and negotiations for contracts which will follow, are an important stage in the long history of farm workers attempting to provide themselves with bargaining power vis-a-vis the growers.

Ten years ago, in September 1965, farm workers in Delano, California, took up the black aztec eagle and banner of UFW and walked out of the grape fields. They began a strike and boycott which involved millions of people all over the United States, Canada and Europe.

Many of the growers, and within the last five years, also the Teamsters Union, have been a powerful force of opposition to this farm worker movement.

The conflict has not ended with this new law. For example, many violations of the free secret ballot elections have been documented.

The UFW stresses that election victories do not guarantee contracts, much less beneficial ones. To maintain a position of strength at the bargaining table, the consumer boycott is still the UFW's most powerful tool.

So the boycott of Gallo wine, non-UFW grapes and iceberg lettuce is being maintained.

Allen's administration keeps busy

by Bruce E. Collin

Maintaining that his first priority is "to make sure that students continue to have a say in what goes on," Student Government President Rick Allen outlined numerous programs that recently have been formulated in response to college community needs.

One of the most important measures increases the possible allotment for the dorm matching grant program. College Council now will match any dormitory dues up to the sum of $150, rather than the previous ceiling of $1. Thus, a dorm that raises, for example, $125 will be able to receive $125 from the Student Government.

Committee work has been examined at great length. As a result, the position of Student-Faculty Committee Coordinator was established in an effort to "make the committee more responsive." Sue Ehrlich has been approved for the job. Allen also announced that the newly created Health Services Advisory Committee will discuss numerous relevant issues with Dr. McKeehan, thereby "letting the student concerns be known."

Throughout his comments to this reporter, Allen emphasized the many restrictions placed on student affairs "by our limited college budget." "As a result, we've got to set our priorities accordingly," he stated. The student leader has recently requested from President Ames a detailed copy of the 1974-1975 operating budget as well as the proposed expenses for the 1975-1976 academic year. Allen hopes that the data can soon be made available for all students to examine. "It's essential that we know what we're dealing with in terms of money," he commented.

The creation of an athletic board composed of representatives from the numerous sports organizations on campus also has been proposed. Allen noted that such a group would "provide a formal way for students to establish sports related clubs on campus."

Reflecting on the "challenging experiences" of a Student Government leader, Allen frankly remarked that, "the biggest problem is raising enthusiasm among students to participate in the Student Government." He, however, quickly pointed to figures which encouragingly revealed that a quorum had easily been reached for last week's committee elections. In a closing note, Allen added, "I've also been very pleased with the enthusiasm of this year's House Presidents."

Bookstore from p. 4

Although profits are made on the company discounts, the costs of running the bookstore are not low. Mrs. Riley must pay rent, heat, and light, which means that 5 per cent of the gross sales go directly back to the college. She said that 3-4 per cent of the profit pays for shipping the books in, and 14-16 per cent pays the employee wages, Social Security, Blue Cross, and retirement funds. She has cut the number of employees from 11 to eight, and it costs her $1400 a year to run the Telex machine alone. In addition to this, she has been forced to allot additional money to compensate for the increased rates of postage and shipping.

Connecticut has a state law which demands tax to be paid on all books, while New Hampshire, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island do not. Mrs. Riley said that at Brown U. the bookstore does not tax books which are used for school courses. The man whom she spoke to at Brown said that the employees at the register ask the customer whether his or her books will be used for a course. If the reply is affirmative, then the bookstore gives the person the benefit of the doubt.

Regarding other departments of the bookstore, Mrs. Riley related that she is forced to go through distributors, and consequently pay more. "Our quantities of purchases are not great enough to go directly to the company." These departments bring in minimum profit and she is well aware that other stores can afford to sell the same merchandise for less money. Speaking about the drugs and cosmetics, she claimed, "it's not worth our while to even carry them—it's only as a convenience to the students."

Mrs. Riley spent 3½ years as book manager at Johns Hopkins and will have been at Conn. 6 years this December. She said that her experience in the business advises the students against setting up a bookstore co-op. She said that during the school year of '73-'74, Harvard Coop lost $180,000 on textbooks, and that their only savior was the profit made in the other departments. She added that the time and energy required to run a bookstore would not allow students any time for classes.

over work assignments. Anthony that negotiations regarding this article begin as soon as possible, has said that he feels the company has taken such a firm stand on this issue that they will not be able to backdown.

Another factor hindering the negotiations is that of where they should be held. Twice, Mr. DeGregory and his panel of 16 negotiators have been forced to meet in Washington D.C. for these talks. He feels that these meetings should be held in Groton—not Washington, which he sees as being "saturated with government interests." The MTC leader further feels that the negotiators, which must pay for both transportation and accommodations.

Budget Requests: October 17th has been the deadline set for budget requests for Student Organization Clubs. Earlier submittal is encouraged. You may pick up the appropriate forms from Janet Pugh, Box 1024, or Dean Watson's office. Those clubs whose constitutions have not been submitted to Janet Pugh, Box 1024, are not eligible for funding.

SENIORS planning to apply for Fulbright-Hays Grants are reminded that completed applications are due in Dean Cobb's office by Tuesday, October 14. Faculty nominations for the Danforth Graduate Fellowship are due by Friday, October 17. For additional information, please see Dean Cobb.

PHYSICAL PLANT NEWS

Physical Plant reports that the new type of shower heads that were installed in the dormitories last year have saved over 12 million gallons of water in a six month period. The shower head which mixes more air with water than a normal one has also helped save some heating oil.

The toilet paper controversy is officially over as physical plant has stopped supplying dormitories with the less pliable type due to student complaints and a plumbing problem.

Anyone wishing advice on how to operate the heating system in his or her room or dormitory should contact the residence chairman of the dormitory or physical plant.

Several water coolers have been shut off around campus in order to save an estimated $500 a year in electricity.

Chapel presents Active D.C. minister

By Lynda Batter

The Rev. Philip R. Newell, Jr. will be the guest speaker in Harkness Chapel this Sunday at 11 a.m. Rev. Newell is presently the Director of the National Presbyterian Center in Washington, D.C.

This year, Rev. Newell has been co-ordinating a series of conferences around the theme of "A moral audit of American society". The conferences which are being conducted with the bicentennial in mind, have had notable speakers offer their expertise and views on such topics as women, youth, the elderly, economic justice, and the family. The conferences are being attended by lay and ordained members of various religious faiths.

Rev. Newell is a member of various groups including the District of Columbia Mayor's Coordinating Committee on Criminal Justice, and the Board of the Washington Center for Metropolitan Studies.

In the past few years, Rev. Newell has led the drive for home rule for the District of Columbia, reported on world hunger and its impact on developing nations for the World Council of Churches, and worked as a founder of the D.C. Coalition.

School rules of conduct may change

By RoseEllen Sanfilippo

Several revisions involving the Academic and Social Honor Codes will be presented for the approval of College Council at tonight's meeting. These revisions are the end-product of the close study and consideration given to the current policies by the members of the Judiciary Board over the past two years.

In regard to the Academic Honor Code, the board suggests that all transfer students and incoming freshmen receive a brief explanation of the college honor system and, "what this Honor System means to the individual student and to the community-at-large." This letter, which will be drawn up by the board and included with acceptance notifications, will lead the new students to a fuller understanding of what it means to matriculate before they arrive at the college.

The board further advises that preceding the start of the fall semester the Judiciary Board Packet, or a similar document, will be received by all incoming students. The board reasserts that, "A traditional matriculation-orientation program shall be conducted during the first week of school each semester."

The board states that all undergraduates must matriculate in order to become a member of the Connecticut College community. It asserts that those who have not, will not be permitted to register, nor can they obtain their grades or transcripts. The board feels that it is unfair to the remainder of the community that those students who do not matriculate pass through their college careers unbound to any honor codes.

Recommendations regarding return-to-college, special, and graduate students are also included: they will be bound to the college Honor Codes by the required signing of a pledge to that effect. The Judiciary Board will handle all violations of this pledge.

An Academic Honor Pledge for summer and evening session students is also being suggested. These students will not be allowed to enroll in any courses without first signing this pledge. It is advised that the Summer and Evening Session Board, but rather the Judiciary Board. Regarding the Social Honor Code

In the area of Social Honor the board has made various recommendations concerning the actions of individual students:

1. A student shall be held responsible for his room and for all college furnishings within that room.

2. A student shall be responsible for his own actions on any college property.

3. A student shall be responsible for the actions of his guests. In the event that the board finds a student guilty of damaging or destroying college property, the responsibility for that damage lies with the student. In the past, Physical Plant or Residence was required to absorb the cost of any damage that occurred; under this revision the guilty student will now absorb those costs. Hopefully, this will deter students from unnecessarily damaging college property.

The board further suggests continued on page eight rededicated on Oct. 4, at its new site on Captain's Walk. The Connecticut Society, Sons of the American Revolution, are the owners of the building which has been restored after numerous incidents of vandalism at its former sites.

The rededication ceremony will begin at 3 a.m., from the Shaw Mansion on Bank Street, where a marching band will precede up Captain's Walk to where the schoolhouse now stands; a short distance from City Hall.

Downtown Redevelopment Progress

A public hearing for the redevelopment of downtown New London drew a crowd of 75 residents and businessmen last Wednesday. It was agreed that rather than razing buildings, the emphasis should be on redevelopment and rehabilitation. Much of the discussion was centered on whether or not various streets in the area should be extended and widened.

Federal revenue amounting to $19 million has been granted to the project, which includes the area enclosed on one side by Captain's Walk and by Bank Street from the Walk to Columbus Circle. Coit, Reed, Huntington and Jay Streets close off the third side of this triangular area.

NLEA Pay Raise

The New London Education Association (NLEA), recently received a 7.5 per cent increase in salary pay. The Board of Education is now awaiting a proposal from the NLEA on how the increase should be distributed. The NLEA will determine the distribution of this $248,073 through a vote put to all those who taught in the city's public schools last year and have returned this school year.

National Theatre of the Deaf

Who are the handicapped?

By Jonathan Kromer

Most of us are disturbed by confrontations with the physically handicapped. We avert our eyes when passing a crippled person on the street, made guilty, perhaps, by our feeling of voyeurism and the inevitable relief of knowing that we are better off than they. Our society, too, places great value on physical alertness and ability. It requires a conscious effort, therefore, to overcome our insecurities and face these people without condescension.

The National Theatre of the Deaf is an extraordinary group of performers, many of them completely deprived of their hearing, who have won over many such audiences. Again and again they have allowed people to see beyond physical limitation and have caught them up in the extreme power and excitement of their stagecraft.

Although (NTD) has performed many different types of works, their technique has remained consistent. Stories are acted out in sign, the language of the deaf, as readers speak lines and narrate. Over the years, the company has become less dependent upon their readers, and their last production, "The Dybbuk," contained a minimum of spoken words.

This progression, however, has not left hearing audiences in silence. Using their own voices and universally-understood gestures, as well as their beautiful sound sculptures, NTD rises magnificently to the challenge of transmitting their message to an alien world. Their movement, the forms they create using very few props, generates an overwhelmingly positive response everywhere they perform.

Everywhere except, perhaps, New London. Why is it that a company which can sell out almost any theater in this country and abroad, plays each year to a half-empty Palmer Auditorium? This is especially puzzling when we consider the substantial following NTD has acquired in this area over the years. Many of the actors and actresses even own homes in town. The fault, then, lies unquestionably with our own student body.

Last year, the number of students attending "The Dybbuk" could be counted on the fingers of one hand. Here was an internationally famous company, a local group, performing in our midst, and we rejected them as we have done every year. Is it the cost of tickets? No. I know no student so badly off that he couldn't afford to go. Some other force is at work here.

Are we so terrified by our insecurities that we must deprive ourselves of a rich and entertaining experience? Are we worried that a deaf person is going to embarrass us, either by his antics or through our own anguish? In an effort to break down the barriers we have erected before ourselves, I offer the following guarantees: if you go to see NTD's "Parade" this weekend, you will (1) not be made to feel ill at ease or out of place; (2) see, by observing the audience as well as the performers, deaf people leading normal lives; and (3) have a very good time.

Think just a bit about the limitations we set for ourselves to alleviate unpleasant sensations. Then go, with an open heart and mind, to see the National Theatre of the Deaf.

Performances are this Friday and Saturday nights at 8:30 in Palmer Auditorium. Admission for students is $2 and $3.50.

Rush tickets, at $2, will be available to students with IDs

Weavers: something for everyone

by Chas Moser

The Hand Weavers Guild of Connecticut is holding its annual exhibit in the Manwaring and Dana Galleries of Cummings Art Center through October 17. The Guild belongs to the New England Crafts Council and was officially organized in 1948.

Fifty weavers are represented in the show, composed of 93 pieces. The intent of the exhibitors is to incorporate as many styles and techniques of weaving as possible to inform viewers of the wide scope of handweaving. An equivalent exhibition of paintings might include the works of Giotto, Rembrandt, Monet, Picasso, Jackson Pollock, Walt Disney, and Grandma Moses. Despite the diversity, however, the exhibit holds together as an overall introduction to handweaving.

The show is broken into three categories: "fashion" — clothing design; "interior" — rugs and coverlets; "art forms" — wall hangings and soft sculpture. Two rather silly awards have been given in each category. The main concern of the handweavers is evident in all of these areas — the combination of color, texture, and often, repeated patterns. Scattered about the gallery are "Please Do Not Touch" signs, a precautionary move, but they are a genuine nuisance since many of the pieces, and especially the wall hangings, play with the interaction of different fabrics, weaves, and textures, and beg the viewer to touch them. In some pieces the relation between design and texture is very striking. The two window pieces add the element of transparency to their delicate designs.

The exhibition seems to be split further into two unavoidably separate areas — the "art forms" and the utilitarian creations. The sculptured "forms" are, however, a definite outgrowth of the practical aspects of weaving. This sort of development has happened often in the history of art. Such is the distinction between ceramic sculpture and pottery. Indeed, the practical application of both handweaving and pottery preceded the purely artistic developments.

The goal of practicality is very much in the minds of most of the weavers. Like the great weavers of ancient Peru and those of Puritan New England, the concern is for economy of means. The materials are expensive and the technique requires a great deal of time. In fact, one common element throughout the exhibit is that regardless of whether the intent was the look of spontaneous creation or utilitarian need, virtually all of the technically successful pieces required a great deal of painstaking time.

Those viewers who enjoy minimal cerebral effort at art shows will be glad to know that the whole thing is really rather down to earth. Members of the Guild are at Cummings every day until 4:00 p.m. to answer questions about the show or weaving in general. It is a major exhibit for the Weaver's Guild, for it represents a break from the "arts and crafts show" environment into which weavers have been categorized for years. There are no silversmiths, glassblowers, or pipemakers to compete with; they have emerged independently to create their own distinct form of art.

Tears, cheers for Chapin

by Steve Certilman

A Harry Chapin concert is probably one of the most emotional musical experiences you'll ever participate in. The nonchalant, almost fireside manner in which the band plays lets the audience become nearly as much a part of the concert as Chapin's soft but powerful voice. The atmosphere created by the gentle swaying of the audience helps to immerse one in the music.

All of Harry Chapin's songs tell stories, some of which affect everybody, but all of which affect somebody. They run the gamut from soft, moving love songs to the exhilarating, almost violent drive of "Bummer," the ballad of an unwanted, black Medal of Honor winner who turns violent murderer.

Among the wide variety of songs Chapin played during the more than reasonable two hour performance in Providence on September 26, were "Cat's in the Cradle," "Taxi," and "W-O-L-D," all of which had considerable air time when they were first released. Also included were

"Mail Order Annie," a beautiful song about a man in the old West who is meeting his pen pal for the first time on the eve of their marriage, and "I Wanna Learn a Love Song," a personal experience song about a guitar teacher who finds happiness with another man's wife. He finished the set with "Sniper," a powerful song about a man who shot 37 people from a tower in a small Texas college.

Accompanying Harry to this Palace Concert Theater performance were brother Steve Chapin on piano, John Wallace playing bass guitar and doing background vocals, and Michael Masters playing the cello.

I think it's worth mentioning that Harry Chapin has to be one of the most generous men in the entertainment business. He was an hour late arriving in Providence, where he was rushed from the plane to the theater. There, Harry declined a five minute break so that he could start the show. He was late because the World Food Organization benefit he was playing ran longer than expected. He often plays for high schools in his home area and has had a benefit bar-b-que at his home for a small Long Island playhouse.

Harry Chapin's latest album, "Portrait Gallery," was released last week. This and his other albums, "Heads and Tales," "Verities and Balderdash," and "Sniper and Other Love Songs," are available on Electra Records.

Brendan Galvin To read works

The poet Brendan Galvin, who this year is a visiting professor of English at Connecticut College, will read from his published and recent poems Wednesday (Oct. 8) at 8:00 p.m. in the Harkness Chapel crypt.

Prof. Galvin's works include three volumes of poems entitled, No Time for Good Reasons (1974), The Salt Farm (1972) and The Narrow Land (1971). Of his critical essays, three on Theodore Roethke and one about T.S. Eliot have appeared in Choice and Monmouth Review, periodicals which review contemporary poetry.

Poems by Prof. Galvin, who was a 1974-75 fellow in creative writing for the National Endowment of the Arts, have been chosen for inclusion in Best Poems of 1974 by the Borestone Mountain Poetry Awards. In 1965 he was honored as an Atlantic Monthly younger poet.

CONNECTICUT POETRY CIRCUIT

For the seventh consecutive year the Connecticut Poetry Circuit will send four undergraduates student poets to tour colleges in the state reading from their works in February and March, 1976. Reading swill be arranged for them, and an honorarium of $30 each will be paid following every scheduled program. All colleges in the state have been invited to select one poet to compete. A local contest will be held here to determine who will compete at the state level. Each contestant is allowed to submit five pages of verse. All entries should be made by Tuesday, October 28th to Brendan Galvin, visiting professor of English in Thames 211.

25 years of music

A musical silver anniversary will be observed Sunday afternoon, Oct. 5, when William H. Dale, noted concert pianist and professor of music at Connecticut College, will be presented by the department of music in his twenty-fifth annual New London recital.

At 4:00 p.m. in Dana Concert Hall of Cummings Arts Center, Prof. Dale will repeat the program he first performed at the college in October 1951.

The recitalist will open the concert with "Sonata in E Major, K. 162" by Scarlatti, followed by "Fantasy in C minor, K 475" by Mozart. Brahms' "Variations and Fugue on a Theme by Hendel" will conclude the first part of the program.

Sunday's anniversary program will include works by two of Prof. Dale's former teachers at the Yale University School of Music: "Sonata for Piano," composed expressly for William Dale by Quincy Porter, and the three-movement "Ludis Tonalis" by Paul Hindemith.

Two preludes by Claude Debussy, "La terrasse des audiences du clair de lune" and

"Les collines d'Anacapri" will be heard in the latter part of the concert. Following Dale's Town Hall Recital in New York City in 1953, the critic for Musical America called his playing of the two Debussy preludes "sheer magic." Prof. Dale's interest in Debussy corresponds to his lifelong career as a pianist.

After joining the Connecticut College faculty in 1951, Prof. Dale made his debut concert in London's Wigmore Hall in 1952 and the following year in Town Hall. He has played other concerts in London, New York, Boston, Washington and other major cities. He has appeared as soloist with the Boston Pops, the Norwich, and Eastern Connecticut Symphonies, and has performed extensively with his wife Claire in two-piano recitals including a European tour in 1968. In 1969 he recorded a program of "Songs by Charles Ives" with the soprano Helen Boatwright for the B.B.C. at their Maida Vale studios in London. He is appearing in two Bicentennial programs with Helen Boatwright this month and next in Albany, New York and in Waterville, Maine.

Jackson's music provokes thought

By Vicki Bowen

Michael Gregory Jackson is an exceptionally creative musician. His original compositions are influenced by long years of involvement with music from every tribe and nation, and incorporate his keen sensitivity to his own environment. Through extensive experience with the music of Africa, Asia, Europe and America, he has come to appreciate the need for rich diversity and, as a consistently strong, effective performer, he relies on his unparalleled ability at improvisation. The result is a totally original concert each time he plays. Recent audiences at Harvard, Yale, the University of Hartford, and U. Mass, and many other universities and cultural centers have expressed both pleasure from and admiration for this unusually skilled musician.

"This music is a realization of our personal and collective power to actively change the prevailing social disorder, which now forcefully inhibits our growth, into a system of economic equality which, through a constant revolutionary process, will enable us to expand creatively and continually. The system under which we all live, of which we are all a part, is a system of economic exploitation by one class of other classes, and which has as its inevitable outgrowth the destructive forces of devious nationalism, sexism and racism. In an effort at stimulating positive social change, this music challenges the attitudes our society perpetuates and under which we labor daily. It is a concentrated effort at personal liberation in the broad, realistic and necessary context of social revolution."

Keith's Column:

New and improved... mostly

October is usually a good month for new releases and this October seems to be no exception. Some very "important" new albums have fallen into my greedy little clutches and what follows is a cross-section of the latest vinyl creations brought forth by some well-known bands.

The first of the albums is Nigel Olsson's first real solo album. Olsson, you will recall, gained notoriety backing a gentleman named Reg Dwight, later known as Elton John. He became known as one of rock's best drummers, a title not undeserved. He also sang back up vocals on most of Elton's albums and his voice bears a striking resemblance to his mentor's. However, this album has Mr. John on only one cut and this is all to Nigel's credit. It would have been very easy for him to have John and Taupin write him ten songs and have Gus Dudgeon produce them. The result would have been an Elton John album without Elton. However, Olsson has relied on his own talents and the result is not a bad initial effort. He has some fine back-up help from Steve Cropper, Jim Horn and Leland Sklar. I particularly like his version of the Rascal's hit "A Girl Like You." The production is a bit overdone and Gene Page's string arrangements are rather trite, but, all in all, I find this a very pleasant album.

At the other end of the taste spectrum is the new album by Black Oak Arkansas. It is called "X-Rated" and is the biggest piece of trash I've heard in a long time. The songs are all a waste of time and are totally unsuitable for radio airplay. They are not cleverly sexual like many Zappa songs; they are merely exercises in bad taste. To sum it up: if someone you hate is having a birthday, give them this album.

The surprise record of the month is an album by former Cream-Blind Faith drummer Ginger Baker's new band The Baker-Gurvitz Army. This is their second album together and the result is very good indeed. I have not heard such fine drumming from Baker in years (Listen to the cut "People") and Adrian Gurvitz's guitar work is excellent. There is some good keyboard work by Peter Lerner also. I must admit that I have not had the chance to listen to this as much as I'd like to, but my first few listenings have proven that Ginger made the right decision in returning to rock music after his disastrous experiments in African percussion music.

Oh yes, My old friend Neil Sadaka has issued another album. This is the follow up to his gold album "Sadaia's Back"; the same album which I praised as sounding like "Rodney Allen Rippy after he caught himself on the shower door". Well, I must admit, Neil has improved a bit. This is an introspective album called "The Hungry Years". The highlight of it is a remake of Sedaka's 1962 hit "Breaking up Is Hard to Do." Only know, Neil does it as a Bette Midler-type torch song. Sedaka does play a nice blues piano though. Still, I can't help wondering how any red blooded American boy can sing Mezzo-Soprano.

'Red Desert' featured in Continuing Film Series

by Stephanie Bowler

"The Red Desert," Italian director Antonioni's first color film, will be shown in Dana Hall at 8:00 p.m., Sunday, Oct. 5. This 1964 film classic stars Monica Vitti and Richard Harris. In the film, Antonioni depicts, through the visual images of color, the oppressive, gray surroundings of factory life and the contrasting colors that prevade a fantasy world removed from this ugly reality. "The Red Desert" is considered one of Antonioni's finest films and is a tribute to his belief that the most genuine human emotion can be communicated best through color and visual concepts without heavily utilizing the spoken word.

Wednesday, Oct. 8, at 9:00 p.m., the first of two Alfred Hitchcock classics will be shown. "Dial M For Murder," the 1954 thriller, stars Grace Kelly, Ray Milland, Robert Cummings and John Williams and is a favorite of Hitchcock fans.

Tickets for each film are one dollar. Passes to either the Sunday night or Wednesday night series can be purchased at a reduced rate.

Social extravaganza

by J. Walker Black

The ghost of Oscar Wilde was lurking in the halls of Jane Adams this past Saturday evening. In a Gatsbyesque party recalling the latter days of the Roman Empire, people danced, ate, and drank, as participants in what was undoubtedly Connecticut College's most unique bacchanal to date.

The fete was sponsored by the Harkness Flying Corporation and meticulously arranged by Michael King and Bill Thompson, both of whom seemed intent on throwing a party to end all parties. Liquor there was in more than prodigious quantities, and as one would expect at an affair of this nature, the quality of the spirits was in direct proportion to the quantity.

Gallons and gallons of Jack Daniels, Wild Turkey, Chivas Regal, Tanqueray Gin, Smirnoff Vodka and Michelob beer flowed like water. A champagne fountain adorned one corner of a room that contained two complete bars, each manned by a crew of four bartenders. The sheer extravagance was staggering. Jason Frank, when pressed for a comment, remarked in an ambiguous tone "The revolution ain't gonna be televised here."

People were decked out in their finest duds and were unusually well-behaved. The entire party was permeated with a feeling of upper class noblesse oblige. It was incredibly decadent but good fun as well. Hopefully, this party will be the inspiration for future affairs of a similar nature. They represent Connecticut Country Club at its finest. Steve Brunetti summed it up best when he said, "Forebear to judge, for we are sinners all."

"I'll drink to that," David Korobkin replied. And so they did.

COFFEESPOON STIRS

The Coffeespoon Series of the English Department begins its new season with song. Nancy Hershatter '76 and Patty Harcourt '76 will sing authentic English ballads and English and American whaling songs. Everyone is invited to attend on Thursday, October 1 at 3 p.m. in the College House. There is no admission charge. Refreshments will be served.

The Coffeespoon is attempting to present a varied program this year, including films, speakers, poetry readings, and discussions. Anyone with a suggestion for a program is asked to contact Veronica Makowsky, Box 781.

Yale Divinity student Laurie Nowell works on campus

by Lea Seeley

Laurie Nowell, a second year Yale Divinity School student working toward her Master of Divinity, is anxious to be included in our college community. Sponsored by the Chapel Board, she spends 15 hrs. a week on campus involving herself in as many ways as she can with student life.

Laurie has two main directions: parish and campus ministry. While assisting Rev. Robb in Christian Fellowship meetings and chapel services, she is also leading a workshop this fall sponsored by the Office of Career Counseling and Placement. The workshop will deal primarily with evaluation of individual skills and career aims. Laurie believes that "sharing experiences" can lead to individual discoveries and give confused students new ideas concerning their own future plans. The program will consist of mainly of discussion and exercise, and will be oriented to discovering inner or obscured talents which, once recognized, might be developed and put to practical use.

Laurie sees her own ministry as "the presentation of possibilities!" As a woman working toward ordination as a minister, she is an example of such a "new possibility." The resistance to the idea of a woman minister is becoming less of a problem, says Laurie, and proves that once an idea is sparked into action, concrete results can quickly follow.

One of the proposed projects Laurie hopes to "spark into action" deals with the theme of sexuality. The Chapel Board is anxious to sponsor such a seminar or discussion group which would probe the subject of sex roles and relationships. Questions to be raised might include: "On what levels are men and women equal? Do certain occupations better suit one of the sexes? How are sex roles conditioned by culture and expectations?" Laurie would also like to discuss sexist language as it appears in church liturgy and in the community.

Other program ideas include forming discussion groups dealing with the subject of "Belief" and how we form our beliefs. Once a philosophy major at Wellesley, Laurie enjoys such "in depth" discussion. "My entire bent is not religious — not intellectually anyway," she explains.

The "field work" for her program of study at Yale took her to a Congregational parish in North Greenwich last year. She dealt primarily with theological questions there and is now experiencing a totally new environment. "There is usually a tension being a minister at a secular institution," she notes, but believes campus ministry will be more realistic and vibrant.

Above all, Laurie wants to meet people and just talk about college life. "I'd love to come to dinner any Monday or Thursday," she said eagerly, "and to spend time with individuals and groups within the community."

Venture helps plan Your time off

by Eva Mae Jones

The College Venture Program is designed for those students who want to stop out — take a semester or a full year off — then return to the college they left. Connecticut College, in a cooperative effort with 11 other small, liberal arts colleges such as Bates, Colby, and Trinity, took part in the organization of the Venture project in 1973. Under the auspices of Northeastern University, the plan is aided by the Braitmeyer Foundation.

Venture, through its "Job Bank," a three-inch thick listing of jobs available in the Northeast United States and in Europe, tries to find a job that suits a person best, and, if necessary, will tailor a job around a student's interests. No study, in any form, is included in the work, but the experience gained is immeasurable.

Mrs. Rozanne Burt, of the Career Counseling and Placement Office, is the local directrix of Venture. A representative of the American program will be at Conn. on Oct.

29, while the overseas spokesman arrives on Oct. 15. Ms. Burt is the person to contact if you are interested in stopping out to work and experience an interesting field, not to fill time until the next semester or the entrance into graduate school.

For individuals in the middle of their college training, Venture offers volunteer or paid jobs, as well as subsistence employment (room, board, and pocket money), with time lengths of three, six or 12 months. Seven students from Conn. participated in last year's program, their placements ranging from a public relations director at a Massachusetts sports arena to an assistant teacher of English in France.

Conn. originally signed up for two years with the project, but with the success of the 1974 and 1975 endeavors, the college has renewed its association for a third year. The master director of the cooperative is none other than Dr. Charles E. Shain, President of the college from 1962-1974.

Discussion concerns survival

by Sue Tweedie

Because of the weather this past week, Conn. College Campus Camp-out, sponsored by SURVIVAL, turned out to be a sit-in.

The question of how sound Connecticut College is environmentally was explored at the meeting; the atmosphere was lively as the discussion periodically broke off to allow for guitar, fiddle, and Jewish harp music. The subjects that were discussed were: the Bottle Bill, a bill requiring bottling companies to use returnable bottles; food waste and ways of reducing it; the drastic rate at which the New London garbage dump is reaching its maximum saturation level (to which the college adds a considerable amount); the danger involved in having too much plutonium being produced by nuclear power plants such as Millstone about 6 miles from here; and last but not least, the scheme of Conn. College becoming an environmental model.

Doubtless, you have seen the paper recycling boxes. These boxes are a part of the overall scheme for becoming the environmental model. Establishing an institutionalized recycling program instead of the volunteer student-run program, is one goal for the model. The main force that can make this model a reality is the backing from the student body by contributing all recyclable paper and glass to the designated boxes, and taking only as much as one can eat at meals.

participation in the philosophy program at the University of Edinburgh in Scotland.

If the eight law students from the 1975 class pass their bar examinations, they will represent a successful 25 per cent of the alumni engaged in professional study. The next largest group is comprised of five business administration majors. All 32 in this section are studying in America.

Immediate employment has been found by 54 graduates. The jobs include working as an assistant at the Peruvian embassy in Algiers, a YMCA World Service aide in Japan, and a systems analyst at the General Services Administration in Washington, D.C. Each person is an individual, and there are as many different professions as workers.

Grad statistics are in Predictions for June, 1975, graduates successfully finding jobs were, to be kind, particularly gloomy. The recession, coupled with growing inflation, caused thousands of jobs to disappear, leaving even experienced workers unemployed. However, Conn's June graduates have fared better than most, with more alumni entering graduate or professional studies than the work force, thus delaying that situation.

As of Sept. 23, 40 individuals are doing graduate work around the world. There is not a predominant field, but a variety of directions, ranging from a Fulbright Fellowship in Japan to Talmudic Studies at the Jewish Theological Seminary, as well as that, "in cases also requiring punitive action, e.g. malicious behavior, disorderly conduct, abusive drunkenness, the Judiciary Board reserves the right to impose harsher sanctions such as probation, and to recommend such sanctions as suspension, or expulsion." This would mean that if a student was already under disciplinary probation and another infraction of the honor code occurred, suspension would immediately be considered. All students found guilty of non-malicious damage would be given the right to contest the bill for that damage before the board.

In the event that persons unknown cause the damage the board has formulated the following guidelines:

a. If the damage occurs during a function sponsored or sanctioned by a dormitory or any college organization, and if it appears reasonable that the damages occurred because of negligence on the part of that dorm or organization, then that body shall be held responsible for the damages.

(Here again, it is expected that since the cost of the damage would be levied on the individual dorms or organizations, there will be a greater effort, on their part, to avoid such damage and to encourage security measures.)

b. If the damage occurs and the dorm or individual student or organization is not determined guilty of negligence, Residence and/or Physical Plant shall absorb the costs.

In the past, Security Reports were issued to the following: President Ames, Dean Watson, Dean Cobb, Residence, and Physical Plant. This system denied the guilty party the right of confidentiality, and allowed for the discretion of one dean — the board's advisor — to determine which cases should appear before the board.

Under Social Procedural Standards revisions the board asks that, "all Security Reports involving damages and therefore, money due the college and all cases involving any suspected violation of the Social Honor Code," be referred directly to the Judiciary Board chairman. This would eliminate the discretion of one dean and give the board the ability to more fully determine which cases should appear before it. Confidentiality would also be restored. Within one week of obtaining the Security Report the board will decide if it is necessary to hear a case. The board recommends that if the suspect is found guilty of any damage then the board's chairman will issue the damages. The right to contest this bill before the board will also be granted. In an effort to again protect the individual's right to confidentiality, the Accounting Office will bill the board's chairman directly for the damages — not the guilty party.

The Judiciary Board will present one other recommendation regarding the Honor Code; a statement which it views as particularly important. It appears below in its entirety.

The Judiciary Board considers it imperative that the Academic and Social Honor Codes be understood as equally important parts of one greater Code, The Connecticut College Honor Code.

We believe that Connecticut College is a community and the members of this community must function responsibly in it, both academically and socially.

It is the feeling of the board that a socially delinquent student is as noxious to the college community as a student who is an academic delinquent.

These policy revisions have already been approved by the entire Judiciary Board, and applauded by the board's advisor, Dean Watson, and President Ames. The board's chairman, Leslie Margolin, does not anticipate that the revisions will have any problem in obtaining the approval of College Council at tonight's meeting.

Cal. from p. 1

the three day extension as "a reasonable and legitimate request on the part of the students." When asked about the budgetary problems emphasized by President Ames, Robb replied, "I find it hard to believe that we cannot find a suitable trade off."

The next important phase in attempting to obtain the calendar extension will come on today's (Thurs.) meeting of the College council during which debate on the issue is expected.

went on to explain the problems with the current program.

The present program has two major drawbacks; it is not operated on a year round basis and it is strictly run by volunteers. This means that at the beginning of every semester the program must be completely reorganized and volunteers recruited. It takes a minimum of two weeks before this is done and before the boxes for paper begin to appear in the dorms and administration buildings.

After approximately one month everyone has been informed of the program and the community's awareness of it reaches a peak. Volunteers, however, remain inconsistent; many bundle the paper while others do not. As midterms and papers near, the volunteers begin to diminish and the amount of paper collected also decreases. The program is halted during the intersession and must be completely reorganized again in the spring. As a result, the program collects only a fraction of the paper produced on campus.

Survival has made several suggestions which would improve this limited and inconsistent program. They propose that the program be "comprehensive in nature and year round in span." They encourage the implementation of paid employees who could do the job consistently. Survival would function as an educator, informing all members of the community to separate the trash from the paper and dispose of it properly.

There have been two proposals on how the paper should be brought to the recycle center. One suggests that the college janitors take the paper boxes down to the basement of each dorm along with the trash they now take. This would then be taken by Residence to the recycle center and picked up by an outside agency. The other proposal would be to have students, who are paid (possibly set up as a campus job), take the boxes down to the basement.

As the resolution reads, "The program should be run as part of the college's normal waste disposal operation. The program should not depend on volunteer help for the bulk of the heavy labor involved." This new program would encompass the entire community; it would be run by Physical Plant, the Residence Department, and Survival.

The members of Survival wish to be made clear that this resolution is not a student demand on the Administration, but rather, an attempt to encourage a show of support from organized. The program, which is aimed at 11 through 18-year-olds, will be discussed at an introductory meeting on Oct. 6 in the conference room of the Salvation Army, located on Gov. Winthrop Blvd. The program will be financed with Community Development funds. An advisory board of 40 members, 15 of which will be youths will be established.

the community for the new program. They emphasize the urgency of the program; Connecticut College contributes a large amount of trash to the New London dump, which is rapidly filling. They assert that the city's incinerators do not meet standards and we are adding extra trash to these substandard incinerators — trash that could less expensively be recycled.

The resolution was overwhelmingly approved by both the Student Government Association and College Council. It will be referred to a subcommittee of the Environmental Models Committee which will consist of Tim Reynolds, Jim Wolf, Miss Voorhees, and Mr. Ingersoll. This subcommittee will draw up the actual plans for the reorganization.

with its cooperative virtuosity and experimental daring.

But Return to Forever is special. Having satisfied their art-for-art's-sake ambitions and established their credentials as artists, Corea and his cohorts are now aiming their presentations toward the kind of listener who would rather participate in music than analyze it.

Return to Forever's new music has been brightening people across the country and around the world. The group's focus on communication has helped them accomplish the difficult feat of hitting home even when the tunes they play are unfamiliar to the audience. "What matters," Chick said in a recent Rolling Stone interview, "is the effect created on people, the emotional feeling of a concert. And if you can combine that feeling with really good musicianship and technique, you have a very beautiful means for communicating moments of truth." The truth of spiritual beingness and of physical beingness too, is in the music.

Sun power may prevail

The college community had a unique opportunity this past Saturday; the Human Ecology program and People's Action for Clean Energy co-sponsored "An Alternative Energy Fair."

Unfortunately, the rain, the work, and other things kept many away.

Exhibitors, ranging from solar energy firms to the Conn. Dept. of Planning and Energy Policy, set up tables in and around Cummings. The free informational pamphlets offered were informative, despite the fact that they pushed this or that concern's version of a solar panel or an energy-saving home design.

Meanwhile, Oliva was the site of continuous lectures on topics as diverse as "Home Winterizing" and "Jobs in the solar energy field." Outside of Oliva, PACE had a table set up with literature concerning nuclear energy. According to their blurb, PACE is "a new Ct. action group dedicated to promoting truly clean energy sources, reducing energy waste, and questioning Ct.'s commitment to nuclear power." A spokesperson indicated that interested people should contact the group at S.E. Ct. PACE, Box 171, Niantic, 06357. Meetings are held at the Thames Science Center on Gallows Lane.

Soccer team grabs for support

by Bear Kobac

"I know you can't hit a homerun every time you step into the batter's box, but I wouldn't mind just making contact" is what Owen Prague was heard to say to a young lady, who replied, "What I'm pitching Owen, ain't for rookies". To which Jim Litwin commented, "I'd like to see her bullpen." Frenzied and flustered the lass fumed "Well," but was drowned out by the roar of the crowd as the soccer team entered the Harkness stadium. The state was set, the kazooes were humming, the fans cheering, and Tucker was drinking, for the Camels played Assumption College.

The first half ended in a scoreless tie. The defense of Moore, Reich, and Higo were tough. As a maturing woman noted, "John has some great moves out there and he's not bad at soccer either." The second half spelled trouble; however, as Assumpiton scored two goals. Lessig said "t-r-o-u-b-l-e." Then a pretty girl yelled "c'mon let's score." Carney answered "Later, honey" but Cissel said "now" and headed the ball into the net. Conn. kept up the pressure as Perry, Carney, Rosenthal, and Litwin pressed for goals, but the Harkness scoreboard told the tale "Bullinkle is a dope!" no, not that, but "Home 1 Visitors 2."

On a more serious note, the soccer team is now in the NCAA and looks forward to student support. In an effort to promote fan-player understanding duplicate keys to all the players' rooms are available at the Crozier-Williams Main desk and may be obtained by any interested freshman girl. This program, launched last year by Bear Kobac, places the emphasis on the one-to-one relationship between player and spectator. The team's next match is on Saturday at 11:00 a.m. Coach Lessig and the boys will be glad to see you.

J.V. team awaits season

By Lee Barnes

After two weeks of practice, the J.V. soccer team is ready and waiting to open the season. The team is coached by Mark Warren and Dan Tucker, two former Conn. College players, and is made up primarily of freshmen and sophomores. The team looks strong and features a potent offense, good defense and strong goal tending. The addition of several varsity taxi-squad members should provide the team with some additional depth. So, all in all, the team is looking forward to a successful season.

Hockey club turnout Expected to be high

by Chris Abbott

Near the end of October the Connecticut College Hockey Club, in this, its fifth season, will take to the ice. Tryouts for the team and cuts will take place in this brief period before the first game. Although the club lost three valuable seniors, fifteen members are rejoining the club again this year. Leaders of the team approximate that there are ten prospective freshmen and transfers. In all forty or forty-five skaters are expected at the first practice.

As mentioned, fifteen members of last year's team are expected at the first practice. Returning standouts include Paul Sanford, known for his five goals in the Columbia game, Todd "Slapshot" Bates, Chris Bowdoin, famous for his violent fisticuffs, Charlie Cissel, remembered for his incredible puck handling, Talkative Mark McCrystal, and the well known Paul Funk. The club looks forward to Ben Cook's steady play in goal again this year.

This year, the hockey club will play Columbia twice, once at Wesleyan, and once at Columbia's home ice in the "Big Bad Bronx." In addition to games against such teams as Southern and Central Connecticut State Colleges, the team will play in the Wesleyan Intramural League. The season is expected to consist of twenty-five to thirty games against colleges in Connecticut, New York, and Rhode Island. The teams' home ice will be the Wesleyan rink, a mere fifty minutes away.

Such numbers warrant serious consideration. Many established Connecticut College Varsity sports do not attract that many people. Director of Athletics, Charles Luce, is doing a great deal for the hockey club and his help is appreciated. Unfortunately, monetary restrictions limit the quality of hockey available at Connecticut College. As hockey interest booms across the United States and Canada, it is rapidly becoming a very popular spectator sport.

The President and General Manager of the club, Eric Birnbaum, is doing a fine job organizing the games, practices, and personnel. It should be emphasized that the hockey team is a club sport, run by the students and at the present a lack of money is the number one priority.

Dept. acts on poll

by Anne Robillard

In keeping with the Physical Education Department's goal of maintaining contact with the student body, a random, door to door survey was conducted during the week of March 6, 1975. The purpose of the survey was to discover areas of student interest and concern.

The Physical Education Student Advisory Committee composed and administered the questionnaire. The stated purpose was "to find out if the students on this campus feel the direction of our department is satisfactory." There was also an attempt to draw out student ideas and desires concerning the immediate and future programs.

Out of 200 students polled, 174 responded to the questionnaire. From their answers the department has outlined four major areas of concern and is responding to them. Students believe there is a need for improved communication concerning programs and the reasons for offering them. In an attempt to fill the "communications gap," Rick Ricci has been named sports information director. He plans to work with Connie Sokalsky, Cro Director, and with WCNI, as well as with Pundit to publicize the information.

A second area of concern is the need to allow women's sports to catch up to the organization of men's sports. This feeling was "vocalized" through comments made on the questionnaire. One comment was "Women's athletics need a strong spokesman;" also, "Women's coaching is very disillusioning."

Mr. Charles Luce believes that this situation occurred due to an over-adjustment when Conn became co-ed. The department is attempting to equalize opportunity and facilities by providing new equipment and uniforms, and have redone the women's field hockey playing field.

Another area of concern is making efficient use of the available facilities. Mr. Luce said that the position of a Cro director should solve this problem. Ms. Sokalsky is tackling the problems of a gym guest policy and non-college use of the gym along with making available as much free time as possible.

A fourth area of concern to the students is the conflict between activities and practices, and classes. Over 50 per cent of the students believed that setting aside a block of time in the afternoon in order to avoid conflicts between academic courses and sports is a good idea.

Some phys. ed. activities requested by the students were water polo, karate, judo, wrestling, frisbee, curling, and yoga. A need was also seen for a sauna and a skating rink.

The department has interpreted the primarily positive response by students as an endorsement of their attempt to work towards a balance between intercollegiate and intramural sports and phys. ed. courses.

Teams meet on soggy fields

By Stege Price

Last week's monsoon not only wiped out half the schedule but had the commissioners shaking their heads in dismay. T.K. observed that "we'll play them one at a time" while Doug maintained that "this field drains real well" as he swam across to Harkness. The commissioners did agree that the games will be rescheduled at a later date, hopefully before it starts snowing.

Three out of the four games that were played were shutouts as defense dominated on the soggy field. In one game, however, the defense was confined to one team as Morrison rolled to its second straight win, defeating an overmatched Hamilton squad 42-0. Andy Krevolin showed his versatility by throwing a touchdown pass, catching a touchdown pass, and running for a third TD.

In other action, K.B. was shut out for the second time as J.A. triumphed 14-0, led by the running of Joe Mastrangelo and a stingy defense. When J.A. faced undefeated Smith-Burdick, however, they ended up on the short end of a 14-0 score. Richards, Funk, and the rest of the ferocious Burdick defense prevented J.A. from ever mounting an attack. In the first tie game of the season, Wright and Hamilton battled to a 14-14 standoff.

Phys. Ed. Club Council would monitor funds

by Anne Robillard

Sport's Clubs were once again an issue in College Council at last Thursday's meeting. Mr. Luce submitted the Phys. Ed. department's proposal, prepared mainly by Ms. Conklin, proposing a physical education club council and a sport's club handbook.

The Phys. Ed. Club council would serve as a liason between the party wishing to start a club and the Phys. Ed. department to determine if the club is acceptable as such at Conn. College. If approved, the club would receive funds from the Student Activities Physical Education Sports Club budget. The Physical Education Club Council would administer this fund. The Club Council will include the Chairman of the Phys. Ed. department, the co-ordinator of women's athletics, representatives of all active clubs, and a Student Government representative.

The requirements for a sports club under this arrangement include submitting a constitution and the election of officers and advisors. The clubs would also have to submit a five year budget plan for approval by the council. Clubs will only be approved if they do not conflict with the college's present offerings. Since funding will be from the Student Activity fee, all club members will be responsible to Student Government for their conduct. Funding would range from $100 for the first year to a maximum of $1000 by the third year.

The proposal defines a Physical Education Club as being student managed, having a non-salaried faculty advisor, and determining their own schedule. The Phys. Ed. department will aid the club with administrative assistance, and facility and equipment use when available.

Sports clubs at this time include the Hockey, Baseball, Saber and Spur, C-Synchers, Folk Dance, Sailing, Women's Softball, Women's Lacrosse and Badminton. The number of actual participants is estimated at 150-200 students.

The sports club handbook presents the guidelines for the conduct of sports clubs including the policies that they must follow. The handbook is meant to serve as a supplement to the Conn. College "C" Book.

Rick Allen explained that the issue of club sports is an old one that has been brought up in College council for at least the last two years. Club sports are a problem mainly because it is time-consuming and the large amount of College Council money that is involved. Last year clubs went directly to College Council with their budget requests and were usually granted one year gifts.

Mr. Allen does not think that the guidelines in the proposal are extravagant, particularly in view of the fact that while a limited number of students actively participate in club sports, many more are involved as fans and spectators.

At this point the alternatives to the Phys. Ed. department's proposal is to have the college fund them or leave the system as it is with each club applying for funds independently rather than through the Club council. The proposal is on the agenda for College Council this week and while it may not be accepted as is or in any part, Mr. Allen believes that the issue of club sports will be settled this year.

Some stereo dealers are a lotta' mouth when it comes to quality components. At the Stereo Lab we're all ears...

... because

no one, and I do mean no one, can make a 'quality' stereo system sound as good on paper as it does in reality. Unfortunately not every stereo component is a quality unit. Each year millions of dollars are spent for stereo equipment that sounds better in newspaper ads than it does in real life. Talk is cheap. Hearing is what it's all about. So we're not going to tell you about the Bose 301 speaker system, the Garrard 42M turntable, and the top rated Sherwood 7010 AM-FM receiver shown in this ad until you've heard it for yourself. We think that you'll agree that this system which sells for $399.00 will buy you all the music. So, stop by one of our stores, and let your ears do the talking.
