Honor Code Commits Students To Accept Dual Responsibility
by Sally Foote '61

Part of the pride I feel as a member of Connecticut College finds its source in the center around which all College life revolves—the Honor System. I am, therefore, pleased that mine is the gratifying task of acquainting you with one of the most significant, structure, and substance of a system of self-government which I find both appealing and challenging.

When a new government began at Connecticut in the early 1920's, it was organized around the Honor System implying the dual obligation of self discipline and self responsibility. Since its beginnings, both Student Government and the Honor System itself have been strengthened by years of fruitful experience. The Honor System has not overgrown its nucleus; it has not involved itself in extraneous details. It has remained a system through which the student body can function as a social and academic unit.

As a part of the Honor System itself, you will soon be aware of its members—the Connecticut College students. Your honor as a freshman is the result of the high degree of personal integrity that the College presupposes in every student. It is important to know that the Honor System plays a vital role in helping to force which operates on all students to fulfill the obligations they have designated as personal integrity. This practice involves complete impartiality of student government and honor code. The Court meets each week to discuss cases which have arisen during the week, either by note in the Honor Court or over the phone. It is of great importance to know that all cases are decided by the Court on the basis of the regulations. This practice involves complete impartiality of student government and the Honor Code.

Student Government and the Honor System are two sides of the same coin. They are two active interests which are interrelated. The Honor System is based on the idealism of thought and action which extends your obligation. And privileges accorded to intelligent adults in mature society.

Professor Tilletich, Noted Theologian, To Speak Sunday

The speaker at the vesper service Sunday night will be Dr. Paul Tillich, professor of theology at Harvard Divinity School, and university professor at Harvard. He received his education in Germany, and has taught in the Universities of Berlin, Leipzig, and Heidelberg. As the main, coming to America in 1933, he has been, until his Harvard appointment, professor of philosophical theology at Union Theological Seminary, New York.

Dr. Tillich is recognized as one of the outstanding men in the world today, an authority not only in theology and the philosophy of religion, but also further in social ethics as well. He is the author of numerous books. To name a few of these books, there are "Theology," "The Open and Closed Systems," "The Nature of Spirit," "The Jack of God," and "The Concept of Freedom." He has also written many articles which have been published in many magazines and journals, notable among which is his "Systematic Theology." This is a work which is used in several theological schools throughout the country.

The most conspicuous aspect of Dr. Tillich's philosophy of religion is that which still has some bearing in the present day. His philosophy is the belief in God as a creative process. The universe, according to Dr. Tillich, is a process which continues to develop and expand. It is a process of growth and development, and it is a process of change and growth. It is a process that is constantly evolving and changing, and it is a process that is constantly being created and recreated. It is a process that is constantly being challenged and refined, and it is a process that is constantly being questioned and explored.

Dr. Tillich is a man of great personal integrity, and he is a man who has dedicated his life to the study and understanding of the nature of God. He is a man who has dedicated his life to the study and understanding of the nature of the universe. He is a man who has dedicated his life to the study and understanding of the nature of the human experience. He is a man who has dedicated his life to the study and understanding of the nature of the human condition. He is a man who has dedicated his life to the study and understanding of the nature of the human soul. He is a man who has dedicated his life to the study and understanding of the nature of the human mind. He is a man who has dedicated his life to the study and understanding of the nature of the human body. He is a man who has dedicated his life to the study and understanding of the nature of the human spirit.

New Work Program Stresses Cooperation of Student Body

By M. Zahmmer '61

At the risk of becoming repetitious, I may say again that you must tell me or rather reference what has already been told in the New Work Program. The need of student involvement in making this program effective is vital one. To you as an individual and vital to the college as a whole. In fact without the program both would have some difficulty. As you may know the program began by student input, and expenses. During the past four years the system has changed and is still

Speaker of House Outlines Reps Functions

By Sandy Loring '62

The House of Representatives plays a major role in the efficient working of your Student Government. The members of this branch, which meets weekly, includes the House President, the Secretary, the Speaker, and the Student President of Student Government, as offices.

How House Reps have two major functions. First of all, it is a channel of information, college to students and for you. As you may know this is you Freshmen may have about Freshmen will be elected. Through these representatives, the ideas, suggestions, and criticisms of each student can be brought to.House. These representatives are not to be selected from the House of Representatives. The New House President will be elected by House Juniors until a temporary House President can be selected. Then, shortly after Thanksgiving (by vote, the Student President of Student Government) will be elected.

The campaigning process also works in reverse, constituting the second and most significant function. Each Rep is given equal representation in her or his Student Government, through her House President. The House President will be elected by House Juniors until a temporary House President can be selected. Then, shortly after Thanksgiving (by vote, the Student President of Student Government) will be elected.
