COOLIDGE ELECTED PRESIDENT.

Davis Supported in South.

La Follette Carries Wisconsin.

Calvin Coolidge has been elected President of the United States in a victory over John W. Davis, with several states unheard from. The vote of the third party, which participated in the elections made by its leaders and La Follette carried mainly its own state, Wisconsin, although he rather surprisingly managed to carry a number of the industrial districts of the East. Nearly two-thirds of its totals were polled in New York City alone. He lost to Coolidge such states as North and South Dakota which he was dependent upon. Davis carried the solid South.

Although he failed to carry his own state, he was much more popular in Wisconsin than in Minnesota, where he was at first refused to face the returns and persisted in believing that he was in the lead. The returns from some of the western states might throw the election into the House. The Coolidge-Dawes victory, although not so overwhelming as the landslide figures of the 1920 Harding victory, nevertheless is one of huge totals in the East and Middle West, topped by 920,000 in New York; 139,000 in New Jersey; and 1,100,000 in Pennsylvania.

The returns from the doubtful states of the far west, especially California, were found to be favoring Coolidge. He New York, Coolidge's plurality was but a little less than Harding's. As soon as the trend of the election became apparent, President Coolidge received many messages congratulating him and expressing his satisfaction with the outcome of the election. President Coolidge's re-election gives the Republicans control of the Senate.

Although President Coolidge may have shared the responsibility for leading Governor Smith for Governor of New York State, the city vote changed the situation, and he was powerful enough to win over Smik Smith.

One of the interesting features of this election was the number of women elected to high offices. At the last returns, "Miss" Ferguson was running ahead in a close race against Klan-Republican, for Democratic governor of Texas. The other, woman candidate for governor, Nellie T. Ross, had not won her race in Wyoming, as the polls had not closed when the returns were coming in.

The new feature in national elections this year was the broadcasting throughout the country of the returns as fast as they were gathered. This eliminated reports on public bulletin boards, and enabled larger numbers of people to know the results directly.

On Friday, October 31st, according to their delightful custom, President and Mrs. Marshall entertained the college at a Halloween party. The gymnasium was disguised and transformed to the amusement of the group of cornstalks, boughs of autumn leaves, and small children who attended. The party began with an hour's entertainment in which each of the classes contributed a share, then at about nine o'clock dancing began and continued until 11:30.

The entertainment was directed and organized by Hazel Osborne. First on the program was a musical selection entitled "October T apache," the local college which especially appealed to the audience. The principal role of this number was played by Hazel Osborne. The others taking part were: Sarah Davis, Lois Bridge, Elizabeth Philips, Margaret Covert, Margaret Taubes, and Alene Whipple.

The second number was the weird song of a band of half a dozen witches. They came upon the stage with all the accoutrements of their craft: black crowns, high pointed hats and the inevitable broomstick. Next was a solo from one of the witches, harking so shrilly herself of her discretion as to be identifiable as Louise Macleod. There was also sung the ballad of the "Three Old Maids of Lee."

As a climax and coda of the program Alice Barrett read a strange and terrible story in the darkened room, identifiable as Louise Macleod. There was also sung the ballad of the "Three Old Maids of Lee."

Dramatic Club to Present Fall Play.

Will Form Part of Parents' Week-End Program.

The annual fall play of the Dramatic club will be presented Saturday evening, November eighth. The play, "The Man Who Married a Dumb Wife," was written by Amiote France, the eminent French author, who died recently.

The action takes place in France during the medieval period. Both the costumes and customs are of that period. The story centers about Madeleine Hotal, a judge, and his wife, Catherine, who is a very beautiful woman, possessed of all feminine charms. Unfortunately, however, she is dumb. Hotal is extremely grateful over this handicap, and urged by his friend, a lawyer, he consults eminent doctors about her plight. At their recommendation an operation is performed whereby Catherine gains the faculty of speech. Hotal is delighted, of course, but his delight soon turns to desperation for Catherine, on learning that she was unable to make friends, is trying to draw up a paper for a young girl who is not the noise of his wife affects him. At this last the committee in in charge of the play, having been unable to make Cather dumb, make Hotal deaf. This part forms a climax whereby Cather gains the approval of the audience, while the playwright is the work of the committee. The play is in quite a popularity throughout the country of the returns as fast as they were gathered. This eliminated reports on public bulletin boards, and enabled larger numbers of people to know the results directly.

GEORGE CRAFTON WILSON TO SPEAK AT CONVOCATION.

"Recent International Adjustments" His Subject.

George Craefton Wilson, Professor of International Law at Harvard University, will address the members and friends of the College at Convocation exercises on November 11. Subject of his address, "Recent International Adjustments."

Professor Wilson is a native of Connecticut, and as his birthplace was Plainfield, he received his A. B. degree from the University of Hildesberg, Berlin, Paris and Oxford. The diversity in his scope of studies is evidenced by his acquaintance with the universities of Heidelberg, Berlin, Paris and Oxford. During the third quarter "Spuddy" started the ball down the field to the Junior's goal. For several minutes the players struggled, knocking the ball this way and that. Finally Elizabeth Damere's stick hit the ball driving it into "Spal's" domain, for the Junior's first point.

Cheered by their success the red and white team played a fast and interesting game, rushing back after recovering the ball, but could not break through the defense of the full-backs and goal-guard, and only to loose the ball at the last minute, rushing back after recovering the ball, but could not break through the defense of the full-backs and goal-guard, and only to lose the ball at the last minute.

To the Editor:

The modern tendency seems to be toward a change. It is found in every field that the new method or the new creation succeeds the old whether it is great. But this has been and still is great. But this no money with which to buy such working basis of party action. The Progressive plan to unify themselves ever party had won. The "voice of the public" is found in every public and college—that is to charge adequate population occupying the old aristocratic and hidden St. Peter, which holds the money has been distributed among the toilers after the appearance of the "Roi Soleil" among the daffodils of the "Quartier du Marais" with its miserable degradation of time, it was in the "Corot" or even of the periods represented. PRESS BOARD HAS CAMPAIGN WEEK.

Special Editor of "Day" Speaks.

The week, November 2nd to 9th, is "Press Board Week." During this week it is the desire of Press Board to stimulate an interest among the Freshmen, and to inform the general student body of its policy.

1. Press Board is essential for publishing only desirable college news.
2. It is the official right of Press Board to control all college publicity.
3. All newspaper correspondents reporting college news must be affiliated with Press Board.
4. Press Board comes into closer contact with the entire college body than any other organization on campus.
5. Press Board has the financial backing and the sincere interests of both the college administration and the students themselves.
6. Press Board offers actual, journalistic experience to its members.

Each member of Press Board becomes a regular reporter on a real newspaper. The conferences will continue until November 14.

In connection with Press Board Week, Dr. Cooper, special editor of the News, spoke to a group of students interested in journalism in the Plant Building living room, Tuesday, November 5th.

In journalism, said Mr. Cooper, women have an equal chance with men. Some of the best known writers are women. Their names are more familiar than the names of many men in other fields. Mary Roberts Rinehart, for instance, is more universally known than Jane Addams. Fifty percent of the magazines of this country are women's and the staffs are composed of women.

A college girl will have an advantage, over other girls in newspaper reporting, for she has been taught how to write fairly well. She does not need to spend the first year as a detriment to the paper. The ordinary high school graduate spends her first year in learning how to write. A woman with fair ability and with the desire to improve her power, will soon find that journalism is very remunerative.

Newspaper work is a stepping stone to higher phases of writing. The practice and experience are a great aid to would-be novelists. Probably, the easiest way for an author to get started is free lance writing. This means writing what you wish and selling it where you can. Although this leads you more directly to success or failure, you can scarcely earn a living for the first few years since such a money making system is very indefinite and unsatisfactory.

Never is the life of a reporter more exciting.
