OVCS Shines as 259th Point of Light

by Heather D'Auria

OVCS, or Community Service (OVCS) his College's Office of Volunteer Community Service (OVCS) his 259th Point of Light this week. On Wednesday, September 26, Anis Troude, director of OVCS, received the exciting call from the White House. Troude said, "The President's office called and said that they had some very good news for me. The president had personally named us a point of light. I was thrilled!"

The initiatives at OVCS are the first college programs to be named one of the 1,000 Points of Light by Bush. Connecticut College was reportedly in competition with two other undisclosed, large, prestigious universities on the east coast. Troude believes "The fact that over one-third of the student body is involved in community service set Connecticut College apart from the other schools."

SGA Rejects Budget

by Jon Flinnmore

In the face of opposition from many clubs and organizations, the SGA Assembly voted down this year's budget proposal by a vote of 7-20. Upon unveiling the budget to the public on Tuesday, September 25, the Finance Committee encountered immediate dissatisfaction from many organization representatives.

After presenting the budget to the Assembly Thursday night in front of a crowd of over fifty students, the budget was contended once again. Many issues were raised by both Assembly members and the club representatives in the audience. Some of this year's main concerns about the budget proposal were the way the money was distributed among the campus publications, the role of quality and worth in the Finance Committee's decisions, the funds given to WCNI, the issues of exclusivity and fiscal responsibility, and the money allocated to the diversity clubs in comparison to the funds distributed to SAC.

It was a combination of these factors which contributed to the failure of the proposal. Mary Beth Holman, '91, Senior Class president, said, "Please vote the proposal down... there are too many constituents who say they are not pleased."

After a motion to close discussion was passed, the Assembly voted to send the budget back to the Finance Committee for reconsideration with recommendations. The recommendations given to the committee included taking money from SAC and allocating it to the diversity clubs and equalization of the money allocated to the new publications, which included giving more to Blaiss and World View and taking from Wave Magazine and to a lesser extent, In Politics. Other recommendations included more money for the Russian Club, decreasing SAC's budget, and maintaining the classes' budgets.

This year's Finance Committee, working with a total balance of $217,350, had the duty of allocating these funds to 60 school clubs and organizations, who requested a total of more than $352,954. According to Michael Sandner, '91, SGA vice president and finance director, "A day in the life at the Development Office"

College Mourns Death of Susan Kuster

by Michael Sandner

Susan Kuster, 27, died in a plane crash on Nantucket. The plane, which originated from the Groton-New London Airport, crashed near Milestone Road on the island. Flying in instrument conditions because of foggy weather, the plane was reported on its second pass for its landing. Kuster's uncle, James Barnes, who was piloting the plane, was also killed in the crash.

"People have been amazingly responsive to a number of items put forth by Claire and the trustees," said Culbertson. "The number one fundraising priority is the college center project." The college center, a $14 million renovation of the Crozier-Williams student center, will include cloning the basketball court and covering the pool in Cro and Alkind.

47% Increase Rewards Development Staff's Fundraising Efforts

by Jon Flinnmore

The 1989-1990 college fundraising campaign ended its fiscal year with the second highest total in the history of the college. The $7,011,348 figure is 47 percent above last year's total according to records of the the development office.

Steven Culbertson, vice president of development, is excited about the campaign.

Letter to the Voice:
In The College Voice of September 25 an announcement appeared promoting the film Crimes and Misdemeanors. The announcement refers to the director as Woody "Big Nose" Allen. Allen is an American, not a Jewish director, and the term "big nose" as a Jewish characteristic is being equated with Allen’s nose. This is offensive and contrary to the inclusive nature of our culture.

Sincerely,
Julienne Taraska, ’92
House Senator of Park

Letter to the Voice:
I would like to clarify the misinformation about concerning the purpose and the repercussions of the aforementioned Art Short. Please take public all budget breakdowns, audits, and requests to the club improvement fund which amendment will be presented in the Assembly last week. With hope, this explanation will allow students to "the point" behind the acceptance of two friendly amendments on the budget. First of all, I would like to divide the "presumed votes remaining" to the "the point" in full public debate over the major decisions. Second, many members of the college community must be aware that the student’s voice was not heard in the voting process; in fact, many students were not in attendance due to the time conflict. Third, many students believe that this open process would extend the length of financial and other organizational deliberations.

Sincerely,
Edward J. Hanken
Assistant Professor ofHistory

I would like to express my support for the Allen Committee’s presentation of Woody Allen’s Crimes and Misdemeanors. The announcement refers to the director as Woody "Big Nose" Allen. Allen is a Jew and is not a Jewish director, although the term "big nose" as a Jewish characteristic is being equated with Allen’s nose. This is offensive and contrary to the inclusive nature of our culture.

In reference to the "Art Short" concerning the Philosophy Club’s consideration of Woody Allen’s Crimes and Misdemeanors, I would like to clarify the club’s connection to the description of a person as "Woody Big Nose." Allen is an American, not a Jewish director, and the term "big nose" as a Jewish characteristic is being equated with Allen’s nose. This is offensive and contrary to the inclusive nature of our culture.

Sincerely,
Melkon Khourovlas, ’91
President of the Philosophy Club

Letter to the Voice:
The reference to Woody Allen’s physiognomy reffects a tenacious tradition of Christian theological and societal anti-Semitism. The notion of the "Jewish nose" was part and parcel of a mystical complex in its own right such as "You are of your father the devil" (John 8:44). For the clerical and popular mind, the belief that Jews were responsible for the destruction of humanity and that they were immoral, Jews soon faced persecution and the 'big nose' is a symbol of this.

Sincerely,
Jeff H. Lesser,

Silber's Responsible Conservatism

by Jed Low

early intervention in the lives of destitute children. He also emphasizes the necessity of upgrading public schools. He clearly seeks to better the lives of the poor through a more gracious and responsible state government.

Silber is opposed both to the tax-and-free rollback referendum as well as the CLT rollback because they would, in effect, cut local aid to small towns and would cause tuition increases at colleges and universities to dramatically increase. Silber also supports the Citizens for Limited Taxation (CLT) rollback, which would cut $1.6 billion dollars out of the state budget in only two years. Unfortunately, implementing programs such as assistance to the mentally disabled would inevitably be curtailed under the CLT rollback. In addition, this proposal would grant the legislature an excessive amount of power to decide what programs should exist and what programs should not.

Several of Silber's comments, however, were extremely controversial during his campaign. For instance, on October 2, on this campus and in the Boston area, several activists and others concerned with the appalling conditions of the modern factory farm will engage in various activities to commemorate World Farm Animal Day. No doubt many people will join in these events, as elsewhere, don't want to know about factory farming, and there are some who simply need their minds opened soon as they read the words "animal rights." But we members of SPAM (Students for the Prevention of Animal Mistreatment) are not terrorists, and we don't want to attack you. The purpose of Farm Animal Day is to inform, and that is part of our goal on this campus. If you're one of the people who says "Oh, God, I know it's horrible. I can't stand to think about it. I don't want to know," just realize that every time you eat meat, you are supporting the system. Do you really want to support something so horrifying if you can avoid it? Concerned consumers these days want to know companies' hiring policies, investment patterns, and countless other measures of political and ethical views. Knowing how any company did business sometimes seems almost as important to informed buying, probably more so. The number of animals raised for food in this country is staggering. 500,000 animals are killed at a rate of one animal shot in the United States. Annually, the rate is over 100 million cows, pigs, and sheep, and 5 billion poultry birds. Over half of all agricultural land in the U.S. is used for beef production. At least 95% of the beef is federally owned, meaning that the government is a huge supporter of the industry (and thus society invests in the health of children who represent the future or rather prolonging the impending deaths of senior citizens who are terminally ill?) I pick the former. Ironically, 55% of the elderly voted for Silber in the elections.

There is nothing wrong with wanting to live in a quiet dorm if one wishes to do so. Many people wish to live in a quiet dorm here at Connecticut College, they simply request to have a room in Blackstone. This is entirely up to each individual tenant and is something people with wanting to live in a quiet dorm. However, not every dorm on campus is a quiet dorm, nor should it be. People, through some unfortunate stroke of bad luck, is located thirty-five yards across the quad from Blackstone. Plant is most definitely not a quiet dorm. Due to this fact, our neighbors across the quad have submitted numerous complaints to Campus Safety about the noise level. Our room was not contacted about the noise problems. The first time we knew there was a problem was when our Housestelley informed us that Campus Safety received another complaint concerning our room, we would be brought before J. Board.

I walked through Blackstone recently to get a feel for the place and was shocked at what I saw and heard. The first thing I saw when I entered the front door was a student running down the hall with a toy gun shooting people in the head with nerf balls. He was not being quiet. Next, I followed the sound of music down to the basement. When I rounded the corner of the music, I found that the door was closed and I could still hear Jimi Hendrix on the first floor. That was not quiet either. To top it all off, on the door to the living room, there was a note telling Blackstone residents that if any noise complaints were received by the House Council, the living room door would be closed down. That is definitely not quiet.

While the Blackstonians are making all of this noise in the quiet in the quiet room, my room is in jeopardy of being penalized because of the complaints we have gotten from Blackstone. When neither our neighbors nor our Housestelley, who lives directly above us, is bothered by the noise we are making or the music we are playing, I do not see how Blackstone residents can be bothered by it.

Obviously, there is a problem, so a resolution needs to be reached. I can suggest three possible solutions. The first is that everyone who walks through central campuses doesn't use a sound. This is impractical and impossible. The second solution is to build an entirely new quiet dorm, in a secluded area, so no one will bother them. This is also not practical for the simple fact that they are probably not going to pay for an entirely new dorm. The final solution is for the residents of Blackstone to loosen up. You live in these quiet dorms, which isn't quite quiet anyway, and we don't. A little music or noise is not going to cause you to fail out of school or lose your scholarships or anything of that sort. It is most farmers cut off the chickens' ability to move around and couple that with a "rape rack" and that will drastically reduce their costs. But what people fail to realize is that the consequences of the choices we make are going to have a profound effect on the way we live our lives. It is simply a matter of time before some people realize the horrors of what we are doing to animals in order to feed ourselves.

Best cattle are the only animals who regularly live outdoors, and that is only for a few months of their lives before they are brought into the feedlot. The fact that slaughterhouse workers have the highest rates of employee turnover and injury in the United States should serve as some indication of the nature of slaughterhouse conditions. Little care is taken of the people involved, and how much attention is likely given to ensuring a humane slaughter? We must all take care of our environment, and how much can we do to increase the rates of injury and death among animals? There are several different laws requiring more humane conditions. The United States does not apply to poultry, and most farmers are aware of that, and many people who eat other kinds of meat avoid veal. All those "Why can't this be a real calf walk?" ads have made an impact. But what people fail to realize is that other animals raised on modern factory farms aren't treated much better. Chickens live their entire lives crowded into cages so small that they can't spread their wings. Are they any better off than the real calf? The fact that they resort to cannibalism, which is not of the consequences of the choices we make.

Archbishop Tutu Preaches Hope at Brown University

by Louise Leavitt

Reverend Desmond M. Tutu, Archbishop of Cape Town, South Africa, addressed Brown University on September 26, 1990 as the inaugural speaker of that college's new Leadership and Public Service Program. The twenty-five Connecticut College students who made the trip, sponsored by UMOJA, faced a crowd of over 4,500 people waiting to enter the gymnasium. Although the building could hold only approximately 3,000 people, the line grew until the doors were opened at 7:30 p.m.

Tutu, a well known anti-apartheid activist, was once a high school teacher. After the passage of the Basia Education Act of 1957, he joined the Anglican religious order. His studies of religion took him to England for five years, but in 1967 he returned to his homeland to teach at the seminary and university. Honored as being the first black General Secretary of the South African Council of Churches in 1978, Tutu continued his struggle for equality among the black and white population. His efforts were recognized and he was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize. In 1984, he was appointed the Bishop to the position of Archbishop.

In conclusion Tutu said that sectional freedom is not going to be tolerated by the people of South Africa, because then one takes "too much time protecting it that you have no time to enjoy it."

Tutu closed by restating his dream of equality. "The only way to be human is to be black, and white. The only way to survive is to be black and white; and so we will be sending our invitations 'come celebrate South Africa's freedom.'"

As the crowd filed out, one Brown student said, "Now I feel so inspired that I want to change the world."

Cranz Lectures on the State of American Education
by Sarah Hanley

The College Voke

The Cranz Lectureship was founded in honor of Dr. Lawrence, who was chairman of the department of history, and government at the college from 1920 to 1942. The annual memorial lecture on Wednesday, September 24th, 1985, was given by Sarah Hanley, Rosemary Park professor of ancient Greek and Israeli civilizations. In his 1937 book, Education in America: Problems and Paradoxes, Cranz examined the education system with a critical eye, focusing on the impact of educational practices on society. Hanley's lecture compared societies in which every institution, as opposed to the educational system, is based on a combination of pluralistic and secular societies. Greece and Israel can be considered single holy orders. Under this type of social organization, the purpose of education is to rise to the divine; in contrast to a society such as our own, in which the classroom must be strictly secular, while the society itself encourages diversity of race and religion. Hanley summarized his thoughts on education in the West, and how it has been affected by intellectual history: "So let us try this afternoon to find an education which can accept and support the oneness and also the manyness of our society and, eventually, of the world, which will not have to sacrifice the unity to achieve the many nor sacrifice the many to achieve the unity."}

Cranz retired in 1985 after 43 years as a Connecticut College faculty member. During the 1980's, Cranz was the head of a project to catalog manuscripts. Much of the work he spent at the college before his retirement was devoted to cataloguing these manuscripts on microfilm. The microfilm resource, as well as a text version of the catalogue can be found in the college library.

Welcome to another edition of Hidden in Harris, a place where we turn ordinary food into fine cuisine. In this issue we will review everyone’s favorite part of the meal: dessert.

The Harris Ice Cream Sandwich

No, we aren’t talking about the pre-made ones in the freezer, we are talking about "The Harris Special." This great idea was sent in from freelance H.H. reporter Heather Pierce, ’91. It is very simple to make and is a joy to eat. All you need to do is scoop ice cream between two graham crackers, and voila! That’s it. Top the sandwich with chocolate fudge sauce, if you like.

Hidden in Harris

Hidden in Harris...women, men, students, and faculty. Here you will find an assortment of hidden Harris creations, from free and easy to more complex. Enjoy them all.

AppleGoop

It sounds gross, it looks mushy, but it’s delicious. The trick is choosing the right apples with Harris knowledge, and you’ll find that the rest is easy. Mix raisins, honey and granola and put in the center of the apple. Pop the concoction into the microwave (those heaven-sent machines) for about two minutes, making sure to put it in a bowl so you don’t make a mess. Let it cool and digest it! It’s sweet, gooey and relatively nutritious. Your mom would be proud.

Coffee Delight

If you need some caffeine boost to get through the Post-Dinner Laziness, this is the perfect solution. Even if you don’t really like coffee, get a steaming mug of this delight and put in a dollop of milkshake flavoring. The result is Harris version of Café Au Lait, the best delight you may ever have. Once the milkshake flavorings are next to the machine, I like the chocolate, but you have to experiment for yourself, which is the point of Hidden in Harris.

That’s all for now. If you have any suggestions or recipes, send them to The College Voice Features, Box S351. We look forward to hearing from you.

Entrepreneurs Deliver at Conn

Friday, 5:12 a.m. You’ve done it again...oblivious to the wall of the alarm, you’ve overslept. You now have eight minutes to make it from the Plex to Fanning. No problem...Grab your favorite "Absolutely Screwwed" t-shirt, gulp down a glass of Moo Juice, glance at the Times and you’re ready to go. Now without the entrepreneurial efforts of Sal Menzo, ’93, Shaye Cockderm, ’91, and Chandra Lantz, ’91, and Bryce Breen, ’92, not only would you be late, but you might be thirsty, thirsty, and uninformed.

When you open your fridge and find it well stocked with Orangina, sparkling water, and, of course, Moo juice, you can thank Mr. Moo, Shaye Cockderm and her partner Chandra Lantz. Cockderm has been involved with Moo Juice since 1989 and says that he enjoys the challenges of the business. Under his direction, Moo Juice's product line expanded to include spring water, yogurt, and various other beverages. Cockderm feels that Moo Juice is a very helpful service to the campus. Cockderm stressed that his sole motivation is not to reap large profits, but to give something back to the Conn community. As for the future, Cockderm plans to pass Moo Juice on to promising entrepreneurs and possibly join the Peace Corps.

As you are enjoying the Sunday comics during your next auspicious Harris breakfast, think of Bryce Breen. He is the man responsible for the delivery of the New York Times and the Boston Globe at Conn. With the help of four student deliverers, Breen oversees the accounting, advertising, and sales concerns of the business. Like Cockderm, Breen said the best part of running his own business is not the profits, but the enjoyment and satisfaction of the end result. After having played the roles of accountant, sales representative, and PR manager, Breen hopes to pursue a future career in marketing and advertising.

Brendan Gilmartin, a freshman, is the owner of "Consumers Clothing Company." The source of these endless t-shirts is Sal Menzo. Menzo is a new arrival to the clothing business, yet the potential for profit in the business industry has been evident for years. Many of you have probably met Menzo during his door-to-door sales calls. While he appreciates the profits of business, Menzo says he enjoys the independence and satisfaction of running his business. Menzo’s future plans include an “I Conquered ASPEN” t-shirt and Floralia boxes.

Looking into the future of the entrepreneurial world at Conn is Brendan Gilmartin, a freshman with varied experience in silk-screening. Brendan began his company, B.G. Tees, last winter and has produced several different products. His past products include jerseys for his high school soccer team, his "Late Night" t-shirts, and employee shirts for a carpet business. Brendan says that his business has become a sort of hobby, yet the potential for profit in the silk-screening business is great. In the near future, Brendan hopes to design boxes and t-shirts for clubs at Conn. Because his products come form New Hampshire, Brendan is able to sell his goods tax-free. With his past experience and his enthusiasm for the silk-screening business, Brendan should definitely become a success in his entrepreneurial efforts.

Proposed Centers Enrich Area Resources

by Susan Foner
The College Voice

Realizing the state's need for a variety of child care and family services, the Connecticut Senate began planning family resource centers in 1988. A bill creating the centers was proposed by Senator Lar- son (D-3rd District), president pro tempore of the senate, which was unanimously adopted in the senate and was then signed by Governor William O'Neill.

Currently three Family Resource Centers have been established in Connecticut. The centers statewide include, one in New London and one in Groton. The other four will be in Stamford, East Hartford, West Hartford and Ansonia.

Cecilia Woods, director of research for the Senate Majority Office, said that the Family Resource Centers are a comprehensive community of family support services, which are located in public schools across the state. Woods said, "They are a support program providing child care, and other components to the community."

Woods explained that the primary function of the centers is to provide before- and after-school care. The centers’ other services include pregnancy prevention education, GED classes, and outreach to family day care providers. One of the goals of the centers is parent education. A senate press release explains that the program is "based on Yale University professor and child development expert Dr. Edward Zigler’s "Schools of the 21st Century" concept." Connecticut was one of the first states in the nation to start the centers.

The need for the program reflects many problems in the state and in the country. Many teenage parents do not have the parenting skills they need to raise their children. Another problem, caused by the rising cost of living, is more families needing two incomes to survive. They must depend on day care for their children because no one can care for them after school. Many young parents are forced to quit school so that they can also encourage the different communities to seek corporate sponsorship. Electric Boat, United Way, Ford, and General Electric will be tapped for donations to the new local centers.

Since two centers will open in the Groton/ New London area, many opportunities will exist for members of the Connecticut College community. Students studying child development, psychology, or education may have the opportunity to observe children and to participate in different programs at the centers. There will also be many volunteer positions available to students who wish to become involved.

Senator Larson concluded, "Family Resource Centers are providing families with the necessary resources to be independent and functional in the 90's. They are needed and are a welcome addition to the New London and Groton communities."

SOUNDING THE FUTURE, a regional conference about the Long Island Sound, will be held this week at Connecticut College. This event is being co-sponsored by the Connecticut Sea Grant College Program and the Sea Grant Outreach Office.

Tuesday, October 2: Nancy Balcom from the Connecticut Sea Grant Marine Advisory Program will deliver a lecture entitled "The Long Island Sound Study: Progress and Perpectives" in the Ernst Common Room at 4:30 p.m.

Wednesday, October 3: The Department of Environmental Protection will hold an open house for the Research Vessel John Dempsey at City Pier in New London from 11:30 to 2:00 p.m.

-- Dr. William Wise, the director at the Marine Research Center at S.U.N.Y. Stony Brook, will speak on "A View From Across the Sound" at 4:30 p.m. in Ernst.

MSSC Focuses on Issue of Curriculum

by Sarah Hantley
News Editor

Focusing on a concerted effort to communicate with the Board of Trustees about concerns over the curriculum, members of the Minority Student Steering Committee (MSSC) are gearing up for the first Trustee meeting of the 1990-1991 academic year.

The committee would like to see changes in the current curriculum to reflect the cultures and histories of varied ethnicities.

Ratsya Ruangsuwana, '93, assistant to the chair of MSSC, said, "We think that in diversifying the curriculum ... we will enhance the lives of minority students on campus as well as majority students and will serve to attract more students interested in learning about other cultures."

Stressing the importance of educational preparation, Sabrina Durand, '92, chair of MSSC, said, "We realize now that ... the United States is a very diversified population." She believes that class opportunities should reflect this so that students can be prepared for life after college.

"In order to learn about people on the international front, we need to know about them on the homefront," she said.

The committee decided to focus on this one issue because it affects so many of their other concerns. Four subcommittees were formed to study the impact of curriculum and prepare for the Trustees' meeting.

The Future and Existing Curriculum subcommittee is responsible for determining the strengths and weaknesses of the college's present system, as well as comparing course offerings at other peer institutions.

According to Cristo Garcia, '92, chair of the Future and Existing Curriculum subcommittee, the members plan to use the college's Asian Studies program as a model for future curriculum possibilities. He stressed, however, that this model is not completely exemplary itself, saying "It's a model that needs work."

Nonetheless, the Asian Studies program provides a base for which the students can address the necessity of other programs and the feasibility of structured implementation.

Some long-term goals of MSSC are the development and implementation of African-American, Latino and Asian-American programs. In terms of courses currently offered reflecting different cultures, Durand said, "We would like to increase these courses and make them permanent."

The Future and Existing Curriculum subcommittee is also examining ways in which to incorporate the traditions and viewpoints of under-represented groups into already existing classes.

Striving to show the relationship between offerings and an increase in the diversity of students at the college, the Admissions and Retention subcommittee is analyzing applications, acceptance and retention rates.

Said Durand, "The big thing now is that all schools are competing for minority applicants. Before you can increase admissions, you have to have the available resources."

Ruangsuwana emphasized the effect that increased retention rates have on the applicant pool. "In order to attract more students of color, you need more students of color on campus," she said.

Members of MSSC are working closely with Judy Kingsley, the affirmative action officer and assistant to the president, to achieve the goals of the Affirmative Action subcommittee. The subcommittee would like to "diversify the curriculum, faculty and staff here at Connecticut College," said Warren Wells, '91, member of the Affirmative Action subcommittee.

According to Wells, faculty and staff are crucial to the implementation of a more diverse curriculum. "They're both inextricably bound to each other," he said.

The fourth subcommittee, Funding, is attempting to determine ways in which to raise the necessary monies to meet the goals. The subcommittee has sent a letter to the Development Office expressing their willingness to search for grants and other fiscal opportunities.

Said Durand, "We realize that the college is on a cost containment budget." She explained that the subcommittee is questioning "what functions are essential ... and what areas are open to us?"

In addition to the four subgroups, MSSC is developing a campuswide survey to study the general opinions of the college community regarding issues involving curriculum.

The members of MSSC will meet with the the Young Alumni Trustees and the Student-Trustee Liaison Committee members during the quarterly meeting on Thursday and Friday this week.

House Governors Vote for Strong Leadership

by Sarah Hantley
News Editor

The Board of House Governors, under the direction of David Strong, '92, newly elected chair and house governor of Plant, plans to combine energy, implementation of goals, as well as creativity, to establish dynamic student leadership.

Explaining his reasons for running for governor and chair, Strong said, "The governor has a lot of opportunity to direct and coordinate life in the dorm, and the chair can also help to direct and focus student life on campus."

The house governor program, initiated three years ago, places an elected governor in each dormitory to oversee funding, house council and dorm activities. Each governor sits on the Board of House Governors and on internal committees. In addition, governors hold nine positions on external committees.

Strong believes that the youth of the house governor position makes it particularly exciting and formative. He would like to see the evolving process continue and said, "The responsibility is going to increase."

One program, developed last year, which the Board of House Governors would like to strengthen and activate is the College Fellows Program. This program is designed to strengthen interaction among faculty, administrators and students.

Two to three faculty members and administrators were assigned to each dormitory in April of last year. According to Strong, this year's Board of House Governors is responsible for the positive execution of the College Fellows Program.

"This is a program that the president [Claire Gaudiani, '66] really would like to see put into effect, because ideally it will strengthen the campus as a whole ... it is up to the Board of House Governors to come up with a solid plan," said Strong.

The Board is currently establishing a committee with the assistance of George Willauer, college marshal and professor of English, to organize and facilitate communication between the fellows and the dormitory residents.

The internal committee will probably consist of five house governors and an equal number of fellows.

While Strong acknowledged that there could be a small amount of shyness when fellows and students first meet, he believes that enthusiasm for increased interaction outside of classes will help to bridge the gap.

Said Strong, "The faculty, from what Professor Willauer has told me, really want to get involved. They are not eager."

Another focus of the Board of House Governors is community outreach. According to Strong, the Board would like to solidify and formalize community involvement.

In the past, events such as the Blood Drive and the Halloween Program sponsored by COOL, have been handled by separate, individual students who have been working so hard," said Strong.

He would like the Board to establish a system for evaluating community action and maximizing resources and student participation with the projects.

Strong said, "Our school is often isolated from the public." He hopes the connection can be strengthened through the development of a more definite and informative system.

Board of House Governors meetings are held once a week and are closed to the public.

Strong explained that the reason for the confidentiality is the nature of possible discussions at the meetings. Governors should feel free to ask for guidance from the Board if problems arise in individual dormitories.

Despite the confidentiality, however, Strong plans to increase communication with the student body and college community through enthusiasm and commitments to the College Fellows program, community outreach and future Board goals.

The American Red Cross held a blood drive on Wednesday and Thursday from 11 a.m.-4 p.m. in Conn Cave. According to Chad Mead, '93, the American Red Cross representative on campus, only about 120 students gave blood this year. Approximately 100 of the pints will be usable. Mead said that because of the severe drop in number of donors, the Red Cross is considering diminishing the scale at which it operates on campus. "If more faculty and students don't get involved, we will have lost that community outreach," said Mead.

Bush Designates OVCS a National Model

direct and consequential acts of community service." The Points of Light Initiative Foundation, sponsored by Bush, recently determined the 1,000 Points of Light.

The national recognition of the programs has already brought publicity to Connecticut College. Articles addressing the Tripartite Tutorial and Mentoring programs will be published in the New York Times and the Boston Globe. Local television stations have aired stories on the recognition.

The college will receive a plaque and a commemoration directly from the president, and in October, Troadec will attend a dinner in Washington D.C. at which Bush will be speaking about mentor programs.

According to Troadec, while no monetary award is associated with the title, the status will be used to help maximize fund-raising for the OVCS initiatives.

Troadec placed emphasis on the boost such recognition could give to community service in the New London area. She said, "This gives great recognition to the school. It recognizes all the Connecticut College students devoted to service." She also believes that the recognition by Bush will reinforce the idea that "college students are seriously concerned about social problems in the community. The no-generation gap... it was inadequate."

This year, Culbertson and the development staff are working on a much more "personalized and compelling" strategy which includes asking parents to help "close the gap" between the approximately $27,000 it costs to educate a student at Connecticut College and the $20,000 tuition fee.

"Our competition is generating up to $300,000 more than we are in the area of community service. We should be making that much too," said Culbertson.

Kristen Lambert, executive director of the alumni association, is pleased with this year's alumni giving. "The Alumni Annual Giving Program chaired by Susan Cone-Doran, '67, works jointly with Development. The Alumni Association helps in an intangible way by making alumni feel good about the college through events such as homecoming," she explained.

Lambert also believes the college has a very valuable asset in Gandiani and her fundraising strategies. "He '93 is raising friends' giving are up 19 percent, and alumni contributions saw a 45 percent increase. The only source to decrease was parents' giving, which fell an 35 percent.

When asked to account for the reduction in parents' giving, Culbertson said, "I don't think we designated this as a very good parent's program last year... [it was] inadequate."

This "good feeling" toward the college seems to be contagious, since four out of five of the cent of contributions increased from the previous fiscal year. Foundation giving soared 145 percent, friends' giving increased 90 percent, corporate giving went up 19 percent, and alumni contributions saw a 45 percent increase. The only source to decrease was parents' giving, which fell an 35 percent.

According to Lambert, the committee is taking a more aggressive stance on pursuing endowment. This year the college received $2.2 million, which is "huge for us," and we are looking to triple the current total to $120 million," said Lambert. "It will take time but we are taking initiative."

Right now, only 40 percent of the college's alumni contribute. The committee's goal is to reach 50 percent. The new director of the Annual Fund to be hired next week "will really be in charge of that," said Culbertson.

Increase of 47 Percent
College Examines Cable Television Options

by Chris McDaniel
Associate News Editor

While not all people would consider cable television a fundamental right, some Connecticut College students have expressed the desire to see cable installed on campus.

According to Tom Makofske, director of computer operations, the most likely situation to develop on campus in the near future would be the installation of cable television in the dormitory lounges; however, the issues of payment, distribution, and programming alternatives remain obstacles.

Makofske said that all dormitory rooms are now wired for cable television, but the campus does not have the electronics necessary to actually receive the cable transmissions.

The reason that these electronics were not put in place originally, said Makofske, is "that they were never bid for; they are very expensive."

Makofske discussed three basic possibilities for cable television installation on campus. One would be to put in basic cable television, which would entail submitting a bid to Eastern Connecticut Cable and asking them to install cable in dormitory common rooms.

The second option would be to have cable television in individual dorm rooms, again purchased from Eastern Connecticut Cable. They would "bring in the feed... and wire the campus for it," said Makofske. Students would be billed accordingly.

The third alternative would be for the college to install "our own head-ends, collect our own programming, use our own satellites, and distribute it over the college's already-existing fiber optics network."

"We like that plan a lot because the fiber optic gives you a lot of room for growth, and it doesn't get you involved with lightning and fine tuning problems," said Makofske.

While there are academic concerns as to whether cable television should be offered to individual students, Makofske said, there is a "strong push to use these technologies as part of the curriculum... There is a lot of potential for cable television to have a good deal of academic programming, such as twenty-four hour language programming, as well as programming on campus."

With a campus video system, a speaker could lecture at Palmer Auditorium, while a student hooked into cable could watch the speech in his room. This calls for two-way video and would require campus production facilities as well as transmission and reception facilities.

If the college owned the system, it would be able to control its own programming and possibly offer the service for less than Connecticut Cable. That company charges approximately eighteen dollars per month.

Clair Gauvain, '96, president of the college, has already asked Makofske to determine the cost of providing standard cable television service in the dormitory lounges on campus. He estimates the cost to be five thousand dollars per year.

Makofske said, the question, "who is going to pay for the bill; will it be SGA, will the individual dorms pay for it, or will the college absorb it?" has yet to be answered.

If this question were to be answered soon and Eastern Connecticut Cable agreed to wire the living rooms only, Makofske believes that cable television could be in the lounges before next semester.

If the college were to put in its own distribution system, which would be carried on the existing fiber optics on campus, figures are estimated at $150,000 to $200,000. If the campus were to add the aforementioned two-way video, that would add another $30,000 to $50,000 to the estimated cost. If the college were to expand to include production facilities or a television station that would probably add half a million to two million dollars depending on its sophistication.

With the option of basic services provided to each room, Makofske said 70 percent of the campus would need to subscribe for the college to break even, but costs would be significantly less than those charged by Eastern Connecticut Cable.

$30,000.00 PER MONTH EVERY MONTH!

Dear Friend:

I challenge you to join me in a totally "UNIQUE" Money-Making venture that could be the start of the rest of your life. I know how to begin earning $30,000.00 per month, even if you own nothing more than $50.00! Challenge me! I have laid out this plan in great detail for you, should you choose to join and see if by doing so you could improve your life. I have written a 67 year old woman in Florida who purchased my manual last month and she made over $32,000.00. You could be next! Last month I made $53,213.75 just by working 12 hours per week. This month I expect to earn over $35,000.00 and take a 3 week vacation in Hawaii. This program has never been offered before and I will not offer it again. You may know it exists. Within 30 days you can do the same. As valid now as it was 2 years ago, while working a full time job. I am about to offer what no one else can! Believe me, I now own my own home in the town of Bologna. This program has never been offered to any one before and I will not offer it again. You will not have to make a larger investment required. I was able to purchase that special home for your family and much more are now possible for you to achieve. Imagine, with the trend of the times, you can do the same. I will now own my own home in the town of Bologna. I have run my own business. I have never been able to run a program so easy to operate as yours. Believe me I have seen for numerous to call get rich schemes. None of them worked and they just cost me money. I started your program for less than $10.00 and I now earn over $24,500.00 per month. Thank you so much.

In the Corner this week:
HOT FLUFF: (or seemingly dumb movies that you just may actually want to consider renting.)

BAD / DEAD: By DAWN (R)

This is what a disgusting, gory and satanic movie should be: absolutely hilarious! Have you ever watched those chainsaw and slashers films, or those goofy demonic possession movies, and wondered how the creators could take them so seriously?

Well, so did director/cowriter Sam Raimi, who managed to create a perfect horror farce for years to come. The acting and plot lines (and various appendages) all hang by a thread, but it is too much fun watching in sheer disbelief as unseen forces chase people around a cabin, suck people into trees (the back is worse than the blue), bend bridges, and create multitudes of dry ice. Bruce Campbell, the lead actor, goes through more hell in this movie than you do in a one day week, just watch it for the scene in which Campbell's hand is possessed (that's right), and he loses a finger. It is a kitchen. Shoo horror genius.

THE BLOB, 1988 (R)

"With this chemical weapon technology we will be ten years ahead of the Russians," the army commander says, an old man's face is being consumed by layer on layer. Is this terrifying plot jib to an evil alien being or is it produced by mankind?

Going beyond the typical grueso-some horror movie, the question of the nature of evil is raised. It is a choice, outside force acting upon our world, or is evil a part of every person's soul? Kevin Dillon (Rip Torn's brother) plays the token non-conformist-rebel (every town has one) who knows the secret of the intelligent blob that is destroying his quiet community and seems to know about the nature of this particular evil.

The screenplay is weak. It is simple. But that does not seem so matter, as the action and special effects carry the film. You will be impressed by the quaintness of Kevin's acting. He even has a large amount of acne on his neck. Watch this one. You will never go into a phone booth again.

SPACEBALLS (PG)

Mel Brooks delights movie-goers once again by spoofing every science fiction movie from the Wizard of Oz to The Return of the Jedi. All the stars are here: Rick Moranis is the loud-breathing Dark Helmet, Tori Cooley as the Mog ("Hi, I'm Mog. Part man, part dog. I'm my own best friend") and Mel himself playing about seven minor roles.

The humor is simple and continuous. The psychological term for this is flooding. If the film bomards the viewer with a hundred jokes a minute, the laws of proba-dibility dictate that at least twenty five percent of them will be funny.

We laughed a lot, although most of what we heard did seem far more amusing. Must have been something in his Chicken a la King.

Terms of Endearment. Her performance in that movie fares no better nor worse. Because her voice was the daughter character played by Deborah Winger, MacLaine's portrayal was more effective. Winger is the daughter character. MacLaine is loud. The most striking contrast exists in the portrayal of the two character's additions. MacLaine, a washed-up, deranged actress, is an alcoholic, while Streep, her screen daughter, is a drug addict. Streep's problem looms over her character throughout the entire movie despite the absence of drugs on screen. MacLaine's problem is forgettable unless she guzzles down a conspicuous drink while spouting lines like "Tasty drink socially!"

In the first week of softball, the Women's Softball Club nipped Lazrus 6-5 and ran for 4 of their 5 hits. Melissa Speed, '92, had two hits for the winners. Melissa Parker, '92, had 3 hits, while DaveLinten, '92, and Paul Huppin, '93, each homered for Lazrus. In other "non-action," Blackstone, Windham, and Serendipity won by forfeit.

This week on the gridiron, the question that seemed to be foremost on everyone's mind was, "just who are these Moondogs?" On Sunday, they easily rolled over the KBees (who but who hasn't 2-0). QB sensation Steve Poti, '91, threw 4 TD passes, 2 going to Dan Dwyer, '92, and one to his favorite target Co-ley "Stutter Step" Cassidy, '92. A surprisingly well rounded squad, the Moondogs saw 2 of their TD's scored by lineman Chris "Did I do that?" Perkins, '92, and a slammed down George "Cold Cockeyed" Newcomb, '92. It was an especially proud moment for Newcomb as his mother (of "the stock out") father was present to witness him dancing down the sideline and into the end zone.

In "non-action" that day, David was victorious over Dry Season by forfeit. Tuesday saw another surprising win as Shalom Y's all just barely squeaked by the KBees 5-0. A quick look for you statisticians, the points against the KBees in the last two games is a respectable 8-5-0, keep up the good work fellas. The only bright spot for the KBees in the past two games is a solo sack by Brian "rolling in it" Hill, '94, Standout QB Lain Montauho, '94, threw for 5 TD's and Debo Adegbile, '91, caught and ran for 4 of them to lead Shalom Y's All to their third victory. Shalom Y's All has outscored their opponents by a staggering 120-0 over the past 3 games. Tuesday saw also a close battle between EM Airlines and SC with SC pulling off the victory 21-12. Nick Swan, '94, Dave Barron, '94, and Matt Shea, '93, each had a touchdown for SC. For EM Airlines Luke "Big Dawg" Beauty, '93, came up with his first TD of the season as did Tim "The Animal" Armstrong, '91.

In a six-side soccer action this week Mulligan's hastily defeated ACP 6-2. Lumkile Mkwalvo, '94, led Mulligan's with 3 goals, while John Alegranzi, '91, assisted for 3. Also that day, Aspen squeaked by Plant 1-0 with Ravi Maria, '94, scoring the goal. Aspen continued their winning ways on Monday as they rolled over Physical Plant 5-0. It appears that Physical Plant is unable to make things work on the field as well. In Monday's second game EM Airlines defeated Larrabee 3-1. Jay Schinderman, '92, Brooks Brown, '91, and Andrew Montaine, '94, each tallied for one, while Liz "Caribnya" Venery, '94, added an assist to give the Airlines the win. In Wednesday's action, Adirondack Fred handed ACP their second defeat of the week by a score of 3-0. Mark Ockert, '92, and Dan Calhoun, '92, each tallied for Adirondack Fred. The second game of that day saw a tough battle between The Team and The Cupcakes, with The Team emerging victorious 2-1. Peter Francia, '93, and Dave Buffum, '92, each scored a goal to lead The Team.

Field Hockey Tie Sustains Undefeated Record

The women's field hockey team is still undefeated, but their winning streak came to an end this week as they tied Southern Conn. 1-1 after two overtime periods.

Southern Conn. opened the scoring late in the first half, as Christa Cole put in a feed from Pam Morgan to give Southern a 1-0 lead. The first period ended with the same score. But the Camels showed a lot of heart, coming back to tie the contest early in the second period. Jill Dellosratto tripped on the powerful Southern attack completely. They made six saves each. Dellosratto leads the team in scoring with four points and has been a key to the squad's success so far. Tyson and Carter Wood, '93, are close behind Dellosratto with three each points. The Camels have eight games remaining on the season, with five coming at home on Dawley Field. The next game for the blue and white is Sunday, September 30 when they face off against Wellesley at Wellesley. They return to Dawley Field on Thursday, October 4 to host Smith, then play again at home on Saturday, October 6 against Amherst. As a special bonus to fans, a rules sheet will be handed out along with the program to explain the numerous penalty whistles in the game.

Runners Excel at Invitational
by John Fbcbcr
IbeCoeUeVoke
The men's and women's cross country teams both took second place at the Connecticut College Cross Country Invitational. Southern Massachusetts took first place in both men's and women's, but Conn was not far behind.

In the men's 8000 meters race, SMU had 22 points, while Conn followed with 44 points for second place. Conn's number one finisher was Andrew Builder, '91, who placed third overall, just 40 seconds behind the number one finisher David Kraft from SMU, with a time of 28:42. Coach Jim Butler was impressed with Builder's performance. "Andrew ran a very good race today. He came in just behind the number one and number two runners from SMU and they are ranked number one in New England. He really says something." Builder's second place finish off with a strong meet." The men's team is looking for a possible ranking in New England after their strong showing. Coach Butler explained, "We came in very close time split between Conn's first and fifth runners. "Our one-five split was very strong. We were aiming for 1:30 and the actual splits was 1:32. We want to get that down around 1:00 by the end of the season, so our three, four and five runners have to cut their scores a little more. But this was a great showing for today. I'm very happy with the way the whole team ran today."

Because of the construction behind the Athletic Center, this was the last time the existing course will be run in competition. The course will be altered next year. Dave Heively, '91, commented, "This is a great way for us to go out here at home. This is the fourth year that I've run this course and I've got a lot of memories of it. It's nice to finish off with a strong meet." Builder's number one finisher was Andrew Builder, '91, who was Andrew Builder, '91, who

In the AL CY Young race, incredibly, there are five viable candidates to take the title. Roger Clemens: 20-6 1.98 ERA. Dob Welch: 26-6 3.00 ERA. Dave Stieb: 12-10 2.58 ERA (fourth straight twenty win season). Bobby Thig- pon: 54 saves (major league record) 1.94 ERA. Dennis Eckersley: 45 saves 0.64 ERA. Dob and Pops's theory: Give Welch the Cy Young and give Clemens the MVP provided that the Sox win the AL East. Our hats off to George Brett who at the age of 37 is on the road to winning another AL Batting Title which would give him one in each of the last three decades.

Monday Night Pick
Last week: Jets plus one and a half versus the Bills. Final Score: Bills 30, Jets 7. Dob and Pops jumped on the Jets bandwagon too soon. Record: 1-2. This week: The offensively powered Bengals travel into the raucous Seattle Kingdome to take on the hapless Seahawks. The Bengals are favored by two. One of an absolute steal. Dob and Pops have been impressed with the Bengals since the end of last season even though they only finished 8-8. This is the AFC's best chance in XXV. The Hawks will play them close early, but in the end, the Bengals will overwhelm the Hawks and their crowd.

Farzin Azarm Goal Watch
UPDATE: At approximately 2:33 p.m. EST on Sunday, Sept. 30, Farzin Azarm mercifully ended his Games Scoreless Streak at 36 games. Our source in Washington, Dan Rather, reported mass hysteria and riots in the streets of Tehran last Sunday as unruly crowds chanted "Azarm, Azarm!" throughout the night. It has been a good week for Azarm as he also inked a $1.2 million sponsorship deal with Gnder's Footwear in the Crystal Mall for his trademark earing.

Miscellaneous
There is an individual on Morrison's second floor who was aware that there is an NFL franchise in Tampa Bay. Dob and Pops refused to disclose the name of this man for fear of his life. Henceforth, we will refer only to this man as Charles Taurus. The worst city for sports in North America has undoubtedly got to be Atlanta, which boasts the powerful trio of the Braves, Falcons, and Hawks. Bumper stickers have been seen in the greater Atlanta metropolitan area that proclaim: "Go Braves (and take the Falcons with you)." Women's Soccer Humiliates Wesleyan

By Mark O'Keefe
The College Voice

The Conn College women's soccer team brought a 3-0-1 record into last Tuesday's match against the 0-2 Wesleyan Cardinals.

The Camels thoroughly outplayed the Cardinals in the first half. Experience was a key factor as Coach Carter controlled the ball with adept passing, while the young Wesleyan team, with only three seniors, helplessly tried to stave off the Camel onslaught. The first goal came nine minutes into the game, when co-captain Marty Davis, '91, picked up a Wesleyan defender's mistake and scooped a shot right at the Wesleyan goalie. There was so much steam on the shot that it bounced right off the goalie's hands and into the net.

The Camels continued their flawless play, which resulted in another goal six minutes later. Junior midfielder Jen Ciotti, starting for the injured Caroline Pool, '91, passed to Kristen Supko, '92, who took the pass, dribbled past three Wesleyan players, including a beautiful nutmeg through the legs of the final defender, to go in uncontested on the goal.

Coach Ken Kline soon pulled all of his starters with the exception of goalkeeper Eva Cahalan, '91, but the Camels' relentless attack was unabated. The third goal of the half came with only a minute left. Kate Greco, '94, gathered a pass from Jen Leocard, '93, and retracted a deep shot past the helpless Wesleyan goalie. Conn freshmen have provided an important part of this year's team, as both Crissy Heywood and Marrie Sher, have moved into the starting lineup.

While the Conn attack was in full gear, the defense proved stifling. Wesleyan was outshot 26-3. Led by co-captain Tracy Leaverworth, '91, Marie Patterson, '91, Supko and Heywood, the Camels defused any potential threat. The Wesleyan offense was unable to find any cracks in the Conn defense and any

On Wednesday the Camels beat the Coast Guard Academy 3-1 but lost a tough 3-2 double-overtime decision to Wesleyan on Sunday. Both matches were graced by large crowds of Conn fans who were excited at the prospects of the Camels' post-season play.

The boys next door ventured across Mohegan Avenue on Wednesday to give the Camels a tough match. The Coasties struck early in the first half by scoring on a rebound after an initial save by Camel goalkeeper Lou Castillo, '92. At the half the Coasties led 1-0 but the second half was Conn's. Within the span of two minutes, Xolani Zungu, '93, scored two goals to put the Camels ahead for good. The first goal was off a throw-in by Rich "Tubby" Carter, '92, which was headed in by Zungu. The winning goal came a minute later when a loose ball in front of the Coast Guard goal was kicked in by Zungu. The winning goal came a minute later when a loose ball in front of the Coast Guard goal found the net.

On Sunday, before a huge crowd surrounding Harkness Green, Conn hosted the Wesleyan Cardinals. The Camels came out
