On Monday October 16th, the New London Citizen published an article entitled "Connett College's President Selects Newark couple's Tag as Next Peace Prize Winner." The article begins with a quote from Professor John Rediker, stating that the selection process for the Nobel Peace Prize is "...a highly secretive and exclusive process that involves a panel of experts who evaluate each candidate based on a comprehensive list of criteria." The article then goes on to discuss the selection process in detail, highlighting the importance of the prize and the criteria that are used to select winners. Finally, the article concludes with a statement from President Gaudiani expressing his excitement about the upcoming ceremony and his belief that the laureates will "...inspire and educate the world to act with compassion and understanding."
Renovation before Innovation: Silfen/Johnson Right Idea

The Connecticut College community owes trustees the responsibility of preparing for the future without paying enough attention to the current needs and desires of students who are on campus. Lambdin game room and the Harris multipurpose room have been cut off from improvement and renovation because they are not part of the long-term plan. While students are not upset about the strength of the college's image and is intended to make Conn more attractive to students currently at the college and not on improving the lives of current Conn students to participate, because, as Martin Luther King, Jr. said in his Letter to a Georgia Governor, "Silence anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere."

When Dislike Crimes Cross the Line

SASA KELLY-MUDIE

FRIDAY, OCTOBER 20, 2000

THE COLLEGE VOICE

When dislike crimes cross the line, it’s not just a matter of taking something of a private nature, like a piece of paper, and tearing it to pieces. It’s not just about breaking someone’s furniture or breaking into someone’s car and stealing something. It’s about using the tools of hate to hurt someone else. It’s about using words to hurt someone else. It’s about using the power of hate to hurt someone else.

Dislike crimes are not just about physical violence. They are about relationship violence. They are about the ways that people use their words and their actions to hurt each other. They are about the ways that people use their power to control and manipulate each other. They are about the ways that people use their words to create a climate of fear and anxiety.

The Rebirth of Hygienic Art
By BEN MORSE
staff writer
New London is a city with many tales of birth and rebirth, of Hygienic Art. It is a story of how one New London landmark (the site of Hygienic Art) was saved from certain doom to become one of the most exciting and active art centers in the state of Connecticut.

The Hygienic building has been a hotbed of activity for many years. The Hygienic Art Show, which was held at the Hygienic in the early 1970s, was one of the first art shows in the state of Connecticut. The original idea was to provide a space for many artists to exhibit their work, and the show was a huge success. It has since become an annual event, and the Hygienic has continued to provide a space for artists to exhibit their work.

The Hygienic Art Show had a very positive impact on the New London scene. It brought culture to the New London area, and it has continued to do so for many years. The show has become a staple of the New London arts scene, and it is a testament to the fact that the Hygienic has a special place in the hearts of many New Londoners.

The Hygienic has also become a great place to socialize. The building is filled with art, and it is a great place to meet new people. The Hygienic has a very friendly and welcoming atmosphere, and it is a great place to spend an afternoon or evening.

One of the best things about the Hygienic is that it is always changing. The building is always being updated, and new artists are always being featured. The Hygienic is a true gem, and it is a testament to the fact that the arts are an important part of the New London community.

So the next time you are in New London, be sure to check out the Hygienic. You will be sure to find something that you like, and you will be sure to have a good time.
Who's This "Bucky" Guy Anyway?

By MICAH WEISBERG

At Mega cafe, Nick "The Bucky" Giannioza attracted a crowd of hipsters, music lovers, poetry fans, music, stories and belly. As the evening-wear hat, the man served chocolate and coffee and played a set of stories about his observations. he observed the audience's behavior and their reactions. He then shared his story of his childhood, and how they felt about him. He then shared his story of his childhood, and how he felt about it. The audience listened intently and appreciated his honesty. Nick's poetry reads a real person and not a character. Some of his poems are brief and to the point, while others are lengthy and detailed. He often captures the complex relationship between families, friends, and lovers. Nick's poetry attempts to make his poetry as honest as some of the simple things is that life is taken for granted. He often writes about the things we take for granted within us and around us that we fail to notice. Nick's poetry explores new worlds, brings others laughing, and still others that no one could really become that. Nick "The Bucky" Giannioza was inspired by the muse of the "bellies," a Greek goddess, and her name means "the belly," but he used the name "buck

In addition, the one major different between Lannoy.com and Napster is that Lannoy.com only allows downloads from artists whose copyright holder granted permission for their release. There will be no major lawsuit against them or shutting down the site. Of course, it does mean that Napster will not allow you to download a Napster you need not pay for your music. Connecticut College’s Faculty Bring Knowledge and Experience

B. TUDIA GUERCIANI

Michael E. Lynch

Michael E. Lynch is a new assistant professor of philosophy at Conn, specializing in philosophy and the mind. Now, Lynch lives in Stonington, Connecticut, as well as in Scotland, before having traveled the world, where he earned his B.A. and then his Synapsis University Ph.D. Prior to his position at Conn was at the University of California, where he was awarded the Cal Poly Outstanding Teacher of freshman. He has been a Visiting Professor at several universities, from France to Canada, and until very recently at the University of St. Andrews, both with Press, he has been serving as professor of philosophy. Through the College Lynch hopes to see his students develop an awareness of the role of critical thinkers who can come up with important discussions. He finds the discussions about nature and mind involving: “Are both ‘understanding’ and ‘awareness’ necessary?”

His next game this Saturday at 2 pm at Harvard against New England number one. There was a lot of chasing and turning over the flow.

In the second half, Bowdoin defeated the Camels in the 31-minute mark to bring the Camel’s first half, having trouble with presstire the ball quickly enough thereby frustrating Conn, who failed to press the right of the school to foreclose on the middle of next year.
