ENDOWMENT RETURNS ENCOURAGING.

On Thanksgiving Day, President Marshall made an announcement concerning the status of the Endowment Fund as determined by the students. He left us with the impression that the vital thing is not the rather modest sum of $14,900, which has come into the treasury of the College since June 4th, but the spirit of giving that it has stimulated. The donation is in each car.

Miss Mary Elizabeth Barnicle is completing her thesis for her Doctorate at Bryn Mawr this year.

1. A demonstration of the faith of the College itself in itself.
2. A demonstration of the capacity of the students and faculty to raise money in honorable and dignified ways without conducting a dramatic, specialized and highly organized and expensive campaign. The $14,900 represents specific returns from only part of the student body and faculty; others are still working on their quotas, its being understood that the time has been indefinitely extended.

This demonstration of loyalty and ability is a direct and forcible challenge to the College becomes a basis for urging a one hundred per cent contribution by all students, faculty and officers of the College, so that when that is accomplished we shall be able to go to the public at large to help us after we have already done it all in our power first.

"COLLEGE LIFE AND FRIENDSHIPS," TOPIC OF DR. HANNAH MORRIS.

SILVER BAY LEADER WILL SPEAK TONIGHT.

Dr. Hannah Morris, head of the Medical Bureau in the Central Y. W. C. A., in New York City, will give an informal talk under the auspices of the Student Relief Drive Committee tonight at 7 o'clock. She was one of the most interesting leaders at Silver Bay last summer, her charming personality made her extremely popular. It is a tradition of the College that every college represented there adopts one speaker definitely to be heard by Miss Chidsey. Dr. Morris was the chosen to bring good luck to C. C.

She will talk on matters relating directly to college life, such as campus friendships; according to above, it would be greatly to the interest of every student to hear her. Special purpose in coming here is to help the girls in their life at college; for this reason she is glad to be here.

DELIGHTFULLY INTIMATE TALK ON WILLIAM DEAN HOWELLS.

WHAT'S IN A NAME? EVEN IF IT IS WURZEL-FLUMMERY.

Dr. Hannah Morris will speak tonight.

Laura Lawrence, Marlene, Mr. Brooks, the old servant Hannah, and old Aunt March vie with the four little women in capturing the laughter and tears of the audience.

The club members take this opportunity to raise money to send a girl to Connecticut College next year. The college faculty is represented in the character of T. T. Garnet Lawrence, which is taken by Miss Lovell. Cast be as follows: Miss Vanlince Jo, Miss Hamilton Amy, Miss Chidsey Amy, Miss Hamilton Amy, Miss Chidsey

"BULLETIN BOARD BLUES."

Our old friend the Bulletin Board is again clamoring for attention. This was, and is not so very long ago either, when this "information bureau" of our varied college life in orderly classes with proper headings and with papers of a definite site. But now the headlines, which used to mark off sections or topics of classes of notices, are gone, covered with posters or pictures which crowd the class notices down into the lower or less prominent space on the Board. The uniform papers are replaced by papers of many sizes, ranging from three inches to two feet in length. To be sure, a placard stands out from the center of the Board informing all that no paper should be used except that provided, and that every notice must be dated. You look for "Ranks of the Blind." Finally, if we find only a weak string dangling like a fishline on one side and a similar weak string dangling on the other side, this one has been crossed with a long pencil having no point. The next columns have changed to a promiscuous array of notices without regard for order. Why cannot the adornment and pictures occupy an allotted section at some less conspicuous place on the Board, leaving the places of honor for more important items? Do we need the tangled array of rules and the evil effects, for it not only causes one to overlook important notices, but it obscures, also, a waste of time and space. Finally, it is liable to give the outside a boring impression of the war in which Connecticut College does things.

SIMMONS CONFERENCE SHOWS DIVERSITY OF RULES.

INTERESTING CONTRAST IN SYSTEMS.

1. Four colleges have immediate expulsion for smoking.

2. Several colleges have compulsory chapel and vespers.

3. All college women have thought the matter worthy of consideration, we, too, might start a little, "personally interested," to get an investigation into the regions of our own consciousness to see whether we, as young persons, are blind to the existing facts of life. If we walk from one class-room and into another with no slightest effort to discover the relation of the lectures either to one another or to life, there is a possibility that we are fulfilling the conditions of blindness.

Again, if we daily wander through the Library and never stop to glance at the "Ranks of the Blind." Finally, if we remain totally unaware of the fact that we are still subscribing to a state of investigation into the regions of our own consciousness to see whether we, as young persons, are blind to the existing facts of life. If we walk from one class-room and into another with no slightest effort to discover the relation of the lectures either to one another or to life, there is a possibility that we are fulfilling the conditions of blindness.

AERIAL WARFARE. Aerial warfare and chemical gas destruction are not, consequently, their possibilities are enormous. The Hughes program proposed that within three years after the acceptance of the program, the three principal navies of the world would number, in capital ships: United States 16; Great Britain 22; Japan 11. Recent developments at the Washington conference have placed the rivalry of the navies at 21 and 6. Japan has made a strong protest for her radio to be increased. The anonymous Heart papers that the Hughes program is unconstitutional, the New York World replies that "for more than 160 years the naval strength of the United States on the Great Lakes has been limited by a treaty, regardless of the constitutional objections.

Next to the proposition by Hughes for disarmament, perhaps the most important event at the Washington Conference was the announcement by Dr. Sun, China's representative, of Ten Points, indicating her attitude in foreign and domestic affairs. China has been led to believe from Dr. Sun that China does not consider her territory to be bounded by the Great Wall, but to include Shantung, Mongolia, Manchuria and Tibet. She calls for self-government; for the abolition of extra-territorial rights; for the evacuation of foreign treaty rights; for the protection of Chinese commerce; for a constitutional government; for the independence of her diplomatic representatives; and for the abolition of the extralegal and illegal operations of foreign soldiers in China. A contributor to the Constantino Napoleonic system in France, and the Constantine, the greatest international city in the world ever, was the greatest commercial city of the world, and as it does at the gateway of two continents and at the union of two great seas, its possibilities are limitless. Under a neutral, but stable government and as the seat of the League of Nations, it should itself become one of the most important factors in preserving the peaceful stability of the world."

EXCHANGES.

Goucher—This college firmly established a cherished tradition when it held its third annual Thanksgiving Day Dinner in the Goucher Auditorium on November 22. The guests were given by the faculty, and by the oldest and youngest daughters of the so-called "Goucher Family."

Princess Taisiana, the famous American Indian mezzo-Soprano, and Charles Goucher Cadman, composer and pianist, appeared in their All-American Program of music and songs in the Goucher Auditorium on November 22.

Bryn Mawr—The Sophomore class very successfully presented to the class of 1925, University of Pennsylvania, and Shaw's "Androcles and the Lion." Mrs. Amelia McCudden, the British war-mother who came to America to assist in the burial of the unknown soldier on November 11, visited Bryn Mawr. While there, Mrs. McCudden planted a tree on the campus.

Wheaton School—Final exams are a thing of the past at Wheaton School. The Wheaton School of the University of Pennsylvania. Dean Johnson believes that using the best method, the best-ordered class work rather than in preparing for exams. Two and a half weeks before the exam. The second will be saved in more profitable knowledge can be gained by students. From the Radcliffe News.

FOG.

I sit by the fire and dry my hair.

I sit by the fire and dry my hair in all the comfort and quiet of home. But a thick, damp cloud hides the waters where the men of the sea and ships must roam.

I sit by the fire and dry my hair,

And think of your eyes with their haunting pain.

Oh, to be shut away from them in the danger, the fog, and the path-taking rain.

LOCAL CUSTOMS.

The very best way to discover a local custom is to disregard it, unintentionally or otherwise. You move into a new neighborhood, you clean house on Thursday. The neighbors hear the whirr of the vacuum, they see the floor mop waved madly from a rear window; by these signs they know you are house cleaning. But they cannot believe it, cannot imagine such a thing possible, cleaning on Thursday. That afternoon they send a delegation to call. She comes into your brown living room, all shining and bright with warmth, and stands, ruminating over the inexplicable custom.

"Having guests from the city? Saw you cleaning today. Look all spic-and-span aren't you?" you assure her that you are not having any guests, that you merely added a little vacuum sweeping and floor-waxing to your usual routine. She looked puzzled; she asserted weakly, "But it was cleaning," and went away.

The neighborhood buzzed its disapproval over the telephone, at its dinner table; the neighbors turned to each other, to humor those moreattractive.

Then Saturday came and the village cleaned. It put its rugs on the lawn; its gardeners swept them once up, once down on the right. It pulled up its drapery and opened the curtains wide. It scrubbed its cellar stairs, its kitchen, its refrigerators. It "washed down" the tiles in the bath room; it wiped the dust from the electric light bulbs; it brought forth the ancestral silver and polished it bright with paste bought at the annual church fair, for the aid of the Missionary Society. It sent the children out to "tidy up" the yards for Sunday. It ate its brown bread, its beans with pork; its apple sauce and crackers; it bathed and went to church.

Sunday morning, coming down their clean steps, in their clean clothes, from their clean homes, they glanced disdainfully at you—you the heretic, who had presumed to clean on a fixed day, and such a cleaning—merely a frantie rush of an electric cleaner, thru' the house, a little dusting, all finished! Hump!

You live there longer; you learn more. People make calls, formal calls, on newcomers; you are expected to serve refreshments, in customary.

But the kind of refreshments makes all the difference in the world—or the village. You must not, you find by experience, serve anything to drink, save lemonade or home-made rice beer; the men may look longingly; but the women raise eyebrows, purse lips and assure you that "they don't drink." You shrink before their eyes and bring out grape juice.

Then, too, after "May Storms," comes housecleaning. You, a noble soul, look on with dismay while they "whiz" through the house. They use the house as a base of operations: they sweep it, clean steps, in their clean clothes, serve refreshments, in their clean clothes, sit in deep fireside chairs built for comfort, and sleep in unbroken sleep with the curtains drawn and the lights out. They proudly call it "Lazy.

They meet you in town, flinging a remark about "House cleaning" at you as they run to the store for more paint or scrubbing powder or canned tongue. You sit at home and read in absolute complacency. Then, as the entire neighborhood in unison, a suspicion enters your mind. "Ought you not house clean, too?" But your attic is almost bare; your cellar is always clean; and you have the curtains lowered when they begin to look rumpled. The suspicion grows; you are getting visibly worried. You search for a ladder and a can of white paint. You must cover your house, clean.

Nov. 30, Dean Nye spoke on the College at the Endfield Woman's Club of Thompsonville.

The Christmas party this year will be held on Dec. 14, on account of the concert on Dec. 15. Mary Snodgrass has charge of the dramatics for the evening, and in addition, suitable musical numbers are being arranged.

Miss Lovell is the only faculty representative in the play Little Women, which is to be given by the A. S. A. of New London. She is to take the part of Grandfather Laurence, and as we have already seen her as the elderly gentleman in "The Garter Boys" and know how well she did, we are assured that the play, as far as she is concerned, will be a success.

Evelene Taylor '21, is trying Department Store work at Lord & Taylor's in New York City during the Christmas holidays.

A QUESTION.

Without a name lies darkness,
The black night reaching long groping arms
Into the crevices.

Within, soft firelight flickers on the walls.
A man laughs low, a woman croons.
A woe had knees to keep his evening prayer.

Will the black shadows shrink without
Or must they enter here?

TAIL LIGHTS.

Rivalry is keen now, in the matter of raising individual quotas for undergraduates. If it isn't hair-nets,与其 wait—or wool. We suggest that the male members of our campus community may reap large financial benefits by dispensing with hair cuts for a time. The charming effect produced would considerably enhance the dignity of their office.

The Crown certainly rolled in the streets last week.

At 8:25 a.m., one day last week, every class in New London Hall sat spellbound while the pointers of the large clocks sped madly around the dials in a frantic effort to make up for lost time.

And besides it is said that Dr. Lath is prepared to exhibit even more speed than he has shown on previous occasions, and that Miss Lovell has developed a remarkable capacity for kicking goals.
