Counseling Services Accredited

By CHRIS BUONO/NENTR "I THE INTERNATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF COUNSELING SERVICES (IACS) accredit Connecticut College's Counseling Services, recognizing that the Connecticut College has met the necessary standards required by this elite agency.

The IACS, a non-profit organization, was formed to assess and improve the professional development of counseling services in the United States, Canada, Australia, mainly by establishing and encouraging high standards of professional competence, and by making other efforts to foster communication between counseling centers, as well as to develop protection of the public, which is a function which might improve its situation. The IACS has outlined rigid, specific standards to be met by a given organization in order to receive such accredited status.

Connecticut College is currently the only institution for higher education in the state of Connecticut to have achieved this recognition. Despite this high level of recognition, Connecticut College does not receive any extra funding.

According to Dr. Spotts, the Director of Counseling Services, the application process for accreditation was very involved and required several months to prepare a complete application. The application process involved the submission of self-study reports to the IACS, which were answered. Connecticut College Counseling Services has a variety of services that it offers to the campus community. Counseling Services has a full staff of experienced therapists, trained to provide individual, group, and couples counseling to all students.

The benefits of counseling services are not limited to students who are enrolled in courses offered by the college. Conn's Counseling Services offers a variety of services to students, including counseling for individuals, couples, and families. The counseling services are offered in a variety of settings, including on-campus and off-campus locations.

Counseling Services is committed to providing confidential and effective services to all students, regardless of their needs or circumstances. They offer a range of services, including individual counseling, couples counseling, group counseling, and family counseling. They also offer services to students who are coping with addictions, eating disorders, depression, anxiety, and other mental health concerns.

Counseling Services is dedicated to helping students achieve their academic and personal goals. They work with students to develop strategies for managing stress, improving academic performance, and enhancing personal well-being. Counseling Services is committed to providing a safe, supportive, and confidential environment for students to explore their concerns and develop strategies for managing them.

Counseling Services is committed to providing students with the skills and tools they need to navigate the challenges of college and beyond. They work with students to develop effective problem-solving skills, time management strategies, and study skills. They also offer resources and support for students who are facing academic challenges, such as test anxiety and procrastination.

Music is a major part of the daily life of students at this college. At every corner of either campus, students have been spotted either with their iPods or various other music players. Additionally, Conn's artistic activities, performances, and clubs have continued to make this institution a spotlight in the wider New London area.

CORRECTIONS/RETRACIONS

The news article "Students and Faculty Address Ethics and the Environment at Recent Common Hour" that appeared in the November 18th issue of the Voice incorrectly stated that Jackie Olvera was the final panelist to speak. Assistant Professor of Economics Roger B. C. Warren presented last. The article also incorrectly attributed Professor Howes as stating that Medicare should be expanded, but will furthermore serve as a chance for our seniors to perform their last few times on the stage. The article also incorrectly attributed Professor Howes as saying the common hour talk did not focus on the environment, but instead the economy.

The headline in the Nov. 18th issue ("WCNI Under Investigation For Money Laundering") was inaccurate on two counts. First, the former president of Connecticut College, Dr. Christopher Jones, was unnecessary. How does a statement like that encourage the student body to come out and support our basketball team? I also think stating "after finishing last or second to last in every team statistic in the NESCAC last year," was unnecessary. How does a statement like the one made by Coach Morgan present a more accurate story to the women's basketball team? Our 10-13 record was the best record that Conn's women's basketball team achieved for the past eight seasons. Secondly, this individual is under investigation for diverting CCBA funds for personal use, not for money laundering.

The true story to the women's basketball team, as I see it, has been overlooked. Not one player, coach or administrator was interviewed or challenged the conclusion arrived at in the article.

My mother always told me that if I couldn't say something positive (about someone) I shouldn't say anything at all. Considering the limited scope of this disappointing article, perhaps you should heed my mother's advice.

CHRISTIAN PERSECUTION

The government is based on their religious affiliations, excluding them as second class citizens, leaving them with minority status. Since the second intifada up to the year 2002, it is the right of the Israeli government to discriminate against the local Palestinian populations in terms of their minority status. However, Palestinian students violated article 49 of the Geneva Convention by sending letters to their government requesting protection from the Israeli government, hopes to provide greater concessions to the Palestinian people in removing them from the West Bank, and finally establishing a mutual defense agreement between the Israeli and Palestinian people. But the international community still rights a significant skepticism of the Israeli's intentions in the past. As a result, many opinion polls believe the newly created party is also favored to win the next election. The current conservative hard line free liberal conservative party suffering the most from the Israeli government. This brings the long-standing effort of the United States to a standstill. Currently, there are no steps to take towards a multilateral agreement leading to a peaceful solution of the conflict.

The pull out of the Gaza Strip and Sharon's plan of pull out of Gaza, seems to be a bipartisan effort and many of the Jewish population would vote for this plan for the political advantage of the territory. These decisions seem to be a significant step towards the possibility of a solution to the conflict. However, it is uncertain if this plan will work. The idea of a two-state solution seems to be a good idea but it is uncertain if it will work. The recent pull out of the Gaza Strip seems to be a step in the right direction but it is uncertain if it will work. The Jewish population seems to be undecided about the pull out of the Gaza Strip and seems to be undecided if it will work.

THE OC: Mix 5 A Good Try

BY BECC FREL

For those of November, it is the highly anticipated release of Matthew and Olivier's first album, which has been over five years now since the OC Mix 5 was released with a decent album (2003's American Life) received poorly by the public. So, fans who had been patiently waiting for a new album, while waiting for their favorite material, had been creation since the Mix 5. It was no surprise that when the album was released, the reviews were extremely positive. I admit that after hearing the single "Staying Alive" on the radio, I was of course interested to see if it was worth the time and money it was certain to cost.

Today, the OC Mix 5 is a collection of tracks from the television series The OC, and it's worth the purchase for OC fans and music lovers alike.

Arts Curriculum Receives Boost Through $225,000 Grant

By YONATAN R. FREEMAN
Managing Editor

Connecticut College’s curricular offerings in art, dance, theater, and music received a boost from the Sherman Fairchild Foundation with a recent $225,000 grant. The financial improvement will likely make the programs and campus-wide events more attractive to both students and community members.

This three-year grant will allow for developing arts programs and campus-wide events. In addition, the improvement of the concern offerings will attract new students to these programs in this current academic expansion.

The influx of funds will cause the academic offerings to expand at all levels from introductory to senior seminars. Some of the planned courses, directed to those even in interdisciplinary fields, will be dealing with dimensions of color in film, and the influence of clothing on conceptions of the body. Increased funds will allow for field trips and even guest artists. Additionally, courses will strengthen the cooperation between various departments of the college along with the Ammerman Center for Arts and Technology.

Dean of the Faculty Fran Hoffmann said, in an article posted on Conn’s website, remarked that the interest in arts is increasing, and artistic expression is a main reason moving up Conn’s appearance. Hoffmann remarked, “The visual and performing arts continue to be an integral experience of Connecticut College students.” She noted that all students, regardless of major, have to take a course in visual and performing arts per general education requirements.

The renovation of any building is an expensive project, and the state of Connecticut gives grants to institutions trying to make their buildings more energy-efficient. Connecticut is one of the most environmentally liberal states in the nation. If you recall back to when I was a pretty young freshman, you'll probably remember the Earth House and the Sustainable Living Center, both of which were built in the early 1970s. It was a very environmental program. On the day that Earth House opened, it was a very environmental and sustainable building, but since then it has not been very environmentally-friendly.

Longtime Coach Ken Kline Retires

This article was taken from the Source.

Newly-retired winter weather has begun to take Conn in its grasp, as rain, wind and clouds were the norm this week. Freshman might be a bit distraught due to warmer temperatures; there are plenty of concerts, performances, and other events, such as Fresbee, to keep them entertained this winter.

Amman Center for Arts and Technology were Ozgur Izmirli, Assistant Professor of Computer Science, and Ian Leue ’07. In general, studies in the Ammerman Center combine the fields of art and technology, with at least two aspects from each domain being synthesized in the research.

The collaborative research of Professor Izmirli and Leue focused on music information retrieval. Specifically, the project looked at how songs could be retrieved from a music query string based on different aspects of musical content, namely rhythm and tempo. The method used to discover the possibilities of this type of extraction was to segment a piece of audio into its general beat structure.

Nicole Adams’ 06 followed on behalf of CISLA with a presentation of her collaborative research project with Merttten Dreary, visiting Assistant Professor of Economics. Having spent last semester in Peru, Adams’ research focused on how household economics function and differ between families in rural and urban Amazonian communities. Adams hypothesized that women who have land rights are more likely to invest in household assets and increase household resources and durability, which will improve the education of their children. Her research questioned why women would choose to behave in this manner in this case, and she presented her findings to the class.

Finally, Celia Gryton ’96, collaboration with Associate Professor of Government Jane Davidson.

Kline is teaching a freshman seminar, “The City: an introduction to urban planning and its impact on the city.” He started coaching women’s soccer at CIU in 1992 after being a coach for 10 years. He has been a coach at CIU for the past 11 years, during which time he has led the team to five New England championships and one Eastern Regional title.

In the years to come, Connecticut College will be known for its innovation and foresight as we decide to make these buildings environmental-friendly as possible, which is now in line with Connecticut College’s public policy of being one of the most environmentally liberal arts schools in the nation. If you recall back to when I was a pretty young freshman, you'll probably remember the Earth House and the Sustainable Living Center, both of which were built in the early 1970s. It was a very environmental program. On the day that Earth House opened, it was a very environmental and sustainable building, but since then it has not been very environmentally-friendly.

What will be remembered most about Ken as a soccer coach will be his strong relationships with people in the sport and his mentorship and care for his student-athletes,” said Shaida Shaida-Kline, a former student athlete who played for Kline at CIU.

Shaida-Kline enjoys an attachment to the College’s athletic program and feels she is in his debt. He encouraged her to study hard and work hard in her college career, which she did.

Family student research collaboration was discussed (dams). The final research project to be presented. Syne and Dan’s work represented the Goodwin-Naylor Center.

Syne’s research was primarily conducted in Thailand this past summer. She focused on protecting endangered species in Thailand and why government policy on promoting these animals in the local community.

Specifically, spending time at an animal shelter, Syme researched the history and current status of endangered species in Japan, India, and Thailand, and the possibility of the level of economic development in these countries.

The floor was open to questions from the audience following the presentation.

Women's Basketball Starts Strong

The women's basketball team is already four games into the 2005-2006 season, having

12/3 Camel Invitational, All-Day

1/6 vs. Grinnell at Naples, Fla, 1:00 pm

With 5 games to go the Pats could probably win this thing with an 8-8 record and still have a comfortable margin leading for the eventual crowning as champions of the AFC. Deniliugh and Jenny '06 had a great double-double with 20 points and 10 rebounds for her team, while Lindsey Mitchell helped out with eight points and seven rebounds. Carla Pid '06 notched six points and six boards for Conn, whose next match-up would come against Becker College in a 64-41 rout. Their only challenge this season has been their defense, and they have held opponents to an average of 62 points per game. In a fast-paced first half, the Camels utilized a balanced attack to jump out to a 36-24 lead by halftime. The opening half was highlighted by solid shooting performances from guard Christian Mobley '08 and co-captain center Charles Stone '08. Mobley demonstrated an good scorer’s touch as he scored 12 points in the first half, including three of four from beyond the arc. Stone did his job closer to the basket, as he added eight first half points in going four of six from the floor. However, the Camels' lead was not safe in the second half, as the Brewers quickly narrowed the margin to seven points with 12 minutes remaining in the game.

Women's Basketball Dominates Mitchell College

The Camel's lead was never in doubt, as they scored 22 points in the second half and held Mitchell to just 13. Kenly nailed four from beyond the arc in a 12 point performance for the Camels. In the second frame of play, the home team looked to be running away with it, as Lindsey Mitchell and Kelly4-0netted a crucial basket to give her team a one point lead out to a 56-55 tilt. Stone Young had a huge game this week, scoring 16 points and grabbing 16 rebounds. Young had 16 points coupled with eight rebounds and six assists. But Stone one-upped his teammate by scoring 11 from the floor as well as 25 points, five rebounds, and two steals. Kaylee Washington '07 added eight points and co-captain Gabe Patton '07 chipped in with four points and five rebounds. With 5 games to go the Pats could probably win this thing with an 8-8 record and still have a comfortable margin leading for the eventual crowning as champions of the AFC. Deniliugh and Jenny '06 had a great double-double with 20 points and 10 rebounds for her team, while Lindsey Mitchell helped out with eight points and seven rebounds.
