Seven Delegates At Annual Conference

This past weekend seven students represented Connecticut College at the Northfield Milwinter Conference held at East Northfield, Mass. They were among the three hundred delegates who came from colleges all over New England to attend this annual conference of the student Christian Movement. A small part of the group was made up of leaders of the gatherings, foreign and graduate students, and executives of the S. M. C. M. Club in Boston. The majority of this number, however, were students who are vitally interested in the questions of finding a working peace and an adequate interpretation of religion for the college student of today.

The theme of the conference was "The Religion of Jesus - Gradual Growth or Radical Change?" In order to present many opinions on the question, leaders and students were given an opportunity to express their views. Two of the important presentations (Continued to Page 6, Column 2)

Senior Spirit has become a last year's legend among a generation of the present junior class. This year, the class of '37 will literally die out before June, if it ever does survive, a new precedent for class indifference will be set. Is the senior inactis a result of utter mental fatigue—has the strain of three years proven too great a task or has experience, which should enable them to eliminate obstacles, built up a negative attitude toward campus activities? An inevitable frustration as such for the spirit of the underclassmen and placing the blame of responsibility on them with the obvious exception of everyone to be the guiding figure. Recital Presented By Drane Sisters

A duo-violin recital was presented by Virginia and Mary Drane, accompanied by Alexander Alexan at the piano, in the College Gymnasium Thursday evening, December 11, as a feature of the Connecticut College Concert Series. Duo-violin is a comparatively new field, and a promising one. The Drane sisters have been studying since the age of eight, separately, but have been playing together for about five years. They have studied with Mischa Mischakoff, and are now under the tutelage of Yehudi Menuhin’s teacher. The entire program was as follows:

I. Preludio
Sonata, No. 2
Largo
Alllegro con fuoco

II. Allegro con brio
Concerto in D

III. Allegro con spirito
Andante

IV. Allegro molto
Stoessel — Suite Antique
Bourée
Allegro

V. Kreisler — Liebenfied
Sinding — Adagio (Suite, Op. 92)
Ries — Perpetual Motion

“I know that the Dranes are a good duo-violin combination. One could be seen apart from the other, as a body, as a symbol of abstract virtue. In connection with this, he urged us to cultivate an interest in others as individuals; not to regard them as a background for our own personalities.

Dr. Glenn also recalls the incident of the Duchess running before the town and saying, “I can dance” and being understood. The caterpillar told Alice, “Est one side of the mushroom in order to grow tall; eat the other side in order to grow small.” But the mushroom is round. Dr. Glenn likes this to life; life is round, but a kind of balance is necessary, for if a person follows a certain method to extremes, he often tries to go the opposite extreme in order to maintain a balance.

Dr. Glenn cites the belief of the Irish peasants that happiness is not meant for us. He does not agree with this idea, but strongly urges us to trust in God.

Questionnaire Reveals Current Events, Politics Discussed In Ball Sessions

Politics and current events are the most popular topics of Connecticut College ball sessions according to statistics gathered from a recent Press Board questionnaire, with religion coming as a close second. Personality came next, followed by that all-important question, “after college, what?” Next in line was an indefinite topic called “Philosophy, ways of life, general happiness, etc.

Students were more or less evenly divided on the question “Would you rather be a professor or a Phi Beta Kappa?” The personality of a professor, together with her ability to make friends and to get along with people, was pointed out in the questionnaire as a distinct asset, whereas all the students voting for Phi Beta Kappa agreed that the honor has intellectual and justifying value, and said that it showed worthwhile scholastic accomplishment.

Over one fourth of the students decided the middle way, pointing out that a high proportion of the voters believed in the better qualities of the Phi Beta Kappa and the professor is most estimable. A high proportion of the “well-rounded” personality, and said that students would prefer being an all-around girl to Miss America.

To the question, “What were the chief things you expected to get out of college?”, half of the college mentioned “Friendship” first. “Cultural education” had the next largest number of votes, with “Broad outlook” in third place. Ten percent of the voters mentioned “Fun” and a smaller number looked for “preparation for the future”. Other points mentioned included “responsibility”, “adaptability”, “maturer viewpoint”, “self-expression” and “general development”. A large majority of the students voted “Yes” to the question, “Are you getting everything you expected to get out of college?”

The greatest amount of interest in the questionnaire was shown by the freshmen and sophomore classes, with a fair number of votes from the upper classes.

ITALIAN CLUB

Various innovations this year have rendered the Connecticut College Italian Club an organ of wider interest and greater scope and variety than ever before. The club has been enlarged and discussion enriched by add n.t., memm.-sh p from students interested in a wide range of subjects: science, languages, and literature. Correlative attempts have been made to discuss men of significance not only in Italian literature but in world literature as well. Also, in accordance with the interest shown in the club, meetings have been conducted bitherto in English rather than in Italian, so that students without a knowledge of the Italian language can participate.

The foundations for this Italian club were laid at the first meeting when a motion was made and carried to have two kinds of membership—active and visiting. The active members are responsible for the prepared presentations of the club while the visiting members listen, contributing to the discussion when they so desire. The active membership of the club now numbers twenty-three. The complete membership, with active and visiting members, has numbered fifty students.

Discussion Groups

Famous Italians, whose names mean much to those interested in literature all over the world, have been the topics of evening discussions in the club, among them Leopardi, Leopardi, da Vinci, and Pirandello. In the case of each, papers have been read followed by general discussions in which questions were brought up, opinions voiced, and points of view presented by active and visiting members. A play of Pirandello’s, “The Man With the One Speaker of Note Has Been an Authority on Points in Literature All Over the World, Have Been the Topics of Evening Discussion in the Club, Among Them Leopardi, Leonardo da Vinci, and Pirandello.”

Future Plans

Plans for this semester’s activities include an even wider range of activities. Vllcroma books of famous Italian music will be played by a new set of selections from Italian opera, and moving pictures of travel in Italy will be shown. Two speakers will be brought to the club. They are Professors Boccia and Marion, both of Columbia University, who will speak to the club on subjects of contemporary interest.

The films were shown through the courtesy of the German Club.

The World in Your Lap

Knowing the world and its ways will help you to get the most out of your education. Many successful people say that the best way to know the world is through a good newspaper. For your books tell what people did in the past; a newspaper tells what people are doing today—now.

What better newspaper than The Sun for bringing the world into your lap? For a number of years it has been the favorite New York evening newspaper among students at leading colleges and universities in the East. College students find The Sun most helpful in their studies and social life. It keeps them up-to-the-minute on news, sports, fashions, shopping news, theaters and movies, stories of successful women in business and the professions, as well as hobbies, art and other popular interests.

To know the world, read The Sun, the most popular New York evening newspaper in the Eastern colleges.

C. C. Graduate Tells Experiences in Letter

Standing and a tolerance for the German people. I am extremely thankful to have this important experience which was made possible by the college.

I hope it is now an established procedure at Connecticut to send one of the students to Germany and to have a young German girl in return. The American students in Berlin, and all the other foreign students, are received kindly and courteously everywhere, and are quite free from any of the requirements and regulations which may be imposed on German students at the University.

None of us has ever had an embarrassing or uncomfortable experience here. We are treated as highly respected guests and in return act as guests of the state, with courtesy our only obligation; and that is all.

As an exchange student one is quite free to live and study as he desires. The scholarship amounts to one hundred and twenty-five marks a month which is enough to pay for one’s room and board. With registered marks, living in Germany is reasonable for foreigners, and the idea that all Americans are wealthy is gradually disappearing over here. Even without a scholarship, which amounts to between twenty-five and thirty dollars a month, the year is not expensive.

I hope there are several students at Connecticut who are planning to spend the year after graduation in Germany. A scholarship is an excellent incentive, but in the long run does not amount to such a great sum that all, except the one to receive the scholarship, should put the idea out of mind. I shall be glad to answer any questions that may arise among students who are planning to spend next year abroad.

From a few newspaper clippings and from letters from classmates, I have been able to follow the great developments on the campus. I look forward to visiting you next fall.

Once again, my thanks for your help in making this year possible for me. With best wishes for the New Year.

Sincerely,

Gertrude Wehne

The first basketball game of the season will be played this Friday night. The games scheduled are as follows: Freshman—Junior (first team) Sophomore—Senior (second team) This first game has great significance. Aside from the excitement of the game itself, it dates the beginning of Mascot Hunt. The Sophomore curiosity toward the Junior secret will take form in many threat-filled songs. The tension, which only comes with Mascot will lurk in the sidewalks while the classes battle with the ball on the floor. Also the Freshman class banner will be presented and all will be interested in viewing the latest banner in our college. On the whole, this Friday evening promises to be fun and most interesting. Be sure not to miss it!

speakers at the main sessions were Richard Niebuhr, professor of Christian Ethics at Yale Divinity School, and John H. Lathrop, minister of the Church of the Savior, a Unitarian church in Brooklyn, N. Y. The fact that these two presented almost opposite views on some of the questions in concern, was a stimulating element during the entire weekend.

Perhaps the most interesting of all the meetings were those which were carried on in the fashion of open forums or panel discussions in which the students themselves were given the opportunity to ask the leaders questions arising from their speeches. Another vital part of the program was supplied by six foreign students who talked briefly on the situation of the Christian students in their own countries, and showed whether or not religion there meant gradual growth or radical change.

In discussion groups, students from various colleges presented ideas as to how the work of the S. C. M. is progressing on their own campuses. Your delegation has come back full of ideas as to how Connecticut can become more active among student groups. Watch the activities of your Peace Club and Religion Council for results.

Those who attended the conference were Bette Adams '37, Frances Wheeler '37, Elisabeth Church '37, Frances Walker '38, Hazel Smelt '38, Helene Jenks '39, and Clarinda Borre '39.
