Board of Trustees Convene, Confirm Faculty Promotions

Advancement in rank for ten faculty members have been announced: Charles E. Shain, the promotions chairman, said the faculty met at the Board of Trustees' meeting last week to review requests that had come effective with the opening of the 1964-65 academic year.

James R. Baird, now associate professor, and Mrs. Mary Louise Lord, lecturer in classics, were named professors of English; William H. Dailey, assistant professor of music; Mackie Jarrell, assistant professor of political science; Mrs. Mary Louise Lord, lecturer in classics; Miss Margaret McKeen, assistant professor of chemistry; and Miss Jane W. Turry, assistant professor of sociology.

Resignations were accepted from two professors: Richard C. Wiles, chairman of the finance committee, and Mr. Richard L. Shepar, who is leaving the college to accept a position at the University of Arizona.

Volunteer Program Aids Oral School

A new volunteer program was announced this week at the Mytical Oral School. The program is open to students at the Connecticut College students are spending approximately three hours per week at the school, attending classes in the classroom as teacher assistants, working with handicapped children, and taking part in various programing activities.

The children at the school, who range in age from eight to sixteen years, are all handicapped and spend six hours a day at school, with two hours in the afternoon for recreation.

Forecast: Mild Weather Expected

The weather is expected to be mild and pleasant this weekend, with temperatures in the low 60s. The weekend will be a good time for outdoor activities, such as hiking, biking, and picnicking.

Daryl Hine Poet, Novelist, To Read His Works Sunday

Daryl Hine, poet and novelist, will read his works Sunday afternoon at the Palmer Room of the library. Born in Iran, Hine has lived in Europe and the United States and has published a number of books of poetry and fiction. His works have been translated into several languages and have been widely acclaimed. Hine will read selections from his latest book, "The Poet's Journey," which was published last year. He will also read from his novel, "The Poet's Dream," which was published in 1963.

Voluntary Organizations Receive Gifts

The Connecticut College community has contributed generously to various voluntary organizations this year. Among the groups that have received substantial contributions are: the Salvation Army, the Red Cross, and the United Way. The college has also provided support for local community service projects, such as the building of homes for the elderly and the provision of meals for the homeless.

Sermon to Concern Cull of Pessimism

Reverend Gordon P. Wise, pastor of the First Congregational Church of New London, will deliver a sermon entitled "The Sermon to Concern Cull of Pessimism" on Sunday, March 10. The sermon will be a reflection on the attitudes of pessimism and optimism, and will offer a message of hope and encouragement for the listeners.

Sophomores Deserve Honors

Last week's election focused the attention of this campus on the possibilities of forming certain small groups. Candidates for office of Chief Justice accentuated the need to revise the present Honor System. These candidates made the distinction between health and retardation, a distinction which is necessary. It seems, however, that even a revision along these lines makes the concept of "Honor" not necessary in the judgment of minor cases and is not valid in the judgment of major cases.

At present, in order to insure that cases are handled in an "honorable fashion," both students and administration concerned to do so, we choose a word of caution for some reason, feel necessary. Because of this a maximum of ineffectiveness and repressive acumen.

To be sure, the vocabulary of "Honor" is one that reports others to remain anonymous, Secondly, there are no stipulated punishments for transgressions. Because of these perversities that are a good day for to be more lenient in the sense of not being as harsh as necessary. This may help some to realize that their actions were wrong, but placed too heavily a manner in which the system is not to be taken into consideration. In other words, for the same offense it is possible that an individual who is authorized to be punished be too lenient; one has little way of predicting what the punishment will be like, but it is possible that the punishment will be handed out in a more lenient manner than it is now.

It seems that some students are not aware of their own actions, but they are not aware of the consequences of their actions. A student is on her honor not to cheat on exams; therefore, there are no provokers. When, however, she is caught cheating, we reported we see no reason why she should not be judged in the same way by being with the American system of law.

The student should have the right to know her name of honor. Anonyou are not present when the accusation is just. A legal code should have a set of prece dents which can be used to judge whether or not they should be held accountable to the extent of being held liable for any actions committed.

To our mind, honor is a before-the-fact concept, independent of punishment, which are after-the-fact concept, independent of punishment.
'Godot' Meets High Standards, Depicts Body, Soul of Man

I sit down to write this review with Estrogen's crowning abuse, "Critics!" I must, at this point, being wholly satisfied with the task, for it would seem that to review a production which will not be given here again in dubious, the public. Yet it would be a shame to let a fine presentation go by without according it recognition, and so, the Dartmouth Players' performance of Samuel Beckett's 'Godot' was such a presentation. Though the night's presentation was long and hard, and has given the play before this, evident; their professional presentation, and applause, and The Dartmouth Players for the most professional presentation that I have ever seen given by an amateur group; would also like to give a hand to Wig and Candle for bringing the production to the campus, and can only hope that the high standards exhibited will be maintained in future productions.

Bill Daniels was faultless in his portrayal of the whole, show, however, his performance as Lucky, the character representing the archenemy of the soul of man, the body and the soul of man, who all over the years, has maintained in future productions. This, however, is not always achieved, yet when taken in addition to glaring lights throughout, one wonders if it might not be avoided. On the whole, however, honorable mention was well-deserved for a very good attempt and at least some first-rate acting.

Koch Describes Art Nouveau, Discusses Influence of Tiffany by Ellen Corroon '64

Thursday, February 28, Dr. Robert Koch of Southern Connecticut College lectured at Lamson Allyn Museum on Art Nouveau and the Tiffany influence now on display in New London. As part of his lecture, the influence of Tiffany was discussed. Dr. Corroon explained the decorative arts at the turn of the century in terms of those influenced by Tiffany and other artists and craftsmen. Dr. Corroon also discussed the influence of Tiffany's colored glass on the movement.

Programs. For those who doubt its effectiveness, at Yale last year about 15 students ran in the gym and were restrained by police.

Ignorance Stressed

Mr. Conroy then spoke correcting the errors in Scov's arguments. He spoke of the placement program which puts workers in whatever job or location where there is a need. The worker has no choice and can be moved around like machinery. A similar program is in operation in education. Students are placed in a career. With regard to Scov's parallels between Russia's Hungarian intervention and our interference in Lebanon he pointed out our presentation to the UN and our request for aid from UN forces before making any move. He also contrasted the bloodshed in Hungary with the peaceful Lebanon settlement. In discussing Radio Free Europe, Mr. Conroy encouraged our listening to Russian stations as frequently as others are listened to.

The effectiveness of the bettors was unmistakable, leaving many people determined to encounter any further propaganda, not with a closed mind, but with better awareness of the facts.
