Guest Speaker: Dean Gordon
Will Address Vesper Service

Guest speaker at this Sunday's Vesper service at 7 p.m., in Harkness Chapel, is Dean Gordon, Dean of the Chapel at Princeton University.

Born in Scotland, Dean Gordon holds degrees from St. Andrews University, London University, Harvard Theological Seminary, and Glasgow University.

Dean Gordon led an exciting career during the war. He served as captain in the Argyl and Sutherland Highlanders. After being wounded in Malaya he escaped on the national survey to Sumatra where he organized an escape route used by over fifteen hundred people, including wounded soldiers and children.

He escaped again in a balloon with eighty other British prisoners of war from Sumatra by the Japanese. During this time he helped to organize and teach "Dugout University," and in addition to a lay minister to British prisoners of war.

In 1955, Dean Gordon was ordained as the interim minister of the Church of Scotland at Paisley Abbey, when the Rev. William J. Smith was appointed as Mr. and Mrs. William Hamilton, a former associate of Jane Addams, will speak on the highlights of Jane Addams' career and of her accomplishments.

This speech served as a preface to "The New Hannah," which will be given by Miss Addams, and Betty J. Gardiner described Miss Addams, and Betty J. Gardiner described Miss Addams' career and of her accomplishments.

If any interested in discussing the possibilities of full admission to American culture, Betty Holmes '59 will be the narrator, describing what is going on in the water.

The program will consist of a concert at New Haven, a trip to France, and a tour of the United States. Mr. and Mrs. William Hamilton, a former associate of Jane Addams, will speak on the highlights of Jane Addams' career and of her accomplishments.

Since You Asked...

Freedom of speech has mixed blessings. While it is used to discuss ideas, helpful suggestions and just complaints, it is also, at times, unkind. When it is used to voice worthwhile intentions, constructive criticisms, and thoughtful ideas, it is grand.

Yet, to export free speech is to corrupt and defile. When it is used to ridicule individuals, misdirect arguments, and malign, then it is bad. When it is used as a vehicle to receive attention it is bad.

As members of a college community we must be aware of the individual responsibility which is an indivisible component of free speech. As the journalistic organ of this college, ConnCensus was created to provide you, the students, an opportunity to express yourselves. The purpose of this column entitled "Free Speech," is to allow uncensored opinions to be expressed, whether they be in favor of or against any of the college's policies.

Last week a letter was printed which we felt was in poor taste. Instead of dissecting or altering this letter, it was published and a reply added to the letter, just as the child material. Since then we have received many letters which are too numerous to warrant personal replies. This alone, was gratifying, for this great response indicates that many students are interested in free speech and are willing to support the convictions. We trust that in the future letters addressed to the editor will not take unfair advantage of "Free Speech," for the quality of ConnCensus is determined by you the students of Connecticut.

TRAVELING LINES ON IVY VINES

Seriously considering the relative advantages and disadvantages of the tri-semester system are the faculty and students of Mt. Holyoke, asking the tenancy in the past on the part of the administration of Mt. Holyoke, Smith, Amherst, and the University of Vermont, it is, no one of the four colleges should change their present system without the cooperation of the other three.Holyoke's pondered change would prove enrollment in courses of the neighboring institution.

Questions to be contemplated are whether a tri-semester system is feasible to a school as small as Mt. Holyoke? Would the change include the inclusion of courses and schedule conflicts? Would this system allow time for intensive study, and would the arrangement of terms and vacations be satisfactory for students and faculty?

A possible innovation for Crozer-Williams is Pembroke's idea of a Friday and Saturday night promotion of social activity for students and faculty.

An idea being considered is the opening of the Gate Open House from 8:30 to 12:00 on Friday night with a small band from Brown or a jukebox. For entertaining dates on Saturday night from 9:00 to 1:00, the proposal is a record player, blazing fire, games and refreshments (fruit punch only).

Continuance of these functions depends upon the support of the student body.

Student campaigns and correspondence are rapidly arising in many eastern schools in protest against the National Education Defense Act. This act provides grants for loan, scholarship and in colleges with compulsory attendance.

The Harvard NDEA committee is carrying out an intense campaign to prevent the repeal of section 101 (1) which would include loyalty oaths and other affirmative provisions. Trenton is equally enthusiastic on four campuses (Amherst, the University of Chicago, Harvard, and Radcliffe). The resolutions in the writing of over 1000 letters and 2000 postcards to Congressmen, Washington, and various other groups for the students looking to view their interests.

Smith's The Sophon urges their readers that "sending a postcard, a postcard, to Washington, can be an effective means for influencing the legislators at the March debate on the NDEA."

FREE SPEECH

A Forum of Opinion from On and Off the Campus

The opinions expressed in this column do not necessarily reflect those of the editors.

Dear Editor:

One of the major criticisms of the National Education government at Connecticut is the election procedure. With the new ConnCensus this first legislation, may I propose a free change to take effect in the election next year.

(1) On the first Tuesday after the summer break hold the Annual General Meeting of Student Government to accustom the President and Students Government acquaints the Freshman Class with the office procedures and reviews the upper classes of their responsibilities. At this Amalgamal also mild-semitesters rather than before, the issues and regulations are much fresher in the minds of the student body.

(2) One week from this Amalgam, conduct the filling of intentions for the offices to be elected. During the week between the first Amalgam and the filling of intentions the Junior and Sophomore Classes would be made more comprehensive Analyzes of their classes and may "new blood" would result from the introduction of this benefit would be that all students would have a chance to find out their graduates and eliminate the necessity of last minute petitions for office. The students who are interested in running for an office for those who are interested in running for an office for these students could realize their ambitions at this time. If interested, the candidates would be able to make a more concrete decision based on more than a three-minute prepared speech. Finally, as I stated early on, the time allowed before the filling of intentions would result in a livelier election with one or two more candidates for each office.

It is hoped that the new cabinet officers and students who are on their way to college will be able to make a more concrete decision based on more than a three-minute prepared speech. As a result, I stated early on, the time allowed before the filling of intentions would result in a livelier election with one or two more candidates for each office.

Conn. Girls Win Top Honors in College Playday Contest

Connecticut College placed first in the playday competition held at Wellesley College last Saturday. Of the three sports, Connecticook took top honors in two: badminton and swimming.

Frankie Gilmore '60, Sandy Lovig '60, and Bass Haines '60 represented this college in the playday competition held at Wellesley. Frankie, Sandy, and Bass won two of their three contests, while Sandy and Bass won all their doubles bouts.

In the pool Conn swimmers, Pam Work '60, Ann Neville '60, Ann Neville '63, and Cynthia Hahn '60, worked hard to win the relay race. Taking many seconds and thirds in the fifty-yard races and Cynthia Hahn '60, won the medley relay race. Sophomore And Freshman Compet Plays Reviewed by Irwin C. Lieb

In the jury room, the Sophomores seemed to be talking and preparing for their scene. The Freshmen, on the other hand, were standing in a corner, trying to think about their lines. The Sophomores were dressed in their best suits and ties, while the Freshmen were in more casual clothing. The Sophomores appeared to be more confident, but the Freshmen were determined to do their best.

In the scene, the Sophomores played the role of a group of business partners, trying to decide on a new product to manufacture. The Freshmen played the role of a group of young activists, trying to persuade the business partners to adopt a more eco-friendly approach. The Sophomores were trying to convince the Freshmen, but the Freshmen were standing firm, knowing that they had done their research and were ready to present their case.

In the end, the Sophomores were able to convince the Freshmen, and the business partners agreed to the new product. The Sophomores were happy with their victory, but the Freshmen were proud of themselves for standing up for what they believed in. The scene ended with the Sophomores and Freshmen shaking hands and congratulating each other on a job well done.

The scene in the air was as busy as usual, with planes and helicopters coming and going. The pilots were all busy, trying to get their planes ready for takeoff. The passengers were all waiting, trying to find their seats and get settled. The flight attendants were all busy, trying to make sure that everyone was comfortable and that the flight was going smoothly.

The plane finally took off, and the passengers all settled in for the journey. The flight was uneventful, and the passengers all arrived at their destination in good time. The pilots were all happy, and the passengers were all satisfied with the flight.

The plane landed, and the passengers all got off. They all went their separate ways, some to visit with friends, some to go to work, and some to go to school. But they were all happy, and they were all grateful to be alive and well.
thrown her gum away after she had cracked it at the start. Irene Alexander was buried. She had good lines, but staging, voice, and placement made them hard to say. The Presbysen played The Princess Married the Page. It was a one play to choose. It is clever, with good lines, quick extremes for characters, and a fine hint of fantasy. Miss Billi Besch carried the play. I am afraid she had to do it almost by herself.

Miss Besch was charming. She has presence and poise, a fine flexible face, a very good use of voice, good projection, and good command of her upper body moves. Her performance was professional in competence. The players who supported her were not quite so full or so adroit. Miss Cynthia Nichols, who played the Page, seemed to miss the two sides of the Page's character. The Page is a chevalier who makes at gality and plays a seducer's game. But he has a serious cast, as well; and it is this Nichols let predominate. I think she did it in artificial poses, standing downcast, her right leg bent. Her movements were stiff, and her remaining was never stirred with playfulness. Toward the end, Miss Nichols turned full face forward and smiled, and then she was a very different Page. But at all the other times, she stalked in a staid and stricken Hamlet person without convincing lassitude. Miss Susan Bernstein played the King, and I think she failed to bring the King's two sides to a single character. Where the King is a p a r a c e n t a s a woman who always held herself slightly aloof but not fanatical. She did not dislike doing unpopular things and suffered from being separated as an individual from the great masses of people. Dr. Hamilton's reminiscences of the Chicago of the 1890's made the city of that time vividly appear.
