by Carlin Gordon

It is inevitable that Connecticut College will have one central dining facility, according to administrative sources. It is also inevitable that Palmer Library will be renovated for other uses once the new library is completed. How closely these two statements are connected, however, depends on the report of the College Development Committee.

The committee is presently studying all "space use" on campus to determine if there might be a more efficient and more logical arrangement of buildings," stated John Detmold, chairman of the committee and Director of Development at Corn.

Some of the alternatives being studied, as stated in a report of a sub-committee of the Development Committee are:

1. close all dining halls except Harris and Smith-Burdick or except Harris, Smith-Burdick and one on South Campus
2. convert Palmer Library to a dining hall and kitchen facility
3. construct a new building south of Crossen-Williams for dining and as a student center
4. convert Palmer Library into an academic building to include what is now housed in Winthrop, Winthrop and Hillyer Halls.

"These alternatives are in no way final," explained Janis Gellinek, a member of the sub-committee.

Whatever renovation and conversions are done will not happen for at least two to three years, according to Leroy Knight, Treasurer and Business Manager of the College.

"We are getting to consolidate dining; there's no way around that. And converting Palmer Library into a central dining facility is one of the more interesting proposals," said Oakes Ames, President of the College.

Central dining will save the College $250,000-$500,00 a year, according to Mr. Knight. Palmer Library is centrally located, and the high ceilings on the main floor are conducive to a common dining room atmosphere. The College must consider "both the social and academic needs," he said.

The classrooms, offices and facilities (Bookshop, Duplication and Post Office) located in Winthrop, Thames and Hillyer must be relocated. "Winthrop and Thames are due to be razed," explained Ms. Gellinek.

Also being studied are possible uses for the kitchen and dining facilities which will be eventually closed. "We can't decide one thing at a time; it's all an interlocking move," said Ms. Gellinek.

A study by Mr. Knight shows that there is enough space in the dining facilities to house what is now in Winthrop, Thames and Hillyer, and enough space in Palmer Library to house a central dining facility.

One suggestion is that Harris be used to house the Bookshop. It would be easy to make the area seem more open by installing skylights, explained Mr. Detmold. There is also enough land around Harris to expand.

"We need more space for student activities," said Mr. Knight. "This overcrowded space are overcrowded. "All these things," assured Mr. Knight, "are being studied."

by Mimi Ginott

Dr. Hall will be leaving Connecticut College on June 30. This is hope to be able to find a new doctor by the time classes end this semester. President of Student Government, Rick Allen, was interviewed last week concerning the plans and progress of the two committees being formed to handle the replacement.

The student government sub-committee has already been formed to consist of a wide variety of student body members. There are eleven members in all, including two housefelloes, three house presidents, one transfer student, and several students who can judge the treatment of athletic injuries. This committee plans to collect information regarding the general requirements which the student body feels that the new doctor should be able to fulfill, and will submit this report to the search committee.

The search committee will be fully formed this week. This committee consists of Dean Gellinek, a member of the sub-committee.

Whatever the selection eventually made, there will be a large influence on the choice of a new doctor. The structure of the infirmary, the clinics, and the limited facilities appear inadequate or incomplete to a large percentage of students in need of medical care. Many students would like a full-time physician who lives or very near campus. They feel that this would lessen the number of hospital visits and speed up emergency cases. Other students feel that we need a more extensive system of clinics. Some desire regular specialists, such as a gynecologist and orthopedist, who could be here every day instead of one or two days a week.

With the number of injuries due to sports or dance, we seem to need someone who will be available to treat them.

In this issue-

A look at the past p. 3
Candidate platforms p. 5
Morrison takes
Final p. 12
The organization of campus housing is based on the premise of what's fair for all; an overriding concern for equity in treatment is in selecting who lives where. By having a lottery as the basis for this selection, the PUNDIT feels all students are given an equal chance to live in the dorm of their choice.

Last year's decision to de-segregate Blackstone represents this desire to provide equal housing, in that no single group in residence has been given preferential treatment over the entire study body. However, because the minority students demonstrated a need for a meeting place, the Minority Cultural Center was set up.

The issue of a quiet dorm on campus again involves the problem of preferential housing. In concurrence with the decision of the PUNDIT, by which Pandit does not feel that separate housing should be provided for a small group of students over the chances of the general study body. To re-establish a quiet dorm would be a harmful precedent, inviting other special interest groups to also request specific housing arrangements. Also, Pundit feels that a "quiet dorm" may only be euphemism used by a clique of students so that they may continue living together. Although the "quiet dorm" would be open to the entire student body, its appeal is limited to a select group of students.

Expanded hours in the library and Crosier Williams represent a movement away from concentration-center activities. Also, stronger Judiciary Board measures are helping to make all dorms essentially conducive for study. Because of these areas, in addition to an increasing academic concern by all students, we do not feel it is necessary to provide preferential housing for a small percentage of the student body who claim they need a segregated academic environment.

All clubs should submit constitutions to College Council by April 15, 1975. Please forward constitutions to the Pundit Editorial Board: Hans Wagner, Box 1809

Constitution guidelines may be obtained from the Pundit Editorial Board. Call Hans Wagner in Knowlton, if questions arise.

---

The candidates speech MALGO is tonight at 7:00 p.m., '78 Fanning 301, '77-Hale 122, '76-Sill 106.

---

To the Editors of Pundit:

I am writing in reply to the letter from James Baird which appeared in the April 3 issue of Pandit. Mr. Baird is "bewildered" by my letter, he infers a discrepancy and he questions the maturity of the recent comment on a sub-committee on Health Services. He sees a discrepancy between my concern for the students and myself, the problem anew, and to fix the limits of tolerance of such behavior.

Mr. Baird may well believe that there is a need for such a committee, but does the lack of such an organized committee constitute a discrepancy? The administrative functions of the Health Services will undergo a study of the responsiveness of the Health Services with the intent of formulating suggestions on how best the students believe the Health Services can better meet our needs. (Certainly, a current study of antiscial behavior in order to protect "those who are oppressed by strenuous offenders" necessary in order to assure a responsive Health Service on campus.)

We are dealing with two very different questions and I too am bemused by some of the implications. The question is: "is there a really mature student in the present structure of student government?" the formation of a student committee to investigate the policy and practices of the college infirmary. There is currently no standing committee of either the administrative faculty, or the student body to review college infirmary policy. I contend that the effect of infirmary policy is long overdue. There is maturity evident in this singular action and it offends me that Mr. Baird will agree with me. There must be a student committee to investigate, question, seek out student concern, and to learn about infirmary policy is long overdue.

Whether or not a committee is needed to establish limits of interference with our personal lives. I do not agree that such a committee is necessary. We already have established mechanisms, including House Council, Judiciary Board, and President's Ad hoc Committee to handle those limits. However, even if I did agree that such a committee was necessary....

Sincerely,

A Bewildered Student

---

To Tbe Editor:

I just thought I'd write a quick note to express my admiration for the masterful tactics used by our administration in the new co-op housing proposal. They really outdid themselves with this one. I can't say who impressed me most, Mr. Knight, who repeatedly told the co-ops that he didn't know the figures at hand to say whether co-ops were losing money, did a great job of checking up during the spring semester. When the students asked Miss Voorhees to help cut operating costs by letting the co-ops offer lesser amenities to themselves, she refused. Apparently someone listened.

Also to be commended are Dean Watson, whose memorandum reached hands less than thirty-six hours before the co-op information meeting last Thursday, and our president, Mr. Ames, who with less difficulty doing his office, was unable to find time to discuss the matter with representatives from the co-ops. All in all, the paper was handled most effectively. It's good to see that someone besides Nixon has read Machiavelli. I think the entire student body can feel secure with such a capable administration looking out for our best interests.

Sincerely,

Jack Clarkson

---

To The Editor:

One seriously wonders how desperate the Courier is when it accepts such articles as Walter Palmer's "The Subtle Distinction of Unisex..."

His article is almost believable after all, I think simple biological facts make it hard for us to disagree that such differences exist. On top of that, he batters around a lot of scholarly phrases that you could almost believe came out of a genuine psycho-sociological journal: male/female lifestyles, artificial sex barriers, basic interaction ritual, Goffman, traditional sanctions. His description of couples in the bar rival the most competent cultural anthropologist's ethnography - who then could he be wrong? Add to all of this his ultimate understanding that unisex is society's acceptance of the male representing a female, illustrated by David Bowie, nor is it a female assuming masculine characteristics, as represented by Viva, Playgirl, and the E.R.A.

I have no idea how brave or seedy you feel, I can't say who, but you are the face of Change. However, it is a fact that I have read, attributed wrongly. It should have read more than thirty, Cummings was broken into in a little over a year. The thief probably cleared the building when a door was unlocked at 1:00 a.m. to allow entry for the music library.

"Anytime that building is unlocked there is a security guard or a custodian or security guard there," incoming President O'Grady.

more fan mail

---

PUNIC

Editorial Board

Co-Editors-in-Chief
Pal Aliappolitis and Cindy Indriso

Managing
Walter Palmer
Anna Reitinger
Lena Lavoro

News
Bill Loyce
Seth Greenland
Anne Reynolds

Features
Anna Reitinger
Seth Greenland
Leila Bianca

Sports
John O'Connor
Carin Gordon
Leslie Branden

Graphics
Coney Feldstein
Karl Christiansen

Business and Advertising
Glamor Payton

Production Staff: Christian Steier, Libby Balles, Colleen Bench, Tina Leiman, Debby Reider, Donna Shafter, Steve Taft, Linda Bennet, Cindy Reider

Managing Editor: Barbara S. Schlosser

Published by the Connecticut College student body the last Thursday of each term. The PUNDIT is published by the Connecticut College News Publishing Corp., a subsidiary of the National Educational Advertising Service, Inc., 360 Lexington Ave., New York, New York, 10017.
Where have we been...
Where are we going?

Hello again, friends. Though you may have thought I had departed this vale of tears, it isn't so. Being as how Conn. has been named a Bicentennial Community, I have been asked to execute a few pieces of my random thoughts about America and Americans on the eve of the only centennial most of us will ever see.

American History is one of the great spectres that haunt students through their careers in the American school system. I remember History as a recurring cycle in elementary and secondary school of Ancient, Modern, American, and Ancient, Modern, American... Each of our textbooks has been condensed and predigested so that our feeble little minds could absorb the information contained therein. In fact, most of us acquired all our knowledge of History from these texts. Condensed as they are, these texts miss nuances derived from reading primary or even secondary sources. I read in one text that Nathan Hale stated, "My only regret is that I have but one life to lose for my country." In another, I read that Nathan Hale stated, "My only regret is that I have but one life to lose for my country." In a non-text I read that Hale was a lousy spy.

There is a considerable difference between "giving" and "losing" one's life. The former is noble and great, the latter, mean and small. I have never in the overwhelming desire to find out exactly what Hale said, I was merely happy to ponder the possible implications of the two versions.

I have also recently read that the vocabulary, and grammatical simplicity used in the writing of college textbooks has, in the last ten years, grown increasingly simple. It seems that what is meaningful, ordinary, mundane, garden-variety student knowledge is more firmly established. English down the tube.

I have been reading that which is written today, not that which was written. We have not the information contained therein. It is details which make up dross. But the velvet cushion is reserved for the knowledge of my continued on page nine parallel: is Black Power also rarely a question of masculine characteristics? From this point on, Mr. Palmer, your prejudice was blatant. And women are now dressing similarly means they are hypocritically ignorant of this subject. Fortunately for some of us our sexuality is more firmly grounded than to think we are becoming equal with the opposite sex by changing the clothes we wear.

More letters...

Certainly this statement says a lot more about you than about "the girls." "I'm saying that sex destroys this utopian ideology, because in traditional relationships we revert back to basic sexual roles — with all the traditional sanctions, barriers, and hang-ups." This statement comes dangerously close to suggesting that traditional male-female roles are justifiable because of the inherent, biological differences, therefore all strivings for equality are merely folly. May we assume, then, Mr. Palmer, that you also would like to see the Jim Crow laws reenacted? Think of the biological difference! Speaking for myself, I have not found that my relationship with a man reverted back to traditional roles as soon as I removed my work shirt and jeans. Apparently we know something? Why is there no "the" present in the mind of a sex you've never been.

Certainly this statement says a lot more about you than about "the girls." "I'm saying that sex destroys this utopian ideology, because in traditional relationships we revert back to basic sexual roles — with all the traditional sanctions, barriers, and hang-ups." This statement comes dangerously close to suggesting that traditional male-female roles are justifiable because of the inherent, biological differences, therefore all strivings for equality are merely folly. May we assume, then, Mr. Palmer, that you also would like to see the Jim Crow laws reenacted? Think of the biological difference! Speaking for myself, I have not found that my relationship with a man reverted back to traditional roles as soon as I removed my work shirt and jeans. Apparently we know

Questionnaire Inherently Biased

By Nina George

I would like to register the reactions of a concerned student, to the Student-Trustee Questionnaire thrust under our doors on Monday night. The questions are obviously biased toward a conservative, traditional, white, upper-class student body that is assumed to be primarily interested in grade-grubbing, playing sports, eating, and partying.

Under QUALITY OF LIFE, a most important area of concern, I have five questions dealt with social activities. Whatever happened to art, religion, or politics as contributory to getting a desirable quality of life? Are people at this school just interested in having a good time, in between their insipid academic "grinding," or their intramural sports and petty, ineffective extracurricular activities?

Laura Howick

Editorial Note: Mr. Palmer will respond to criticism of his views (The Subtle Distinctions of Unisex, Courier, 6 March) on the part of students who have written in. This correspondence will be continued on page nine.
Platforms for Class of '78 Presidents

Steve Cohen

For student government to work effectively, its student representatives must be more responsive to the needs and desires of the students. Too many complaints of class officers are little more than administrative jobs. Unequal representation of the diverse interests of each class have impaired the popularity of the present student government. Instead of spacy, bogus pledges of my future actions, I merely wish to state that I will be a representative of the students in all my endeavors. It is the wants and best interests of the students and efficient and effective class leadership which are our outstanding motives as president of the class of 1978.

The pressing issues of improving health services and decreasing the rate of vandalism can and should be dealt with immediately. As a qualified and genuinely concerned class president and student representative, I would be capable of doing something about these and other pertinent problems of Connecticut College. I see the need for a new trend of attitudes of students on campus, expressing more respect for others. No one should ever be ripped off by a fellow student, for anything.

David M. Behneman

Numerous student government officials and contenders have determined that the system in which the Connecticut College student body presently operates under is insufficient. By large, I am not opposed to this common opinion. However, with the proper measures, I feel that this deficiency can be corrected. Being a member of the class of 1978, I recognize that Connecticut College is in the adolescent stage of growth as a coeducational institution. It is my sincere hope that as an officer, I can bring about changes in the college community, which seeks to be such a representative. I would like to accommodate all of them or represent all of their wishes. But if an officer can successfully represent a majority, then he has succeeded. My goals are basic: to do the best job I can physically and mentally, to be a true representative of the members of our class. It is an easy thing to say, but hard to fulfill. Student government is not new to me. All through high school I was in student government, and was president of my class. I know the ins and outs of student government, the difficult job of making everyone happy and getting them involved. But I hope to make my programing a reality, and get as many people involved as possible.

This year I have been on the parking appeals committee. The committee appointed me to draft a proposal for freshman parking. It is now pending a vote by the committee. Unfortunately, the project was not given to me until March. Due to the late date, it will be almost impossible to have parking for us now. It should, however, go into effect next September.

I promise only one thing. If there is an issue by majority, I will act on it. If I represent you, it is my Elected Duty to represent your views. I'm as guilty if I don't hear from you if you do not speak up and express your views. My door should always be open. If I am elected, I want to hear from anyone with a view or an idea. Come to any of the officers. We are your elected officials.

I want to be representing the class of 1978 and I hope to have your vote.

Thank You

Stephen Paige

I feel it is the duty of a student government representative to be the voice of the students he represents. A student government official must represent the majority of his class. He must have some substantial experience, and be able to represent his class, or represent all of them or represent all of their wishes. But if an officer can successfully represent a majority, then he has succeeded. My goals are basic: to do the best job I can physically and mentally, to be a true representative of the members of our class. It is an easy thing to say, but hard to fulfill. Student government is not new to me. All through high school I was in student government, and was president of my class. I know the ins and outs of student government, the difficult job of making everyone happy and getting them involved. But I hope to make my programing a reality, and get as many people involved as possible.

This year I have been on the parking appeals committee. The committee appointed me to draft a proposal for freshman parking. It is now pending a vote by the committee. Unfortunately, the project was not given to me until March. Due to the late date, it will be almost impossible to have parking for us now. It should, however, go into effect next September.

I promise only one thing. If there is an issue by majority, I will act on it. If I represent you, it is my Elected Duty to represent your views. I'm as guilty if I don't hear from you if you do not speak up and express your views. My door should always be open. If I am elected, I want to hear from anyone with a view or an idea. Come to any of the officers. We are your elected officials.

I want to be representing the class of 1978 and I hope to have your vote.

Thank You

Edward S. Walters

Here at Conn. College the job of the Secretary-Treasurer is to take minutes of class meetings and assume responsibility of the class funds. As elected Secretary-Treasurer I will fulfill these duties to their utmost — and I will do more. I will work closely with the President and other members of our Executive Council to help sponsor social functions and propose legislation to College Council. As a class, we must raise money for our senior year. These funds can be raised by having dances, concerts, parties, and the like. In the capacity as one of the members of the Executive Council, I will work for this goal and the interest of my fellow members of the class of '78. However, you my fellow students must make your views known to me or some other representative. When cases come before the council I will support those for the good of our class and try to change those that are not. I realize these pledges may be beyond the norm of a Secretary-Treasurer, but of '78 need representatives who can grasp the situation and work toward the betterment of our class as a whole. If elected, I will be such a representative.

Presently I am the treasurer of the Conn. College Investment Club so I know the procedure for handling funds. I serve on the parking Appeals Committee, and in this post I continue to look after the interests of my fellow students. Back in my early years before college I served as secretary to one of my classes. I know the ropes and feel that I would be able to do the job of Secretary-Treasurer. I feel I am a qualified person to do it.

JB

Barry Gross

1, Barry Gross, submit to my fellow classmates of the Class of 1978 at Connecticut College, my candidacy as a representative of the Judiciary Board.

The job of a Judiciary Board member is to judge and rule on pending cases that violate the honor and social codes of the College. As a representative in this capacity, I will attend all the meetings and work for just and fair decisions on the Board.

I am tired of people in our College community complaining about Student Government because I feel that it helps the students and has the potential to do even more. With the Judiciary Board, being the only legal branch of Student Government, I feel that the Board can serve the needs of the students through upholding the laws and attributes of our college. I hope to lessen the complaints, and to do a good and honest job in serving the Board.

Laurie Heins

Throughout my term this year on Judiciary Board, people continually ask me, "Do you really believe in it?" My answer is always yes. J.B. is based on an honor code which upholds respect for one another as its main principle. I believe in this and feel most others do as well. Such an atmosphere is sustained here at Conn. and it is the main-
Class Elections

Samuel L. Avery

Problems brought before the Judiciary Board should be dealt with swiftly and with common sense. The last imoand of their decisions condoned on page ten. The last imoand of their decisions condoned on page ten... "

Michael J. Cones

My name is Michael Colmes and I am running for a second term on the Judiciary Board of Connecticut College. There are several major reasons why I am seeking re-election; most are similar to those I presented when I first ran and a few that have come to my attention as a result of my being on the board this year.

First and foremost I wish to remain on the board because it is an effective contribution to student government here at Conn, shape the parameters that help govern campus community life. The terms of the Honor Code as established by the Judiciary Board affect the entire community. As a member of that community, I desire to take part in those decisions regarding the Honor Code that bear on all Connecticut College students. A board exists before which every student is responsible, as an institution is yet unwritten. The board's procedures are not as yet adequately efficient. There are even several contra-conuctions between the board and the J.B. Packet and in the C-Book. What is the extent to which confidentiality should or can be carried and what specifically are the board's responsibilities to the community and to students whose rights are before the board? These are among the pressing questions whose answers are needed and who need to be answered. All these concerns made me to this point in my term. I hope I will be given the opportunity to continue. The class is an effective tool to begin discussion on certain issues but only with your support.

Michael L. Avery

Problems brought before the Judiciary Board should be dealt with swiftly and with common sense. The last imoand of their decisions condoned on page ten. The last imoand of their decisions condoned on page ten... "

David Sargent

As everyone can sense, there's a general feeling of apathy here at Connecticut College. This problem is not merely dealt with approach by simply asking people not to rip things off, JB could try to get the Bookshop staff, and perhaps student employees, to reinforce the already present regulations pertaining to costs and books. I really don't like to think of such added pressures, but unless the thefty stops soon, I foresee no other alternatives. I also advocate the formation of a sub-committee of Student Government on this matter. It is a problem that affects each member of the College Community. The $75,000 loss each year is equivalent to nearly $50.00 per student. With people complaining, that the student activity fee is too small, wouldn't it be nice to be able to add this money and give students something to do besides vandalize and steal College property.

In closing, let me state by belief that some function can be done to deal with these, and other problems that came before the Judiciary Board. I hope that I will be able to be a part of this decision-making process.

Sandy Leith

Being a candidate for the Judiciary Board, I feel it is of utmost importance to emphasize the potential of this body. As a final authority on social and academic decisions, the effects of such decisions can range from dismissal of charges all the way to dismissal of the college. And yet, with all this power, J.B. decisions have not served as a disincentive for future potential violators. The last impact of their decisions continued on page ten.
Mc Vay delivers good fish story

Scott McVay, an internationally recognized conservationist dealing with cetaceans (whales, porpoises, and dolphins) presented an address titled "In Search of the Bowhead Whale" on March 30 to a packed house in the Graphic Art Lounge. This presentation was sponsored by Connecticut College, the Connection, the campus art gallery, the Mystic Aquarium, and the Environmental Defense Fund. He has led the Environmental Defense Fund's Bowhead Whaling Commission Meeting. He also spoke of a boycott on all whale meat sales in proof to protest their unconsolable methods in proposing conservation measures.

In addition to this, Mr. McVay questioned the boycott on all whale meat sales in proof to protest their unconsolable methods in proposing conservation measures.

There were fourteen varieties of mixed drinks all served with a smile by those wonderful Mar- shallshale. and there was enough to get everyone on their way. They even had whiskey sticks! As any alcoholic will tell you, this is a good course. Furthermore, the drinks were mixed with mier and order and not served with a shake or shaker. Instead, in the punch bowls used at the more pleasant affairs on campus, you knew that this is what has been going on in those punch bowls.

A special accolade should go to an anonymous student from Mr. McVay's class who donated $350.00 of his own money for the cause. And to his numerous helpers who associated with the logophores who really did do a good job in putting this thing together. Thanks for the memories, gang. You're wonderful.

Mr. McVay, all you social chairman whom I've managed to rivet to your seats with my prose should take note. Marshall made a special effort to make his presentation as pleasant and differentiates the film from other work.

The principals of the film are a bundle on this party and thus it is inevitable to associate Ingmar Bergman with keen slapped physical comedy a character in "Smiles of a Summer's Night" who seems rather taken with the actress. The army officer's wife is a dapper fellow who is having an affair with a famous actress who the lawyer, his wife expresses his age. To complicate matters further, the lawyer, his wife, and his wife's condition and an army officer; who is a clergyman and a candidate who seems rather taken with his own dramatic readings of the works of Martin Luther. Their house is a vast, empty, young girl who, in the ver- pruner, would be called a guest.

Into this potpourri are thrown a famous actress who the lawyer is drawn to and becoming ex- cessively frustrated with his wife's condition and an army officer (Eric von Stroheim would have been quite at home in this part) who is having an affair with the actress. The army officer's wife is a friend of the lawyer's wife, which makes the conflict bew- twen the two men all the more amusing as they play off of one another in a manner that leads ultimately to a game of Russian roulette. Eventually, however, it is all over. The gun only fired a blank. I suppose Bergman has a bit of Mel Brooks in him.

Now, pay close attention. The Lutheran son takes up with his father's affections, while his father is seduced by the officer's wife. The housemaid, after virginal youth, and the daughter of a horary young theology student with her seductive antics, married friend. The entire plot is quite romantic of Shakespeare and is equally amusing when seen in the modern context.

What makes "Smiles of a Summer's Night" so intriguing is its quality of elocute excellent performance on the part of its players and he establishes each one of his characters convincingly and convincingly in their roles. When dealing with comedy Bergman is able to treat his favorite themes in a fresh way while at the same time avoiding the didactic heavy-handedness that makes some of his other films seem slightly ponderous.

"Smiles of a Summer's Night" is a funny, poignant, and touching film. One of its qualities is that it is difficult for one film to embody simultaneously. Bergman's camerawork is not terribly imaginative in this film although he elicits excellent performance from his players and he establishes each one of his characters convincingly and convincingly in their roles. When dealing with comedy Bergman is able to treat his favorite themes in a fresh way while at the same time avoiding the didactic heavy-handedness that makes some of his other films seem slightly ponderous.

"Smiles of a Summer's Night" is a funny, poignant, and touching film. One of its qualities is that it is difficult for one film to embody simultaneously. Bergman's camerawork is not terribly imaginative in this film although he elicits excellent performance from his players and he establishes each one of his characters convincingly and convincingly in their roles. When dealing with comedy Bergman is able to treat his favorite themes in a fresh way while at the same time avoiding the didactic heavy-handedness that makes some of his other films seem slightly ponderous.
The two candidates for the Master of Fine Arts in Dance produced two new works last Friday and Saturday, under the title "Project: Dance." The concert featured six new dances, choreographed by students for Stewart Smith and Krista Gemmell, and danced by members of the dance department, both teachers and students. The choreography did not reach the heights of originality; the works emphasized theatrics more than new, original, or well-staged appealing movement. There simply wasn't much pure dance; instead, there were pure goparas, characters, costume changes, and a moody variety of music and sound tracks. Many of the dances were either slapstick or pathetic in their humor, and always faintly absurd. The absurdity, however, did not suggest much profundity, certainly not a profundity of feeling. Or is that but one of those "some" examples to the above.

The most vivid dance was perhaps Laurie Linstead and Stewart Smith in their collaborative duet, "You or I," which was done in satiny bedclothes, with a man in a wheelchair as a nostalgic prop. The costumes suggested the goings-on of invalids and asylum doctors. Though the dance was too long and full of intrusions, it showed Laurie's superb control of gesture, intent, action and musicianship of the scissors, acting ability, which lends a depth and significance to his movements, and also underlined the absurdity underlying the mood, but the impulse to laugh was restrained, much to the credit of the wheelchair, and the idea of two people laughing and then doing the same thing again, incoherently reverting their roles, escaping, resisting, then succumbing to confinement. The wheelchair became an imprisonment, an instrument of torture, a symbol of old age or lunacy, a final resting place. I thought of the suffering that accompanies aging, but mostly it seemed to be a relationship, two people going off the deep end together—pushing, pulling, or saving each other.

"Seasong" was limp, liquid, but lukewarm. It was also musical, lyrical, well-danced, well-composed, and well-staged, and the study in ripples, flow, sway and singing— but it wasn't interesting enough, to the length of it and the fluidity was more in the conception of it than in the performance. A harp rised in 1651's gown (what else but a sat on the apron in a spotlight. I appreciated their attention to detail and to movement, but there may even have been dances to seriously.

I have yet to say about the other dances, Krista's idea, "On any Given Friday Night," must have been fun to do, with each dancer a specific character or his her own version of Somebody. Tristen Timberlake deserved mention as the stunning gown creature, as well as Tod Gangler in his attire as a satin shirt and white-framed sunglasses as the cool inscrutable star, and Valerie Varini for her beautiful use of the light-weighty sprightly staid old lady's rendition. The background sounds were largely Robert Uitermark, who was an utter delight, and often the music did not sound as though it was done. Friesian, a disappoiting "pillow" dance. Krista Gemmell and Jody Fassio, looking admirably identical, were two of the same "whatever-it-was:" so padded that their movements, but that it may even have been danced to seriously.

Dancers Master New Works

Emily Oehl
Pamela Cutler, her cello, and her companions Laurie Conover starred in the Senior Recital on Sunday afternoon. Pamela played well in the three ambiouos pieces they chose to perform. The least difficult Mendelssohn sonata in D Major by Tertmann was light, a little too staid— certainly not flashy and its performance lacked confidence. Pamela had a tendency to attack the beginning of the movements, and the development well, but the harpsichord, which was played by Nancy Wheelas, seemed to drown out the cello somewhat, towards the end of the movements. Though a little weak, the piece was nevertheless played sensitively.

Beethoven was a change in intensity. The Allegro con brio of the Menuetto, Opus 6, No. 2, not played too hot. The inherent drama of the piece was not developed or reflected by the execution, but Laurie Conover was impressive at the placement, especially in the "Adagio sostenuto e expressivo" and the beautiful transition into the second movement. The Allegro molto piu presto. Though Pamela played with feeling, I had the impression she did not get enough, or play forcefully enough, which is urgently needed for the Beethoven sonata which depends on much contrast and energy in the playing.

After intermission, Pamela and Laurie were warmed up, confident, and attacked the Mendelssohn sonata in D Major (Opus 84) with the energy it demanded. They played romantically, sensitively, and were well attuned to each other. As a versatile instrument, the cello came forward much more in the other pieces, combining the deep rich harmonic undertones with melody and vibrato. (in the Allegretto) pizzicato has a beautiful folk-like guitar quality at which Pamela was adept. The third movement of the Mendelssohn sonata Molto vivace was heard with the concert with the dynamics and the flourish it had lacked in the beginning.

The recital displayed much hard work and devotion on the part of the performers. I think a reciprocal interest and loyalty is due them and the other Sunday afternoon performers— besides which, who would want to miss the gown formalities and the other stuff you get in the Mendelssohn sonata. The work was well appreciated as the finishing gesture.

Making Beautiful Music at Recital

All campus forum to discuss the issues raised in the Student-Trustee questionnaire, Wednesday, April 16, 7:15 in Cro Main lounge.

ALL CAMPUS TALENT SHOW events week-end, sponsored by Junior Class. Anyone with talent should contact Robert Hoffman (Lambdin) or Walter Palmer (Branford).

Tickets for the French Dinner on Parents Weekend will be sold in the post office Thursday the 16th, Tuesday the 21st and again on Thursday the 23rd. $3.50 per ticket, selling limited to 75. (tickets on sale from 9-12 a.m.)
Constitutional Sub-Ctte. Recommendations

BY JASON FRANK

After an arduous year long effort, the Constitutional Review Committee of Student Government reported its recommendations to the Student Assembly April 3 and College Council April 5. The necessary two-thirds majority was achieved in the revised Charter with Student Assembly approving 19-1 and College Council 9-2. What differences that remain between the Charter approved by Student Assembly and that approved by College Council are expected to be ironed out by the time of this printing. The proposed revisions in the Student Government Charter go to the entire Student Body for a vote this Wednesday on the Class Election ballots.

The Constitutional Review Committee chaired by former Student Government Parliamentarian Peggy Brill included Rick Allen, Leslie Margolin, Len LuPardo, Harold Rosenberg and Jason Frank in its membership. The Committee was created last year by former SGA President Richard Lichtenstein to help make the Student Government Charter more accurately reflect the realities of Student Government at Connecticut College and to streamline it, making it more effective and responsive to the students.

So charged, the Committee rewrote the Charter with particular attention to the structure of the class governments. The New Freshman Class Constitution is included in the new Charter and the provision for the impeachment and removal from office of delinquent class presidents. In addition, with reality, the Committee on Nominations was officially abolished as an elitist anachronism with no place on campus. The new Charter moreover, in its statement of purpose announces the intention of Student Government to deal with matters of general academic concern, going beyond the former parameters that limited Student Government to extra-curricular and social matters.

Yet to be approved, are the Constitutional Review Committee's recommended revisions of the By-Laws of the Student Government Association. Proposed are: procedures for the impeachment and removal from office of the Student Government Executive officers; and elected Chairman of the Social Board and a provision that allows for all campus referenda on issues of concern as determined by a petition containing the names of 10 per cent of the matriculated students. The By-Law revisions only need to get a two-thirds approval by Student Assembly and College Council to be enacted, they do not go to the entire campus for a vote.

Reflections

A Day in the Life

by Jay Clifford

I should have realized that it was going to be a weird day because when I woke up, the sun was shining and I was still hungry. Last night I asked Mona to go down to Go's for a pepperoni and pepper pizza and she said sure. So I gave her ten and she left but she never came back. Where the hell is she now, I don't know. It makes me mad though, when she does things like this, because we have been seeing a lot of each other and we are supposed to be good friends.

Anyway, I was stoned on some really good Columbia and I fell asleep on my bed, with my head leaning against the Advent speaker. During the night, I dreamed that I was in Cro raiding the pizza horn d'oeuvres that were being served to an alumni meeting. Somehow, they found out and they chased me down the steps and into the autodrive food section of the college. I fought back against the Coke machine. Fortunately, they didn't molest me, but they did give me a couple of cans of Coke for mixers. That's when I woke up and saw that it was dawn earlier.

Sleeping all night on the Advent speaker gave me a stiff neck so I played 'Led Zeppelin I' to relax my neck and brain. It wasn't long afterward that Phil buzzed my room and asked me to hit Yellow Front with him. Phil was one of those few people that drove everywhere, even to classes — you would never see Phil walking, if he didn't have to. So the two of us got into Phil's blue old (the F fell out of Ford) and headed across campus. It was a beautiful spring day and it was almost time to get outside. As we passed the library, we waved to Judy and Lauri as they drove down the hill to the Science Building. We made it down to the liquor store in no time. Phil bounced a couple of balls and I ordered a Quirt and we settled in for a nap of Seagram's. On the way back, we drove into the Government doing a turn-up. The sun was making strange sounds, as well as pouring thick black smoke out of the exhaust pipe, but Phil said that he couldn't afford hi test so he had to burn his car, what was the reason for the noise. The blue old got him around — that was the main thing.

So back we went to the hill, past Cummings and the telephone on the wall. I pictured that telephone ringing in the middle of night, with no one there to answer it. What a place for a telephone, I thought, not a phone, but the entrance to the P.O. and went in. As usual, my box mate had already taken my correspondence. I walked out, but I did get a letter from my aunt in Fall River. A few times a year she sent me a preprinted check for my college accompanied by a little blue on pink stationary. It was going to be a great year, even if I talked about her French Poodle and her Bridge Club.

The phone rang and headed to Cro in the growing intensity of April sun. THE GRASS IN FRONT OF THE OLD LIBRARY WAS BRIGHT GREEN AND MOST OF THE TREES WERE PREPARING FOR THE AWARENESS WEEK. We parked the car and meandered into Cro for a cup of tea before class. Classes were cancelled for the last time, our experience was somewhat the same: we were ambivalent always, but it was spring and little else mattered.

With five minutes until class, we drifted out the door and into the fresh air. We were happy because we had a short-term, definite goal — the getting to class. The mud in front of Cro had dried up and it almost looked like a sidewalk again. Phil was talking about the coming of spring, he was reading as I saw Mona coming toward us from Larabee. Al his, Mona was wearing one of those green suits, you had to change from my ten dollars. Maybe it would be a good day after all — the three of us began the walk to Fanning.

I got to thinking about my four years in college, how the seasons change from winter slash to

They lived it "with gusto" during Friday's beer fest

New London

A two-alarm fire left nine families homeless, injured 12 firefighters, destroyed a wooden home and damaged another on Welles Avenue. Peter Gilmore, President of the firefighters' union, believes there would have been no so many injuries or so much damage if more men had responded to the first alarm. Fire Captain Thomas Maher agreed with Mr. Gilmore. A proposal to reduce the minimum manpower in a shift in the fire department has been made by City Manager C. Francis Driscoll in his 1976 projected budget.

A man accused of two murders walked out of the New London County Superior Court House April Fool's Day; it was no joke. Donald Brant escaped because two deputy sheriffs thought he was an attorney for a prisoner, and failed to lock him in a cell. He then stole a car from a nearby car dealer. The prisoner was caught later that afternoon in Rhode Island by an ex-State Trooper who had heard radio reports of the escape over a police radio. Mr. Brant had allegedly killed a man and a woman in 1970.

The Connecticut State Legislature would favor repeal of the state's mandatory motorcycle helmet law, if it was assured that it would not lose any federal funds. The federal government could withhold way safety funds and ten per cent of its federal highway subsidy.

Schlitz Freebie

Last Friday, afternoon, Schlitz Malt sponsored a promotional beer festival in the Cro-bar. All the hard-core Schlitz fans sample the free beer and assorted goodies raffled off by the promotion.

Notable performances were put in by, of course, Morrison Hotel, Marshall, and the Brandford clan. Andy Krevollin of K.B. deserves credit for engineering the construction of the beer monument, but the man that made me buy one was the brew master. Tiny Tim Cates and the brew boys got honorable mention for their slightly taller construction.

The crowd, storming the gates at 3:20 p.m., went through twenty cases of Schlitz in about two hours. Needless to say, the people from Schlitz were very impressed with the reception from Conn. Thanks should be extended to Attilio and his staff for keeping things under control.

Slouching Towards Bethlehem

We waved to Judy and Lauri as they drove down the hill to the Science Building. On the pedestrian walk by Fanning, we waved to George, Ken, Tom, who were walking one way and Sue, Steve, John, Bill, Peter and Kevin, who were walking the other way. The guards that were always in the Pinky shack at night were gone when we drove down the hill to the

They lived it "with gusto" during Friday's beer fest

More praise than criticism was expressed at a public hearing on construction of a new Coast Guard station and research center. City and local officials approved, while the Connecticut Historical Commission disapproved. It's not a prisoner — in a cell. He agreed Legislature would favor repeal of Captain Thomas' Southeastern Connecticut proposal to the state's mandatory motor-historical debt. Allilio and his staff for keeping things under control.

They lived it "with gusto" during Friday's beer fest

Continued on page six
To the Editor:
I am writing to express my dissatisfaction with the Administration's handling of the recent cooperative housing controversy. Though all of my comments are directed towards last week's meeting on the subject, they have been involved with the Administration all semester regarding cooperative housing proposals and beliefs that the present chaos and hostility could have been avoided, had the Administration acted in a more responsible manner.

What was needed was to deal separately with two distinct matters. The first matter needing attention was the problems of the present cooperative system (i.e. the fact that they are running $80 per student over budget at the expense of every student of prime importance). The co-op students have requested but refused to have the question all year so, for most of this excess they cannot be held responsible, however the question will need to be asked as to why this fact only came out now. Shouldn't the financial success of the co-op have been evaluated every year and some sort of ongoing check on expenses occur during the semester? Why was the information revealed only when the system came under question by another student — an $18,000 over expenditure should have been involved.

The second issue was that of EXPANDING the cooperative housing on this campus to incorporate a new independent cooperative facility. After conferring with many co-op students at other schools, what I had envisioned was some form of an independent co-op, open to financial aid and non-financial aid students alike.

Initially, Mr. Ames had mentioned checking out the possibility of converting a South campus dorm, Mr. Knight was helpful in working out possible changes and services, Dean Watson's office had a growing list of students interested in the co-op housing. Everything seemed to be going well and we expected to hear before vacation as to whether or not an additional dorm would be made available for this experimental program.

The formal announcement did not come until last week's meeting. This week, I had suggested to the Administration were now proposed, not in the form of expanding the existing program, as we had intended, rather our ideas were going to replace it. This was never the intention of the planning session envisioned by myself. The result was the Administration's pitting of student group against student group in each other in competition for the Lazarus and Abbey housing facilities. What I witnessed at the meeting was an understandably emotional defense by students and Abbey of the new ideas by myself and other students, and most reproachable, one witnessed the lack of responsible leadership on the part of the Administration.

In stead of saying, we proposed a new plan, perhaps we were wrong in some of our judgements and therefore will now reconsider them, what actually happened was the failure of anyone to take direct responsibility for the decision, leaving one to guess where questions are directed and wondering who and how the decision was actually made. While the absence of the tradition of the planning answers difficult, the decision to axe an existing housing program was not made to the treasurer's office alone. By leaving questions unasked, unanswered, deferring questions to other students like myself who did not make the decision, the Administration created an atmosphere unnecessarily chaotic and hostile. The timing of this decision as poor also, yet, one can't help but wonder why these decisions are planned that way. But its all over now, rather than compete for housing, the students interested in a new plan have decided that the Administration hasn't been fair in its dealings with the co-ops and hasn't been fair in making the issue a student versus student conflict. We applauded the decision to give Lazarus and Abbey another chance.

Our course of action will be to reopen discussion next year with the possibility of alternative and varied housing options will have to be closely examined. In turn, I hope that the course of action on the part of the Administration will be to consider carefully with all students matters related to housing and more importantly, once they have made any decision. The Administration should assume the responsibility inherent in the positions they hold.

Sincerely,
Peggy Brill
Platforms for Class Elections (cont. p. 5)

has been minimal, if existent. As a member of the Judiciary Board, I would seek to maximize decision-making and strive for relevancy in relating them to the concerns of the student body.

Because of the potential impact of Judiciary Board decisions, all cases should receive careful and detailed consideration. Each representative must have the time and dedication for responsible decision-making to take place. I believe I am one such candidate.

Class of ‘76 Presidents

Craig Chapman
My outlook on this campus comes from a constant involvement with the social, academic and political levels of this school. My following statement will hopefully demonstrate that.

I like to do what I want to do. This is obviously restricted by the desire to please other people and by the confidence that I don’t know everything. That is the way I exist at Connecticut College. This is the way most everyone exists here.

Friendships on the social level and enemies on the political are also part of my existence here. In different respects, friends and enemies are part of each persons sphere at Connecticut College. Beyond the ties of friendship and the courtesy of a “live and let live” attitude there is little to unite (if not everyone) large group of students on this campus. We are necessarily here to be academic and almost academic sphere itself provides the culture in student life. People here — mostly as a sign of the times — only rarely develop significant social meaning from their student existence.

Every so often I’ve entered a controversy in the newspaper. Many people have been academic — if not academic — should unite people bring everyone’s attention to focus on the good or bad aspects of an issue.

Controversies don’t unify this paper, but at this time, people don’t care — a legitimate way out. Why legitimate? Because of another problem with controversy, if not academic — should unite people bring everyone’s attention to focus on the good or bad aspects of an issue.

As your senior class secretary-treasurer I am willing and ready to assume my responsibilities and to supply my class with the necessary information and to involve myself directly with senior class activities. It is vital that the senior class have efficient and workable secretary-treasurer because we are gradually entering our last year here at Connecticut College and we all would like to make this a rewarding and memorable experience. In conclusion, your Secretary-Treasurer is the person I am willing to extend all of my potential and energies to the functions of the class of 1976.

Le Roy Jones
The office of Senior Class President provides me with an opportunity to truly serve the student body. The College Council concerns itself with the residential and extracurricular life of the college. As president I plan to support the new budget that will be voted by the student body. In addition, there will be an increase in the fund allocations to various clubs. I hope to give these groups more adequate social activities on campus. A more extensive athletic program should be encouraged. Furthermore, I strongly support the president and the vice president of student government whenever student government is needed to make important decisions. It is also part of my plan to stimulate more campus activities and to get students to use the new library.

As president I have to address myself to all open suggestions pertaining to senior activities that will be enjoyable as well as profitable for the class. Thus, it is evident that I plan not only to use the senior class area of student interest, but expand upon most prevalent interests.

I cannot express my sincerity enough. I simply urge you to think about what I have said and write to me on Thursday night. If elected I assure you that the senior class will definitely be fantastic, fast, adequate planning and a lot of work.

I will be glad to talk to any (judicious) students who have any questions concerning my platform, I intend to work diligently for the senior class next year, and I am always accessible to the students of Conn. College campus.

Le Roy Jones

Lynda Harper
I have been on the Judiciary Board for one year and would like to run for another. As a member of the Board, I have helped make hard decisions and formulated new and old policy.

To continue the good work we have started, the Board needs to be more dedicated to continuing to work hard in making our Judiciary body a well-functioning one. We need our honor code a better functioning one. The Board has spent the past year making its role in the community a dynamic one; it has concerned itself with problems which if left unattended, end up as disciplinary problems (i.e., too little available for social outlet, longer study hours at the library, better security, etc.). The Board is vitally interested in positive preventative action; it realizes that discipline is not the only answer. It can spend long hours on these issues. When discipline is necessary, the Board always strives to be as judicious as possible.

It is difficult to judge the actions of a fellow student; at the same time, it is a hard and continuous, and humbling experience. I look forward to putting in another year as a co-chairman of the Judiciary Board. I offer it my commitment, my energies and my experience.

Earl R. Holman

Goals — to be efficient, effective, and reliable; and if else is necessary tell me!

Sec./Treas.

Denise Sleigh

The position of senior class secretary-treasurer requires that he or she work directly in conjunction with the junior class officer. This responsibility also entails working efficiently and effectively dealing with all correspondence and financial matters and making sure that all information is available to class representatives and directly on to the senior class.

As your senior class secretary-treasurer I am willing and ready to assume my responsibilities and to supply my class with the necessary information and to involve myself directly with senior class activities. It is vital that the senior class have efficient and workable secretary-treasurer because we are gradually entering our last year here at Connecticut College and we all would like to make this a rewarding and memorable experience. In conclusion, your senior class secretary-treasurer is the person I am willing to extend all of my potential and energies to the functions of the class of 1976.
The Judiciary Board can help to restore our credibility by making fair and wise decisions. The Judiciary Board is also consulted on policy changes related to the honor and responsibility of the student body. If elected, I will do my best toward both of these ends. My record as a member of Student Assembly shows that I approach such positions with energy and responsibility. I hope to be given the chance to do likewise as a Judiciary Board member.

The Judiciary Board's most important function is to dispense justice. The concern of its members should be to see that each student coming before the board will get treated fairly—regardless of who got away before, regardless of what "example" will "be set," regardless of the administration's sentiment at that time. The Board's members and its policies must be flexible as well as being just. I know I will be able to work successfully with students and faculty as I have served as Dean President, Student Advisor, and as a member of the Election Board. I am presently one of the two students on the Academic Policy Committee, and serve on the Junior Class Council, and the Chinese Advisory Board. These experiences have taught me to make responsible decisions for and about others here at Conn. I believe in the Honor System and would like to be elected to the Judiciary Board to see that it is upheld.

The judiciary Board is also a member of the Student Assembly, and I have served as a dorm president. I have been a member of the Academic Policy Committee and have consulted on policy changes to restore our credibility by demand honor and responsibility. The Judiciary Board is not the only way to make a difference, but it is a way to help students.

The Judiciary Board can help to restore our credibility by making fair and wise decisions. The concern of its members should be to see that each student coming before the board will get treated fairly—regardless of who got away before, regardless of what "example" will "be set," regardless of the administration's sentiment at that time. The Board's members and its policies must be flexible as well as being just. I know I will be able to work successfully with students and faculty as I have served as Dean President, Student Advisor, and as a member of the Election Board. I am presently one of the two students on the Academic Policy Committee, and serve on the Junior Class Council, and the Chinese Advisory Board. These experiences have taught me to make responsible decisions for and about others here at Conn. I believe in the Honor System and would like to be elected to the Judiciary Board to see that it is upheld.

The judiciary Board is also a member of the Student Assembly, and I have served as a dorm president. I have been a member of the Academic Policy Committee and have consulted on policy changes to restore our credibility by demand honor and responsibility. The Judiciary Board is not the only way to make a difference, but it is a way to help students.

The judiciary Board can help to restore our credibility by making fair and wise decisions. The concern of its members should be to see that each student coming before the board will get treated fairly—regardless of who got away before, regardless of what "example" will "be set," regardless of the administration's sentiment at that time. The Board's members and its policies must be flexible as well as being just. I know I will be able to work successfully with students and faculty as I have served as Dean President, Student Advisor, and as a member of the Election Board. I am presently one of the two students on the Academic Policy Committee, and serve on the Junior Class Council, and the Chinese Advisory Board. These experiences have taught me to make responsible decisions for and about others here at Conn. I believe in the Honor System and would like to be elected to the Judiciary Board to see that it is upheld.

The judiciary Board can help to restore our credibility by making fair and wise decisions. The concern of its members should be to see that each student coming before the board will get treated fairly—regardless of who got away before, regardless of what "example" will "be set," regardless of the administration's sentiment at that time. The Board's members and its policies must be flexible as well as being just. I know I will be able to work successfully with students and faculty as I have served as Dean President, Student Advisor, and as a member of the Election Board. I am presently one of the two students on the Academic Policy Committee, and serve on the Junior Class Council, and the Chinese Advisory Board. These experiences have taught me to make responsible decisions for and about others here at Conn. I believe in the Honor System and would like to be elected to the Judiciary Board to see that it is upheld.
Equestrians

by Anne Robillard

The Conn College Riding team once again had a successful day despite the extremely cold weather, placing third in a field of 16 teams at the intercollegiate Horse Show at Smith College. Conn collected 1,090 points for their third place finish, while Mt. Holyoke, the winners, scored 22 and Colby-Sawyer College, the second place finishers, scored 20.

Conn riders collected fourth in the Child's Medal, fifth in the Speed, and sixth in the Nations Cup. Holly Bantister took blue ribbons in their first class in beginner walk-trot, and rose to fourth in the Speed. In beginner walk-trot-canter and Randi Hansen won a blue in advanced walk-trot-caller.

An additional five Conn riders also took ribbons in beginner walk-trot, with Kit Parsonen third, Holly Mick fourth, and Allys Hall fifth in the Speed.}

LEARN TO SWIM WEEK

Monday through Thursday, April 14 - April 17, 9:30:11:35 a.m. and 1:30-3:30 p.m. at the Croo Pool —