Spirit of '45

Six years ago today Russian and American soldiers hugged each other as they joined forces at the River Elbe, representing the virtual end of the battle for Europe. One of the American infantrymen who met his former enemies, the pledge they all made that day in April. His name is Joseph Polowsky, and right now he's driving a taxicab in the city of Chicago. We quote from his letter to us:

"It is to be peaceful, mankind must remember the day in modern world history which so perfectly symbolized world brotherhood and peace. The spirit of April 25, 1945, when men met as friends and as brothers at the Elbe River and at San Francisco for the future, is as high as and as broad as the aspirations of all mankind for a better world. Whatever works for peace and the brotherhood of man works in the spirit of April 25, 1945.

As one of the six American infantymen to make the bow crossing over the Elbe six years ago, as one of the United Nations, to take the Oath at the Elbe, I join something of the thoughts and feelings of all of us on this Sixth Anniversary.

I therefore join in calling upon the nations for a new birth of conciliation and friendship, that the Oath sworn on the modern world history which so perfectly symbolized world brotherhood and peace. The spirit of April 25, 1945, when men met as friends and as brothers at the Elbe River and at San Francisco for the future, is as high as and as broad as the aspirations of all mankind for a better world. Whatever works for peace and the brotherhood of man works in the spirit of April 25, 1945.

Documents Reveal Insight Into Life of Colonial Times

A collection of letters and documents dating from the Colonial and Early National Period supplied Mr. Chester Dexter with material for an interesting talk at the Mount Holyoke Library before the Kiwanis Club of the Library. The letters were contributed to the Library by an anonymous giver, Miss Alice S. Bishop of New London, Mr. Gilbert Brown, and Mr. Ross Gordon Graves. Mr. Dexter found that the documents provide considerable insight into the lives of the people who lived on both sides of the Thames during the Colonial and Early National Periods.

The speaker cited a letter written to his wife by a soldier at the age of 14 who was serving in the American Revolutionary War. It was written to Mrs. Silas Adams already envisioning an American nation, as some have around him and had already been for some time. Another item, a subscription, dated July 23, 1770, was for the purpose of providing money and food for the troops of the "Dismayed people of Boston" and also discovered in these documents.

Mr. Dexter discovered the use of the meaningful phrase "our country" in a document dated December, 1775. This letter to a man who had enlisted "to see and defend our country and its liberties." Another interesting item concern the Revolution was found in a letter written by William Ledyard and referred to the stealing of some powder from Fort Griswold. The Justice of the Peace of Groton in the year 1780 received a letter from the "thinkers" in the "linden" reporting the violation of the Sabbath by four young men who "did believe in a very sad lukewarm, and unbecoming manner by joking and laughing all of which doing is against a section statute law of these states." A bill of sale, dated December 11, 1723, stated that a negro slave. See "Colonial Papers."—Page 6

Dorm Discussions Highlight Senior Prom Theme

Among the highlights of the Marriage Conference on Wednesday, April 19, and Thursday, April 21, were the informal discussions held in the dorm living rooms. Dr. Hilda C. Standish, of Hartford, and Dr. Frances E. Sheilds, of New York City, offered comfortable, informal opportunities for students to bring up any questions which were bothering them. Instead of straight lectures the discussions were held on a question and answer basis. Long engagements was one subject under discussion. If we are half way through college, should we want to marry if possible? Dr. Standish says yes. If we have gone this far with our education it is important to finish it.

Compromise Important

When asked how she feels about the importance of similar backgrounds in marriage, Dr. Standish answered that each person with different backgrounds can make a happy marriage, providing that both are willing to talk out their differences and come to a kind of compromise.

Different religious backgrounds are, perhaps, the most difficult to reconcile, although there have been many happy marriages when a complete understanding has been reached. Concerning different educational backgrounds, this, similarly, is not ideal but each person should learn to and has many interests.

Dr. Standish ended one of her discussions with the sage advice that "strange as it may seem, you cannot have a home in the proper sense until you are half way through college." She stressed that it is important to finish it. "Two people should wait to marry for that reason;" she added.

If you have been many happy marriages, you have gone a long way. If you have not, you should not give up.

Senior Prom Theme Depicts Barnum & Bailey's Big Show

If you had been a guest at the senior prom last Saturday night you wouldn't have been able to tell whether you were at Knowlton Salon or Barnum & Bailey's three ring circus , since every effort was made by the refreshment, entertainment and decoration committees to depict the oddities of Ringling Brothers.

At the rear entrance of Knowlton stood a painted cardboard harlequin who greeted the arriving couples. Over the door leading into the salon hung a crepe paper tent, and various animals were painted on the walls. Crepe paper bars covered the animals which looked as though they were locked in cages. On the mirrors were painted trap doors and back rider performers.

There was a paper hoop behind the bandstand, and the entertainers, who emerged from the new fire exit, burst through the hoop onto the stage. The senior members of the Double Octet, the Shwifts, and the Choral Trio, who performed, were bedecked with large white gloves, black masks, and horns willing to ring the clove.

The circus theme was also carried out in the dining rooms where punch and popcorn were served as refreshments. A huge clown's head hung in front of the fireplace.

Caught on Campus

There may soon be more than one violation of 1770 in the New London campus. According to a news release, station WNLC will air an application with the Federal Communications Commission for a TV construction permit in the New London area. This station is planned for television as early as 1961 when new studios and offices were constructed to accommodate the new facilities. The station, according to the release, will be able to broadcast entertainment programs, public service announcements, and public interest programming.

The release promises that the station will be a service to the community, with a focus on educational and cultural programs. The station will also feature local news and weather, and will be available to area residents through a variety of distribution methods.

Fontaine, was sold to a townswoman of New London by another New Londoner.

The New London constabulary of the 1770s seemed to have had no use at all for transients. A writ dated 1772 authorizes the seizure of such a figure who was accused of drunkenness. The fellow was put in stocks for an hour, and then jailed until a heavy fine of £50 plus the sheriff's fee was paid.

A most pertinent commentary on the social life of this period is found in the letter of Miss W. J. Dering to Mrs. D. Cowles of Opalcity, Conn. Miss Dering, who wrote on March 29, 1911, related that she had been in New London for three weeks and did not regret her late arrival as she had escaped the cacophony of the local bollies who had participated in "forty days of balls and parties... Sundays excepted with the Navy officers whom, she assumed, "are not supposed generally men of the most arctic moral perceptions."

Campus Interviews on Cigarette Tests

Number 18... THE RACCOON

"They can't trick an old grad like me!"

Shades of the raucous 'Twenty! All duded up in his ancient benny—but he has modern ideas on testing cigarette mildness! He's tried every "quickie" cigarette test in the book—and they're not fooling him one bit! He knows for dang-sure that cigarette mildness can't be determined by a cursory sniff or a single, quickly-dispatched puff. He doesn't have to go back to school to know that there is one real test—a test that dispels doubt, fixes fact.

It's the sensible test...the 30-Day Camel Mildness Test, which asks you to try Camels as your steady smoke—on a pack-after-pack, day-after-day basis. No snap judgments needed. After you've enjoyed Camels—and only Camels—for 30 days in your "T-Zone" (T for Throat, T for Taste), we believe you'll know why...

More People Smoke Camels
than any other cigarette!
