

Connecticut College

Digital Commons @ Connecticut College

1972-1973

Student Newspapers

4-5-1973

Pundit Vol. 57 No. 8

Connecticut College

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.conncoll.edu/ccnews_1972_1973

Recommended Citation

Connecticut College, "Pundit Vol. 57 No. 8" (1973). 1972-1973. 4.
https://digitalcommons.conncoll.edu/ccnews_1972_1973/4

This Newspaper is brought to you for free and open access by the Student Newspapers at Digital Commons @ Connecticut College. It has been accepted for inclusion in 1972-1973 by an authorized administrator of Digital Commons @ Connecticut College. For more information, please contact bpancier@conncoll.edu.
The views expressed in this paper are solely those of the author.

Frito Pundito

CONNECTICUT COLLEGE

PURE CORN

New London, Conn.

Vol. 57

April 5, 1973

No. 8

Linda Lovelace lectures on lechery

By CARIN GORDON

Members of the class of '73 Pick a Speaker, (Any Speaker) Committee have announced that the movie "Deep Throat" will be screened at commencement exercises this spring instead of the usual speaker. The decision came after an eight hour meeting of the committee that lasted into the early morning hours.

A spokeswoman for the Any Speaker Committee explained that a poll printed in PUNDIT revealed that 87 percent of the senior class favored showing the movie starring Linda Lovelace. "With 360 of the class's 396 students returning the poll this certainly expresses an overwhelming opinion."

The next closest suggestion was for a speaker, Henry Kissinger, followed closely by Gloria Steinem. Several seniors suggested having no commencement exercises at all.

Linda Lovelace

Reasons for the drastic change from speaker to movie were summed up by the committee spokeswoman. "First of all the senior class decided to make commencement a money-making affair. Admission will be charged, graduating seniors getting in for half price. Then of course there is the wide spread demand among members of the Conn. community for the movie."

Peter Paris in charge of the Friday night movie series on campus said he could get "Deep Throat" for us, but the only date the movie would be available is May 20, the day of commencement. A lot of members of the class of '73 are just sick of hearing people talk, and speakers in the past haven't been that exciting."

President Shain, Jewell Cobb, Dean of Seniors; and Margaret Watson, Dean of Student Affairs were all unavailable for comment.

latest target of vadalism - fire in J A Boys+booze=vandalism

By ROBERT FISHER

Dean Jewel Plummer Bob, of the College, today announced that campus vandalism has reached an all time high, financially speaking. Dean Bob associated the tremendous increase in vandalism to two major sources; the male population on campus and the increased drinking problem the majority of students seem to possess.

"I realize that boys must burn off extra energy after classes, but the fire in Jane Adams last week was the last straw," Dean Cobb stated in an interview yesterday. "These boys just don't seem to have any sense. I think they should all see psychiatrists!"

In order to cope with this increase in student vandalism, Chief of Security Irwin Brady has enlisted the service of additional security guards. These additional security members are determined to reduce the vandalism on campus. Not being intimidated in the least, several security members have proposed the idea of donning black boots and whipping offenders. Several students, however, have been induced to increase their vandal attacks under such a threat.

Dean Bob believes that the male population on campus is responsible for the corruption of the fine girls who attend Conn. College. "All the guys on this campus are just boys, all they ever do is play," commented female senior Darling Milne. "This place was really great until they were admitted." "All the boys are just money diggers," added Harriet Goldfield.

The alcohol also seems to have destroyed several student minds. "All they ever do is drink, especially rum and ginger ale," stated senior Penny Wade. "These boys just need a good mother to take care of them. They're really just poor, lost babies."

security guards

"The only solution to this problem," explained senior Michelle Ferrar, "is to put all the boys in a box with their liquor and ship them to the nearest Army base for some real training on how to be men!" Concerned senior Diane Michaels supplemented Miss Ferrar's comment by saying, "After all, unless we teach them how to be men, we'll never be taken out to dinner."

The problem on campus will only be solved with time. All concerned students, however, are encouraged to attend a meeting in Branford living room at 8:00 a.m. on Friday morning. Dear Bob has promised to appear and discuss the problem. Men are also invited, provided they will relinquish their seats to ladies, if necessary.

Calendar proposes new school month

By LAURA DACOSTA and CARIN GORDON

After much discussion the Academic Committee has finally proposed a calendar which is satisfactory to students, faculty, and administration.

Students have expressed their approval of the 1973-74 calendar through a poll in last week's PUNDIT. Faculty are expected to support it when it comes up at their April meeting.

Because the new calendar solves the budget crisis and meets Connecticut College's high academic requirements, it also has the support of President Charles Shain.

No freshmen orientation has been included in the new calendar. It is believed as Dean of Freshman, Joan King commented, "Incoming freshmen are increasingly mature and easily adaptable to the college experience; orientation has become obsolete."

Pre-registration will be conducted through the mail one week prior to the beginning of each semester. Classes will not begin until October 1, enabling students to hold their summer jobs longer. This also eliminated the Labor Day Weekend controversy.

Since each semester lasts approximately 25 days the facilities of the school can be rented for longer periods. This brings increased revenues which allows for expansion of academic programs during the school month and for an increased building program.

By holding review period on Monday and Tuesday the weekend is not sacrificed, thus eliminating the feelings of guilt for pursuing other than academic interests on weekends.

Ending first semester late in October means a longer skiing season can be enjoyed. Ending the school month in March puts Conn. students at the head of the summer job scramble.

Examination day consists of nine self-scheduled exam periods, each enduring one hour — three in the morning, three in the afternoon, and three in the evening.

New courses instituted because of the new calendar include speed reading, computer typing, and the art of cramming.

Spring Commencement Day will be held before second semester examination day to ensure that all seniors will graduate.

There may be a fight over acceptance of this calendar because factions on campus are pushing for an alternate calendar which calls for the addition of three days to each week.

However, the increasing plea for spiritual priorities and world discovery has been answered by the new calendar which provides for self-discovery and a lot of time on your hands.

The new calendar is as follows:

1973

October 1, Monday — Classes begin; all students arrive. Period of change for individual program begins. Period for filing for pass-fail option begins.

2 Tuesday — Period of change for individual program ends. Period for filing for pass-fail option ends.

5 Friday — Fall recess begins 5:00 p.m.

14 Sunday — Fall recess ends 11:30 p.m.

22-23 Monday — Tuesday — Review period

24 Wednesday — Examination Day.

25 Thursday — Winter recess begins; dormitories close at 4:00 p.m.

1974

March 4, Monday — Classes begin; all students arrive. Period of change for individual program begins. Period for filing for pass-fail option begins.

5 Tuesday — Period of change for individual program ends. Period of change for pass-fail option ends.

8 Friday — Spring recess begins 5:00 p.m.

17 Sunday — Spring recess ends 11:30 p.m.

25-26 Monday-Tuesday — Review period.

27 Wednesday — Commencement Day

28 Thursday — Examination Day.

29 Friday — Summer recess begins; dormitories close at 4:00 p.m.

Relax with Rufus

Today is Election Day. As students, we are forced to determine who are the most qualified candidates. The Editorial Board of PUNDIT has given it considerable thought and we have decided that the most able candidate for the President of the Senior Class does not appear on the ballot. Therefore, we are organizing a write-in campaign for the best qualified leader of the Senior Class, Rufus Willauer.

At arriving at this decision, the Board considered the duties of the Senior Class President to determine the most qualified candidate. Who else could give a speech at Commencement and really have everyone's attention except a speaking dog? Who else could sniff out all the possible Commencement speakers and select one who pleased the entire Community? (Dissenters are reminded of Rufus' large teeth). Besides, Rufus is known by more Community members than anyone else and has been a student here longer than anyone else.

Relax with Rufus, the Board believes, is an appropriate campaign platform. Overall, Rufus is easily the most qualified candidate and everyone is encouraged to write him in on the senior class presidential ballot. After all, isn't it a dog's world?

Going abroad ? Consider Lithuanian Studies

By Mark Milloff

Im'a not wanting to beat the bush, as you Americans say, so straight to the point I will get. Im'a professor Verne Oldonkytitz, and one of your teachers Im'a to be. There is many thing for which we have for to offer you. Im'a personably going to Polish Literature be, we, for you, going to read Sears and Roebuck catalogue, 1958-59 issue.

Also we have to offer you, music course by Lawrence Welk, who for you will teach many dance and song from colorful Luthanian native. Such song will be: Im'a Teapot Little, Im'a in a mood to be for Love, I'm Stranger In The Night, and the national anthem of Lithuania, to you, known as, 'yous a break today deserves, so up and away to McDungalds gets you, cetera cetera. To dance we learn to crawl, and if courses advanced were taken, walk.

Intermooral events of sports are for you to be mandatory. Tittle winks and leap the frog are for all much fun. So now, for me, there is much to do. We very much are forward looking you'r arrival. And if free vacation, you might have, to Luthuania you must come. Prejudiced, were not. Even dumb peoples are allowed here.

Little Miss Muffet
Sat on a tuffet,
Eating her curds and whey...

Those afflicted with in-group Americanism feel that Little Miss Muffet was frightened away because a spider sat down beside her. Professor Festus Grunt, director of the Authoritarian Personality Evaluation Institute, a National Institute of Mental Health funded interdisciplinary group, has countered this ethnocentric mythology with the view that Miss Muffet's suspicion, distrust, and panic can be more clearly understood as the result of Muffet's effort to maintain integrity and self-esteem at the expense of others.

Implicit in Muffet's attitude, Grunt explained, is a strong distrust of those who are different and therefore alien. Her actions indicate that "she not only accepted the national paranoid delusions of persecution and megalomania that attracted WASPS, small businessmen, rural Midwesterners, and other churls to McCarthyism, but she has pronounced delusions of persecution in regard to her own person."

Social psychiatrist Rodbart Coals added "Muffet's actions indicate that she is emotionally unstable, immature, hostile, and mentally unbalanced." Such ultra-reactionary rightist qualities are often the result of arrested psycho-sexual maturation, Coals explained. Coals noted that it is probable Miss Muffet was a Goldwater supporter since she demonstrated the pathological prejudice and unconscious visceral hatreds that attracted twenty-seven million unbalanced persons to the Arizona Senator.

Noted political scientist Thomas F. Petticoat observed that the simplistic, impulsive, unreflective qualities evident in Muffetism (a term coined by political pornography expert Herb Rott) identify the "authoritarian personalities" who tend to project their own inner problems onto persons and events outside themselves. Petticoat noted that such a person perceives every social encounter as dangerous, interprets every provocation as threatening. Were Miss Muffet more willing to accommodate the legitimate aspirations of spiders, he suggested she would not have taken such illiberal, unilateral escapist action.

Sociologist Antonio Fraudulio pointed out that the person who is politically and economically conservative usually comes from a home that represents a prototype of the authoritarian world. Their rigidity inclines them to stereotypic thinking. Such persons rarely substitute for patriotic intuition the nostrums of we Intellectual Messiahs, he lamented. Fraudulio concluded that Miss Muffet's actions conform to the basic pattern exhibited by the authoritarian. With varying degrees of self-righteousness and inflexibility, persons bred by conventionally and fundamentalist religious convictions see society as a neatly ordered hierarchy in which their group occupies a select place. To the extent this preferential position is threatened, there is a presumption of foul play.

Political scientist Wing Wong Chefung stated that from a symbolic projection perspective the menace of cosmopolitanism and sweeping change which Miss Muffet interpreted as an affront to her security and status were projected as an irrational fear, suspiciousness, and distrust of spiders. Dr. Chefung pointed out that Miss Muffet demonstrated the typical paranoid reaction of the marginally insecure person that becomes transformed into a conspiracy belief. "Muffet," Chefung feels, "was seeking to turn back the clock of twentieth-century industrialization, back to an era when people sat on tuffets, ate whey, and handled international problems unilaterally. Her projection of her own fears, hostilities, and inadequacies prevented her from displaying statesmanlike qualities, of seeking bold new approaches. I mean, how did she know the spider's intentions were not peaceful? And why not a coalition government to share the tuffet? And who was Miss Muffet to consume whey that should have been nationalized by the spider for the benefit of all the people? Anyway, let's look at it from the spider's view-point."

Tommy W. Rogers

DUE TO THE
SHORTAGE OF
TRAINED TRUMPETERS,
THE END OF
THE WORLD WILL BE TEMPORARILY POSTPONED

photos by mishk it and paine

Concert
Connecticut College
Chorus
and Chords
and
Lehigh University

Sunday April 8
3:00 pm

Dana Hall

Confiscation of Conn College

PUNDI April 5, 1973, page 4

By CARIN GORDON

Crozier-Williams, the motive and the Pinkerton guards were the last remaining questions today in the great Connecticut college robbery.

An anonymous tip Monday led police to a smog-enshrouded island seven miles off the coast of New Haven after almost the entire Connecticut College campus was stolen early Sunday.

Detectives found 21 dormitories, Cummings Art Center, Harkness Chapel, Warnshuis Infirmary, New London, Fanning, Bill, Hillyer, Winthrop, and Thames Halls, Palmer Library, Hale Laboratory and the language lab. But only Crozier-Williams Center was left untouched on campus.

Police arrested members of Asp, a newly-organized club on campus recently granted funds by College Council. The members were charged with possession of stolen property. But a police spokesman said the motive for the robbery remained unclear.

Meanwhile back at the site of the robbery at Connecticut College, President Charles Shain was wondering what the Pinkerton guards were doing while thieves smashed several padlocks, tore down a fence, dug several deep trenches and loaded the buildings onto waiting trailers.

"Crozier-Williams wasn't harmed at all, just left there," said a puzzled President Shain, "it's very strange."

Thanks to Associated Press's "The Great Coney Island Zoo Robbery," which appeared in the Auburn, New York "Citizen Advertiser."

the remains of connecticut college

How deep into debt are we ?

Knee deep

Students replace Shain

By CARIN GORDON

Going along with suggestions made by the Ad Hoc Finance Committee, a student will replace President Shain when he resigns next fall.

Responding to demands by the Connecticut College community to help alleviate Conn's financial situation, the Finance Comm. offered several ideas including the suggestion that student help replace employees of the college who quit or retire.

An assistant to the President explained, "Interviews will be held and applications are being accepted for the position."

The Board of Trustees will make the final decision. Members of the Administration, Faculty, and student body have submitted to the Board their ideas of the qualities the next President should possess.

Applications have been open for two weeks, but so far only two applications have been returned. One is from former two-term student government president Jay Levin. Levin, graduating this spring, plans to return to Conn next year as a graduate student.

The second application was received from Josephine Curran. Ms. Curran, former vice-president of student government, recently lost her bid for the presidency of student government.

Student help has already replaced two thirds of the Physical Plant staff, Dean of Student Affairs, and manager of the Bookstore.

Many of the Finance Committee's ideas have helped Conn out of its finance problems. So much so that Treasurer of the school Leroy Knight forsee's student allotments for the coming fall. Knight commented, "A student will probably receive $15 or $20 a week, but tuition will continue to rise."

Come One! Come All!

New tire sale

'Italian Snow Tires

...straight from Italy

New Patented
'Boot' Design

New Italian Heels!
(They really dig in!)

Dago thru Water---
Dago thru Mud---
Dago thru Snow---
Dago thru Ice---

And when Dago Flat

Dago - WOP! WOP! WOP!!!

Exhibitionism's Revealing History

By DUANE CHASE

Not many people realize that exhibitionists have been in the history of man since his first fig leaf dropped suggestively in the prehistoric winds. An analysis of this germaine practice is definitely in order at this time due to the "exhibition explosion" that has displayed itself to the public in this decadent year.

First, a clean, divulging, definition of an exhibitionist should be given: Webster states an exhibitionist as one, "who flagrantly reveals his genitals for at least one other person some of the time." (An auto exhibitionist is not included in this definition.)

In prehistoric times, exhibitionism was apparently rampant. The best artifacts that have been uncovered to date manifest cave men did more with their fur clothes than just wear them around the hunting grounds. Two prime examples of prehistoric exhibition are the famous paintings on the Uterine Walls of Flashe-Ball France (See Figure 1) and Old Indian jugs found on an old Indian in Yur-dongi, India. (see Figure 2)

Although it has not been documented in the Archeology Anthology (sic), it has been reputed that Louis B. Leaki had found etchings in preserved buffalo droppings of young girls lifting their waist furs in front of young wombats. He also reported a young girl had lifted her fur at the wrong time of month and was gored by a raging bull who saw red.

Oriental history is permeated with clear examples of exhibitionism. The Chinese were fond of dropping their coolie pants in front of the setting sun. Heresa Bitta Wang, famed Chinese historian, has come up with a new painting which was found in a box of torn laundry tickets deep in China. It is of Marco Penisolo being punished by Empress Titsare Ripye for dropping his polo shorts. The following inscription was found in the painting, "Dropping pants in front of Empress is not best way to bring fortune to your cookies." (see Figure 3.)

The famed jokester Confucious wrote in that profound monograph of horseleather, "He who drops his coolie hot pants in a fog will not keep his ball bearings straight."

Romans were famed for their exhibitionist banterings. Probably the most famous statue of Roman exposure is of Sodomus Gomorus. (see Figure 4)

Livy wrote in the Jokuli Pro Thunder Juggem, "Quis de-cendare togem evit draw a fagos instar muscae ad shitterem." Cicero wrote in Altum Guttur (Deep Throat), "Extendo dongo initium actionem celeretate." Of course these Roman exposure techniques have come down to the present day. One only has to hear the expression "Roman hands" and "Roman style" to know that Romans left a profound influence on modern day activities.

The Middle Italian Period is oozing with choice examples of those who displayed the "open door" clothing policy. Copudicus writes, "Who needus astrem? Gotta owna persona luna!" (see Figure 5) A famous painting by Antonio Pisinyerero and Jan Von Dick is also an excellent example. (see Figure 6)

Let us now examine two examples from recent times to discern how modern man has opened up to exhibitionism.

Music is a part of man's heritage, just as literature and art. Music, too, has shown its acceptance of the age old practice of exposure. The best example is Morrisorki's Pictures at an Exhibition. (see Figure 7) Another example is Tchaikovsky's Overcoat of 1812.

The reason this monograph was written was to dispell the fears of a few individuals dwelling on this campus. One only has to reflect back to the dark ages of last semester to a letter to the editor written by a mature, intelligent, perceptive, sage of Harkness to realize how misunderstood the art of exhibitionism has become. Suddenly I was hit by a truck ...

1. Harold Holdyawong, "Chinese exhibits for fun and profit," from Ho Chi Min Trail Boys Scout Manual, July, 1953.
2. "He who drops his toga will draw fags like flies to shit."

Cross Words

Across

- 1- Fonication
- 5- wife of uncle
- 8- Pass gas
- 12- Oh Darling— me
- 15- Chinese symbol for 'Nixon now more than ever'
- 16- Roman numeral 10,123
- 17- A Rumanian Folk dance
- 20- very berry
- 21- Another Rumanian Folk Dance
- 41- two letter word in caterpillar language for 'pass the chicken'
- 49- orange orange
- 55- longest Polish word
- 64- Flipper's real name

Down

- 1- same a#7
- 7- What has 18 legs and catches Flies?
- 30- A baseball team.
- 37- why are cooks mean?
- 44- They whip cream and beat eggs.
- 46- why can't they feed prisoners chocolate?
- 33- It makes them Break out.

1	2	3	4	5	6	7
8	9	10	11	12	13	14
15	16	17	18	19	20	21
22	23	24	25	26	27	28
29	30	31	32	33	34	35
36	37	38	39	40	41	42
43	44	45	46	47	48	49
50	51	52	53	54	55	56
57	58	59	60	61	62	63
64	65	66	67	68	69	70
71	72	73	74	75	76	77

STUDENT DISCOUNT CARD

LARRY OLSHAN
Store Manager

Firestone STORES

45 Truman Street
New London, Connecticut 06320
Opp. Motor Vehicle Agency

30% discount off list on tires, this is an introductory offer. Except tires that are on sale. When tire is on sale you will be allowed 5% off per tire.

Phone 443-4361

Larry Olshan
Store Mgr.

answer on page 21

LIBERAL ARTS MAJORS

Wanted by the Peace Corps in 58 countries to teach and to work in health, agriculture, and public works projects. Application deadline is April 12. Contact your Placement Office or call Jim Eckardt: 212-264-7124.

This is the April Fools issue of Pundit if you haven't guessed already. Any names or events are purely fictitious and any similarity to real occurrences is purely accidental. We hope we haven't offended anyone and if we have, it's April Fools, so laugh!

Park plague proof positive of pill peril for public

PUNDIT April 5, 1973, page 6

By STUART MEYERS

The swarm of newsmen that converged on the staid, somewhat sensual hills of Conn. College were dismayed at the appearance of the rather mottley bunch that comprise what is only the third major undefeated college basketball team in the country — The Park Plague Plethora People. The corps didn't take kindly to wearing surgical masks and gowns but under adverse warning from our world renowned infirmiry staff, they felt their safety was more important than their appearance. The Conn. College Staff Doctor, who preferred to remain anonymous, maintains that Park owes their overwhelming basketball success to infesting the opposition with a strain of The Park Pestilence that incapacitates a victim or at least renders him incapable of speaking coherently. The press fairly gasped at this news since they could neither speak OR write coherently. The Conn. College Staff Doctor noted this development as yet another variable in dealing with The Park

Pest as he led the literati to their respective quarantine quarters high up in the Lynn Allen Museum (you may have wondered what the two years of alterations were all about). It was indeed a major mystery as to how this unranked, unheralded, unkept, malignant mass of basketball privy became a contender with the likes of U.C.L.A. and North Carolina State for newspaper headlines. Park's supremacy has been such that they were subjected to more than just a mere saliva test after each victory and it was in this way that their secret was unearthed - the medical corps found a couple corpses beyond Lazrus House that were conclusively matched to some of Park's previous opponents. The condition of the bodies were just ghastly, said a reliable source, as they suffered an advanced case of wrinkles and retentive writer's cramp. Needless to say, an all pervasive publicity clamp was put on this macabre story to enhance Park's image within the college community and to keep hysteria down to an everyday minimum. But this publication's pointed inquiries and spunky nature maintains The Public Has A Right To Know! It is in the community interest that this story is written. The Park Players can only be held for negligent homicide, in lieu of sterilization, but I'm sure everyone would agree that basketball supremacy is more important than mere mortality. So as the basketball season at Conn. lingers to a close, Beware of the Bug or be sure just to peek at Park People.

Milloff's mélange

