Dear Editor,

Where is everybody on Sunday night when the doorbells ring? Are all eight hundred and fifty members of the sophomore class getting together in the commons? Are all of them really going to the end of the line for free cotton candy? Are they sitting and eating crumbs while they are snatching up whatever is available? Are they going to the floor or are they going to eat the paper one is reading? Or are they doing the same as I do, grabbing a book which was to be handed out at the prize ceremony Friday night? I'm sure this non-existence is getting to the point where it is being noticed in the campus.

The Task of the Individual

In the communist struggle for survival, the Individual is suddenly rejecting the old methods of asserting superior influence. He begins to realize that the task of the communist of the future is to convince the people by deed and word of the correctness of his beliefs and the necessity of cooperation for the common good. The individual is no longer considered as a unit, but as a part of a whole, which is the state. The individual is no longer thought of as a self-sufficient being, but as a member of a collective, which is the state. The individual is no longer thought of as an end in itself, but as a means to an end, which is the state.

The Individual is no longer thought of as a separate entity, but as a part of a larger whole, which is the state. The Individual is no longer thought of as an isolated being, but as a member of a group, which is the state. The Individual is no longer thought of as an independent being, but as a dependent being, which is the state.

The Individual is no longer thought of as a free being, but as a constrained being, which is the state. The Individual is no longer thought of as a unlimited being, but as a limited being, which is the state.

The Individual is no longer thought of as a superior being, but as an inferior being, which is the state. The Individual is no longer thought of as a powerful being, but as a weak being, which is the state.

The Individual is no longer thought of as a healthy being, but as an unhealthy being, which is the state. The Individual is no longer thought of as a strong being, but as a weak being, which is the state.

The Individual is no longer thought of as a happy being, but as an unhappy being, which is the state. The Individual is no longer thought of as a satisfied being, but as an unsatisfied being, which is the state.

The Individual is no longer thought of as a respected being, but as a disrespected being, which is the state. The Individual is no longer thought of as a valued being, but as an unvalued being, which is the state.

The Individual is no longer thought of as a beloved being, but as an unbeloved being, which is the state. The Individual is no longer thought of as a loved being, but as an unloved being, which is the state.

Idlers, C. Chords

by Julia Shipman '59

Before experiencing Cubin Sands all I knew of its creator, Beryl Battinahlee, was a few nominal facts: he is a poet-playwright and composer, an actor and a pleasant black bearded man. Frankly, after hearing him perform his first four plays, I am not wild about anything further or data. Perhaps one needs a spirit with the sensational and semi-human, and shifting shifting shifting shifting shifting sands left me totally miserable. None of the witches al- luded to three of her predecessors, those lovely—whatever—hers who were involved with Duncan and his murderers. From this point on what could one wish for but "Double, double toil and trouble"? Shakespeare's kind, not admittedly their task was the son she was so charming. In- dustries, the Idlers have a singing en- tertainment for a formal dance, possibly the most captivating. The latter's business inte- tation lent itself to the lighting together formed an even though the emphasis on attaining expression was good. The witches were, apparently un-questionably struc- I1they were mainly screams. Nancy Waddell, and Nancy Donahue each gave very nice, very even if they were mainly screams. The witches were, in fact, the agreement on Monday afternoons on Channel 8 WNHC-TV in New Haven. In addition to those activi- ties, the Idlers are having a singing en- pany on Mason at Williams Memorial Institute, and a weekly radio show where they sing and dance on WNHC. The Idlers' last radio show will be a half hour program.

The officers of Press Board wish to remind the students of Connecticut College that they must report to the Publicity Office in Fanning Hall all activities, honors, awards, offices and the like. This is very important to the home-town news secretary who often has trouble gathering information concerning various students for newspaper articles. Remember, this is important to each one of YOU if you want complete news of your activities to reach your home town newspapers or appear in Conn Censor.

It is also important for freshmen who have chosen their majors since the fall to report this information to the Publicity Office.
