Student Carrying Theater Props Sparks Numerous Calls to Campus Safety

Kathie STEPHENSON

Kathie had a take-gun in a bag. Goodwin continued the explanation. "I was looking at the bag because the person with the prop gun and not the administration that had been called that the problem had been dealt with. The police said "solved very quickly," said Wood Brooks.

In a chase through the campus, the alleged gun-wielding man was caught near a dorm and was apprehended by the police. The man was later identified as a student at the college.

During the incident, campus safety officers were called to respond to the situation.

Prop Gun Brings Visits from NLPD

The Connecticut College community is reacting to an incident that occurred on campus last week. The incident involved a student carrying an unlicensed prop gun, which sparked numerous calls to campus safety.

The student, who had been identified as a member of the drama club, was carrying the prop gun during a rehearsal for a play. The prop gun was not a real firearm, but it was convincing enough to cause concern among students and faculty.

According to campus safety officials, the student was stopped and the prop gun was confiscated.

The incident has raised questions about the need for stronger measures to prevent such incidents from happening in the future.

Custodial Services Disillusioned by Excessive Dorm Violations

Sensitivity training to address the issue is being discussed.

By LAURA STRONG

Although the efforts of the Connecticut College Custodial Services to address the problem of alcohol consumption during your visits and other activities has been successful, some students find the situation difficult to handle.

The college's custodial services have been working to address the issue of alcohol consumption in dorms.

The college has implemented several measures to reduce alcohol consumption in dorms, including the installation of card readers on dorm room doors and the implementation of a policy that prohibits alcohol in dorms.

However, despite these efforts, students continue to report excessive alcohol consumption in dorms.

Connecticut College Receives $10 Million Dollar Gift

Although Connecticut College has been known for its commitment to academic excellence, recent news has highlighted the importance of philanthropy in supporting the college's mission.

The college has recently received a significant gift of $10 million dollars.

The gift was made by an anonymous donor, who has expressed a strong interest in supporting the college's efforts to provide a top-notch education for its students.

The college is currently seeking additional donations to support its academic programs.

Replace Judiciary Board withPeer Jury System

With the recent resignment of seven of nine members of the J-Board, the Board and its effective dissolution, the future of the Honor Code at Conn College is now in jeopardy. The office of the Dean of Residential Life and the Honor Code are now in the hands of the student-run Honor Board, and the HOCJ-Board fiscal policy. Last year, two J-Board members refused to participate in the trial of a member of the Board and four other members subsequently broke the Board's stated confidentiality policy.

The Voice believes that by alerting house staff, residential life hopes to recover some of the respect and frustration that was lost to the students.

Students Should be Held Accountable forExcessive Mess

On the day before Floralia XXII, which brought hundreds of students to the works of destruction and autonomy to campus, The College Voice published an article by Remote Access, which detailed community discontent with the release of the Coordination of shipments and the problem in the New England community. Let us be clear, the disinclination of the honor board was not due to a lack of interest in the issue; quite the contrary. Remote Access suggested that it was an open forum. The honor board is not enough to make students take responsibility for the messes beyond what can reasonably be expected by the staff. As Goodwin says, “students tend to have a head rush that is Conn College exam week, doesn’t do me any good.”

We argue that getting the word out is not the feasible way to make sure students participate in the campus. For this purpose, the honor board is not enough. More than increasing awareness and encouraging respect for the facility as a whole, the honor board will not be able to make students participate in the daily cleaning of the campus.

Read This When You’re so Stressed That You Could Just Die

At this point in the year you’ve got to take the time to get away from it all. Relaxation enables you to be good at what you do. Rhode Island is a good place to find relaxation. I am reminded of the name of the Martha’s Vineyard song: “A Place in the Sun.” But linked verse, when you are engaged in the work that I have is: I have some work. Well, you may not believe in some things, but don’t tell me that you don’t think that many things are good. Sometimes being tired is fun. It’s like you’re drunk and feeling...

To read the works of authors and poets is to gain a window into the modern psyche. When significant voices are silenced, we find ourselves at an impasse, forced to question the nature of the world and our place within it. Whether the artist is engaged in the celebration of existence, the lamentation of sorrow, or the documentation of the human condition, their voice remains a testament to the enduring human spirit.

The significance of the works of Quarrel, Jersild, and Perini is evident in their ability to explore the complexities of human experience. Quarrel’s short story about a woman whose sister suffers from schizophrenia offers a poignant reminder of the resilience and strength that can be found within individuals facing adversity. Jersild’s poetry, rooted in personal and historical events, serves as a reflection on the impermanence of parenthood, a theme that resonates with many readers.

Perini’s novels, considered essential reading, offer a rich tapestry of characters and settings, each woven with the threads of real-life experiences and fictional inventions. His ability to blend fact and fiction is a hallmark of his work, creating a narrative that is both compelling and thought-provoking.

In conclusion, the works of Quarrel, Jersild, and Perini serve as a testament to the power of literature in our lives. They challenge us to reflect on our own experiences and to empathize with others, ultimately enriching our understanding of the world and our place within it.

The Trustees Revealed: From Imagination to Identity

The list of criteria for becoming a trustee just that simple. It is not, however, a list of feelings, but a list of experiences, skills, and qualities. To be considered for this role, one must be willing to commit time to the college, financial support, and the college's mission.

This week, the college's president, John C. Cipriano, revealed the names of the new trustees. The list includes alumni, community leaders, and a retired college president.

The new trustees are

- Mary A. Connors, a retired college president
- Mark R. Fineman, a business executive
- Robert A. Lander, a retired college president
- Maryanne E. O'Reilly, a hospital administrator
- John P. Torrey, a retired college president

These individuals bring a diverse range of experiences and perspectives to the college, and their contributions will be invaluable in shaping the future of Connecticut College.
