Koiné

1951
The medium of every book is the written word. In 1951, our medium is also our subject: not only the written word, but the word printed, mimeographed, spoken in the classroom and giggled in the dorm. Webster tells us words are symbols of ideas or thoughts; for those infrequent intervals between ideas, we can always fall back on Webster’s second definition: words are language used emotionally.

The dynamism of words is no less real than the dynamism of action. In these pages, we are translating words into a portrait of Living.

These are the phrases we think and live by. We present them to you in the full context of the beauty of their setting. These are the words of Koine, and Koine is Connecticut.

Connecticut College
For Women,
New London, Conn.
In the beginning came a letter, and it contained the word "Accepted."...

To those of us who were fortunate enough to meet Dr. Cobbledick before we were an official part of Connecticut College, our letter of acceptance carried with it the memory of his cordial and sincere interest. Through our four years, we have come to know him as much more than a Director of Admissions; he has been to us both teacher and friend. A crowded front-office schedule has never prevented him from finding time to give us valuable help and advice. We would like to think that his primary interest in us has been somewhat rewarded by our growing admiration for him, and in evidence of this, on the silver anniversary of his service in the College, we dedicate our book to Dr. Cobbledick.
"The trouble with what everyone knows is that no one knows it with enthusiasm." In every lecture, in every assignment, our professors are teaching us the value of the well-defined term. They are teaching us to revitalize tired concepts like Democracy and Truth. They want us to know what we’re talking about.
We know Miss Park for the vitality and charm of her personality, the weight of her words, whether she is speaking to us or for us. "Insight", "Direction", and "Graciousness" are the terms we use most often to characterize her: they suggest the qualities which make her a compelling College President.

Although the word Campus includes all the college property, it is the sweep of lawn from the library to the auditorium that we most often think of when we say “across campus.” In boots and slickers on our way to the post office; in shirts and jeans to an 8 o’clock; in high heels, suitcase laden, to catch the 10:41; in caps and gowns to gather on the wall for moonlight singing; in gym suits on the playing field . . . this expanse of ground is the central focus of student activities. It is, perhaps, this view that we will most remember when we think of Connecticut.

From the seven a.m. sound of slippers scuffing down a corridor to the last bang of a transom at night, our dormitory life is punctuated by voices—raised in discussion, spiraled in laughter, or blended to the accompaniment of an almost-tuned uke. Even the routine phrases become special: they reflect the thinking and doing together that is so much a part of the spirit of C. C.

This Fall we observed the laying of the cornerstone of the new Infirmary. This cornerstone came as a symbol of the College's development, and we like to think that it can also serve to us as a symbol of successful years ahead.
We have spent four years at Connecticut College, and they have been good ones. From them we have received preparation for, and faith in, our future.
