Growing disagreement arises
Over the role of College Council

by Bonnie Greenwald

"There's a need to better formulate College Council's role," stated Rick Allen, president of Student Government. Both faculty and administration are tending to agree. However, not only Student Government, but the faculty as well, is evaluating and revamping their governmental structure in order to make their own system more effective as well as their relationship with the present student body.

One major problem at this time with the role of College Council is the way faculty members view its jurisdiction. Charles Luce, one of the three faculty members now serving on the council commented, "It's just a gut feeling but I think the students place more importance on College Council than the faculty does." Origins of Council

The problem, explained Dean Margaret Watson, Dean of Student Affairs and one of the administrator's representatives to council, goes back to the origins of the council. She explained that originally College Council was a Committee on Campus Life. That was how it received the responsibility of financing student organizations. The committee was rooted in Student Government, and faculty and administration were asked to send representatives. In 1979 the committee was renamed College Council. Both the fact that it was originally a Student Government committee and that it was designed to deal with student life have, according to Watson, influenced faculty opinions about the council.

Faculty Governance to be Restructured

David Snalley, chairman of a committee established last spring by the faculty on Faculty Governance, however, cited the problem of faculty response to the council as stemming from the inefficiency of their own governmental system. His committee is working to revamp faculty government which in turn will have a vast effect on College Council.

The Committee on Faculty Governance, comprised of Rick Bogel, William Cibes, F. Edward Craz, R. Francis Johnson, Sally Taylor, and Snalley, met last summer with Dean Swanson and this fall with President Ames and will soon be presenting their proposals to the faculty. Their major suggestion will be the establishment of a faculty steering committee which would meet on a regular and frequent basis.

Students! Role to be Clarified

In a report to the faculty the committee stated, "...communication among the faculty, and among the faculty and administration is too diffuse and the role of students in a revised governance scheme must be clarified."

Snalley explained that the student representatives on council are a part of Student Government and have a body to whom they can regularly report as does the administration. However, the faculty only meets once a month and council representatives do not report back.

Should the faculty approve the adoption of a steering committee, the faculty members on council would have a body to whom they are directly responsible. This would increase communication and make their role on council more significant.

Both faculty, students and administration recognize the importance of College Council as a forum for discussion, but the existing Faculty committee system makes College Council's area of jurisdiction questionable. As David Robb, another faculty representative on Council explained, "there are already continued on page nine

Students and faculty speak about
College at President's Conference

by Bonnie Greenwald

"How do students today feel about working for such corporations as IBM and General Motors? What kinds of interactions does the Judiciary Board deal with?" These and other questions dealing with campus and academic life were posed to a student panel by parents and alumni visiting the college last Friday and Saturday for the President's Conference. Established last spring, the two day conference is directed at aiding alumni "gain some insight about the quality of the educational experience our students receive today," explained President Oakes Ames in his letter to participants. The fifty visitors attended classes Friday morning and then ate lunch in the dorms, where they had the opportunity to talk with students first hand.

The value of this sort of contact with students and classes was expressed by one alumni member of the Board of Trustees; she stated that this is the only time she can really get input from students as well as getting a feel for the campus and what's going on. This insight is extremely important for a board member to have, she added.

In the afternoon, following a tour of Cummings, the group divided in half with one group participating in a question and answer period with students and the other with faculty.

Faculty participants included Beth Hannah, associate professor of education; Minor Myers, assistant professor of government; David Robb, Chaplain and assistant professor of religion; continued on page four

Present budget requires
New spending policies

by Mimi Gissott

Although there was a $545,500.00 deficit in the college's final budget last year, a balanced budget is presently being considered for this year, President Ames and Mr. William Churchill said in a Pandit interview this week.

"We're not making any unbudgeted expenses," Mr. Ames explained. There is a spending freeze on all building maintenance, equipment, and appointments. Spending in these three areas are being deferred until the spring, except in cases of extreme emergencies.

Telephone service over-spending has become a difficult situation to control, according to the top administrative officials. As stated in the campus community, because expenditures alone could produce a deficit of $10,000.00 dollars, three means of control are being considered. These means are exhortation, removal of phones, or more stringent limits upon personnel and purposes of calls. President Ames said that the college's gift income for the month of October was smaller than last year. But since most of the gifts are being donated solely for the new library, there is less need for the current operating funds.

The success of last year's telethon to reach alumni and get them to contribute lends Mr. Ames to believe that there will be more meaningful donations on a regular basis. "Once people start giving, they often continue."

Mr. Churchill explained that one problem which contributed to last year's deficit was the time lag between money spent and when the expenditure is recorded. He believes that a tighter purchasing system, where purchase orders would have to be approved by department heads, and the accounting office, would be helpful in alleviating that problem. Although there is a necessary time lag between the monthly departmental budget reports received by the department heads, Mr. Churchill said, "we obviously need to have quicker reporting of the obligations made by department heads," he added. continued on page nine

The inside of the new library looking out

by Laura Brown

Alumni will once again be contacted by student phoners in a telethon to raise funds for the new library. Deborah Zilly, the Director of Annual Giving, who is organizing the telethon, expects it to be held in early December.

Money pledged in the week long telethon will also be channeled into scholarship aid, the college's daily operating expenses, and any other programs designated by the individual contributors.

Efforts will be directed at contacting New England alumni who weren't reached during last April's telethon, as well as those who have never contributed. Ms. Zilly hopes to reach alumni in other states also-possibly New York and New Jersey.

Ms. Zilly has set no monetary goal for December's telethon; more gifts donated on a regular basis most efforts will be directed at alumni who have never contributed.

Churchill explained to William Churchill, the Secretary of the College and Assistant to the President who was currently receiving contributions from approximately 32 percent of the alumnus.

Ms. Zilly feels that the telethon will undoubtedly improve public relations; alumni are usually interested in life at Conn, especially since it has become coed and the telethon provides them with the opportunity to question students here.

A multi-talented telethon is planned for the spring and will hopefully be as successful as last year's October telethon. That telethon raised more than $20,000 for the new library from 1,400 alumni in Connecticut, Massachusetts, and Rhode Island. Fifty students participated as phoners, with 20 students calling Monday-Friday evenings from the Sykes Alumni Center in Crozier-Williams.

“Experience your Own hunger”

A nationwide day of fast, “Fast for a World Harvest,” is being held on November 21. Connecticut College is being asked to join in on that day. The purpose of the fast is not only to collect funds for the hungry people of Asia, Africa, and Latin America. It is also to provide a day for national awareness of the world hunger situation and our responsibilities nationally and individually for alleviating it.

Fasting for a day offers the Conn. College students an opportunity to understand better the personal pain of hunger by experiencing it at a small level. From this can grow a better appreciation of the lack of choice, and our responsibilities nationally and Individually for alleviating the continual hunger of those who go without food because they have no other choice.

We hope that Conn. College will be sensitive to the victims of hunger and join in on the national fast. The unified effort will reaffirm in us that there are basic needs of people all over the world, felt by us, which cannot be diminished by nationalistic differences.

Our recognition of our responsibility for all human beings is fundamental to our existence. By our exercising our will and choosing not to eat on this day, we become more dramatically aware of the lack of choice, and of the hopelessness of those who are starving.

The Following positions are now open on the Pundit Editorial Staff:

Editor-in-Chief (applicants for co-editors-in-chief will also be considered)
Fine Arts Editor
All interested applicants must attend tonight’s Pundit meeting in Crozier-Williams, Room 212. Applicants must bring a typewritten statement explaining the reasons for their interest, past experience, and any other information they believe is pertinent.

Next week will be the last issue of PUNDIT for this academic semester.

Dear Editors,

The article that condemns Carter Heyward’s sermon as lacking impact and being condescending to us as students avoids, I think, the main issue. True, as a cry for freedom to a women’s liberation movement, it was a poor oratorical example. There was no presentation of the arguments, either logical or emotional, in favor of the ordination of women to the priesthood. It is questionable, however, whether the pulpit is the place for such a lecture anyway.

The purpose of a sermon is, to put it a big idea in a small package, the clarification of points of scripture in their application to the lives of the listeners. It is neither the time for a speaker to editorialize on current events, nor to give a sub-story of his or her life. Certainly, it is the place of the church to keep in tune with the world and to take action, verbal or physical, in light of Christian doctrine. The role of women in society falls into this category. But even expounded upon in the right way, a sermon on women’s ordination can not help but serve closely the line between preaching and campaigning.

Sensible people who believe that women cannot be priests are not denying the obvious intellectual equality between the sexes. Their problem is with the sacramental validity of a woman as a priest. I would question the value of this particular person, Carter Heyward, as a teacher in the church. Her sermon had nothing to do with Christianity. The impression I got from the discussion after the service makes me wonder whether she is not to give a stepstone for her ideas about women’s lib.

Sincerely,

Lee Ann Thomas
Hailing Heyward's Sermon again

by David Jerda

Two letters written to the paper but pertaining to an entirely different issue concerned an article I wrote on Carter Heyward's sermon are printed elsewhere. I therefore feel compelled to try to reply at some length in response to the letters. While it is not the general policy of this paper to publish letters on any subject, I feel in this case it is necessary to review my previous statements and add to the discussion. A lack of space in the last issue prevented me from expanding some statements.

Each letter, in its own way, contains that I missed the point of either of my previous statements or both. It is impossible for me to say, "I disagree," and end the argument there. The arguments raised by each writer and by me are purely opinions, and must be looked at in that light.

The contention of one writer is that Rev. Heyward's parable was effective in that the congregation did catch the message. In many cases, I have found myself, after a few minutes of silence, wondering what the point was. In reply to these letters, I would like to reaffirm my position. With an audience as responsive and with as much potential as us, Rev. Heyward could have accomplished much more for his cause. We as listeners were given no ideas as to how to deal with sex in religion in our home towns or wherever else we happened to be. It is my contention that only with spreading the word, in the same manner that the teachings of Jesus were first spread, can the obstacle of a campaign be overcome.

My major complaint rests with the ridiculous amplification in parts of the parable. Granted, we need the ability to laugh at ourselves sometimes. Not only does it relieve tensions, but many times reveals the roots of our problems. There have been better ways to present a case as paramount as this than by resorting to ill humor with the intention of the emotions of the listeners.

"Whose house are you sleeping over?"

by David Jerdan

Complaints are constantly being made about the lack of recreational activity. Students find themselves with free time and can discover no ways to spend it. Aside from the facilities that the College provides, in the form of Cro and its activities, there is a way of spending time and enjoying it: games.

For ease of description, they can be grouped into categories according to playing time. The games requiring the least amount of time usually consist of the ever-popular deck of cards. Medium-length games are usually table games with dice. The longest playing times are required for the chess and other strategy games.

Card games are most popular because they take up the shortest amount of time. It is my opinion that actual occurrence is to see two or three people get together and start playing. Games such as checkers, cro, or bridge, cannot garnet, from gin to bridge, poker to whist. In the course of an hour's time, the people playing a game may not include any of the original players. A person will take a break between study, play a few hands to relax, then return to the books. Someone else comes and enters the game, and so on.

Most table games require, on the average, a half-hour or more to complete. Games in this category include Parcheesi, Trouble and other dice-controlled games.

At Conn.: boards for the bored

Compiled by Mimi Ginett

Class reunions for the earliest classes of Collegian graduates were not merely opportunities to reminisce. They were occasions to witness the physical, social, residential, and administrative growth of a school which had been beset by terrors of its existence during their four years there.

One member of the class of '24, has chosen to share some of her memories with us through a letter. She recently held her reunion in Thames Hall, where students ate in two shifts at tables set for eight. Apparently the last person to arrive at a table was forced to do the serving. She said that although the food was very good, the people took so long to bring it, that everyone filled up on the bread that was already set on the table.

The faculty members ate in two rooms at the south end of Thames. One evening when she was working in that dining hall, the faculty were so busy talking that they refused to leave. All of the waitresses gathered together in the small kitchen and began singing "The Star-Spangled Banner." The faculty took off immediately.

She remembers the class of '24 choosing a Viking ship for their class mascot when they were juniors. A friend of hers from the '25 had chosen a lighthouse, which she drove around in a taxicab the entire day before her reunion, as a means of keeping it safely guarded.

Gym classes, which were required, were held in Hillier Hall. The gymnasium was also used for vespers, convocation, proms, dances, and plays. The uniforms consisted of black serge bloomers, a white middy blouse, black cotton stockings, and white sneakers. In these outfits they played tennis, soccer, croquet, volleyball, handball, and track.

In 1924 the class of '29 celebrated their fifth reunion with a dress ball. The women wore the latest fashions and the fire chief hats had been contributed by the Texas Oil Company and the New London Department. Two long fire hoses served as the class laurel as it was carried on the shoulders of one of the members.

An "informational picket line" of about 15 members of Carpenters Local 30, was formed outside of Union Station this week. The pickets were responding to the renovation of Union Station by non-union workers employed by the Goodhue Company.

The union members alleged that Field does not pay his workers the prevailing wage and fringe benefits. The local's business manager, James Davis, said that Field recently started working for the renovation, rather than the private development agency - Union Station Associates - Field's company would have to pay the prevailing rate.

The vice-president of the construction company, Herbert Clark, said that workers on the project are being paid the prevailing rate as required by law.

Restoration work on the station will be federal funding.

Please To Stop Eviction Denied

According to the Conn. College New London, the eviction of former Michelle Dean of Students Warren Swanson from college housing. The motion was by Swanson's attorney, Avenum J. Sprecher, was an attempt to remove the student from the university by the court's jurisdiction.

The judge also denied a motion by Sprecher to have Conn. College President Robert C. Weller testify on his reasons for Swanson's dismissal from union on last New Year's Eve. Swanson, who has been trying to get reinstated, claims that his dismissal was illegal and therefore, asked to bring him from college housing is also illegal. The college told Swanson on July 16 that eviction proceedings would begin, and that he had to vacate the college-owned house on Kennedy Lane by July 29.

According to student leaders, $334 was recently collected at a student-sponsored dinner dance to aid Swanson in his legal actions.

Heroin Dealer Foulerts Bond

Ernesto R. Quinlana, 34, who is said to be one of the state's leading heroin dealers, forfeited a $2,000 bond last Tuesday, as neglecting to appear in Superior Court.

He was to answer a grand jury indictment which charged him with possession of one ounce of heroin with intent to sell. Quinlana, with Norma J. Nieves, 25, last July after a thorough police investigation.

This dispute has been going on since the summer when a state police investigation of heroin activity in the state.

Intimate Lifestyles Symposium will

Consider sex, love and marriage

By K.D. Maynard

Today and tomorrow, November 15 and 16, Connecticut College will be hosting a symposium on "Current and Future Intimate Lifestyles: Sex, Love, and Marriage," an event that will discuss sex, love, and marriage from various perspectives.

The symposium, which is being held at the college, is expected to attract attendees from different disciplines, including sociology, psychology, and gender studies. The event will feature discussions on topics such as sexual orientation, gender identity, and the evolution of intimate relationships in contemporary society.

Prominent speakers at the symposium will include Dr. Jane Smiley, a professor of sociology at the University of California, Berkeley, and Dr. John Mack, a professor of psychology at Harvard University.

The symposium will also include a panel discussion on the impact of social media on intimate relationships, with panelists including Dr. Emily Greenberg, a professor of psychology at the University of Pennsylvania, and Dr. John Miller, a professor of sociology at the University of Chicago.

The symposium will conclude with a roundtable discussion on the future of intimate relationships, moderated by Dr. David Oppenheimer, a professor of psychology at the University of California, Los Angeles.

Tax act to attract industries rejected

By Katherine Hill

In a move that could be seen as an attempt to attract industries, the city of New London is considering the passage of a tax act that would offer tax breaks to businesses located in the city.

The tax act, which has been under discussion for several months, would provide businesses with a 50% reduction in property taxes for the first three years of operation. Additionally, the act would provide a 25% reduction in property taxes for the following three years.

City officials have indicated that the tax act is intended to attract new businesses to the city, which would in turn create jobs and stimulate the local economy.

More care for your plants

by Lori Mead

African Violet (Saintpaulia) A healthy African violet can be one of the loveliest house plants to own. The color of the flowers range from varying shades of pink to the deepest purples, and the leaves come in a variety of shapes and textures. This plant will flower all through the year if it is given enough sun, yet it also thrives under fluorescent lighting. If the plant does not flower, it is probably because it is not receiving enough light.

Light - Sun or very bright light Water - Keep evenly moist with lukewarm water. Water alternately from the top of the pot to the bottom of the base. Soil - There is prepackaged mixture which you can buy or you can mix your own of topsoil, perlite and peat moss. Propagation - Cut off a leaf with a vining feature. Either plant in a sterile medium, or remove a new crown (joining where the stems and roots meet.) and plant it in another. Special attention - Keep the pot small and grow only one crown per pot. The plants like high humidity; otherwise the leaves tend to crisp. To maintain the humidity, set the pot on a layer of moist sand or pebbles. Velvet Plant (Gynura aurantiaca) This plant has rich purple leaves with a vining feature. It is harder than it looks and requires constant pruning to keep it looking healthy. Light - Full Sun

Election '76: Reagan in the running

By Michael J. Gasley

This is the first in a series of articles that will attempt to familiarize Podunks readers with both the candidates and issues of the upcoming Presidential primaries. Before placing one's faith in any of the dozen or so candidates seeking the Presidency, it is important for us to understand what and for whom you are voting. One only has to look back to 1972 for this notion to become painfully clear. Recent polls, however, have shown that a significant majority of Americans have never even heard of over half of the Presidential aspirants.

In terms of public exposure, President Ford has the clear advantages over the Democrats as he is constantly reported in the public eye and he uses his office for his own political benefit. At this time, however, Ford is not considered by the public as a possible candidate for the nomination of the Democrats. But, the challenge from the conservative element in his own party, who in an increasing number are throwing their support behind the 84 year old, former California Governor, Ronald Reagan. Reagan, who is expected to formally announce his candidacy on Nov. 9, has been one of the original Ford's to receive the Republican Presidential nomination by the Ford supporters. Before early primaries in New Hampshire, Florida and North Carolina. Thus, in nearly every state in which Eugene McCarthy's strong showing in the N.D. Democratic primary has been challenged, Ford and Johnson have abandoned the race. Reagan would like to undermine Ford's candidacy and preserve the President's prestige, arouse conservative disillusionment, and get the campaign rolling that would deliver him enough delegates for the nomination.

Although Gerald Ford is the most conservative President we have had since Herbert Hoover, and has the support of a clear majority of Republicans, Reagan remains extremely popular among conservatives, including rural independents and some for whom less important issues are of concern. George Washington, for example, has managed to reach a large audience with his views by means of his political commentary which is syndicated and appears in over 400 newspapers. Reagan has also helped public political columnists in about 20 newspapers, and has traveled the country on speaking engagements, at the rate of 10 a month for each of which he is paid $8,000 plus expenses.

Although it is still too early to predict the effectiveness of the Reagan campaign, it has a very good chance of upsetting Ford in the November's first primary in New Hampshire. If Reagan wins, he will be seen as the future of the Republican Party. Seemingly, the council for the future of the Republican Party is in the hands of the conservative element in the party. Michael de, proposed a committee to study the future of the Republican Party. Seemingly, the committee is a group of liberal Republicans who believe in the future of the Republican Party. U.N. Vote on Zionism

On Monday night the General Assembly voted 72 to 35, with 28 abstentions, to recognize Zionism as "a form of racism." The vote was 72 to 35, with 28 abstentions, inspired by the Arabs, had been adopted in committees on Oct. 17. Belgium, the U.S., and Long Island, respectively, noticed the decision. The resolution was adopted until the fall of 1976 when the General Assembly meets again. That decision was rejected by a vote of 67 to 66, with 15 abstentions.

Chaim Herzog, Israel's chief diplomat, said that he was disappointed at the vote against the proposal to adopt the anti-Zionist draft. "This was the night," he said, "on Nov. 15, when our army launched a coordinated attack on the Jewish community in Germany." The Assembly decided to establish a Committee on the Exercise of Rights of the Palestine People, with a vote of 93 to 18, and 27 abstentions. The United States, the U.S. allies, and the U.S. are the only non-Arab states that are not part of the resolution to return the land to the Palestinians. Since the resolution was adopted by the Assembly last year.

Before the vote Mr. Herzog said, "the issue is not Israel or Zionism. The issue is the continued existence of this organization which has been called to its lowest point of discredit by a coalition of despots and racists."

The U.N. vote on Zionism was a historic vote. It is the first time in the history of the U.N. that a vote on Zionism has been taken. The vote was 72 to 35, with 28 abstentions. The United States, the U.S. allies, and the U.S. are the only non-Arab states that are not part of the resolution to return the land to the Palestinians. Since the resolution was adopted by the Assembly last year.

Dec. 15 has been set as the tentative date for the trial of Patricia Hearst. At a hearing next week, her lawyers hope to have the trial postponed on the question of Miss Hearst's competency.

Judge Oliver J. Carter had declared the Hearst heiress fit to stand trial last week, but the defense believes that the Judge's conclusions drawn from the evidence that had been released in a distorted form. The reports filed by three psychiatrists and one on the medical evidence are now under judicial seal.

Mr. Hearst has set a hearing for Nov. 29, when Miss Hearst will be allowed to call psychiatric witnesses. Mr. Carlon, one of Miss Hearst's attorneys, told Judge Carter that when a report stated that a defendant "is far from competent for trial," that conclusion should be known to the public.

The Federal prosecutors are anxious for an early trial in order to take advantage of the possibility of Miss Hearst's release on recognizance. The Federal Speedy Trial Act takes effect on Sept. 28, and persons awaiting trial, who are unable to post bail, or who are not permitted to post bail, are not allowed to run for office until the trial is not set within 90 days of the arrest. The government fears that Miss Hearst's parents would not be able to pay any amount set, thereby providing an opportunity for their daughter to run away again.

On Monday Judge Robert Muro Jr. will hand down his decision prohibiting the removal of the respirator sustaining the life of 21-year-old Karen Quinn. He said that his decision was based on medical reasons and on "the role of the physician in our society and his duty to his patient." Miss Quinn, who has been in a coma for almost seven months, has been declared legally alive by the Court. Although the defense argued for a constitutional right to medical freedom, Judge Muro said that his decision was within the best interest of the patient and consistent with her temporal - not spiritual - desires.

In September Mr. Quinlan had filed a guardianship petition to allow his authorization of the removal of "all extraordinary means of sustaining the vital functions of the brain." The petition was turned down and Mr. Quinlan was named guardian of his daughter's property while Mr. Paul Arstong, defense attorney, was named guardian of her person.

The Court's decision was handed down without prejudice, which means that it cannot be appealed to a higher court.

The arboretum was a surprise in itself, with its evergreen and budding laurels, and its beauty that spoke to those who remembered the marshall swamp hole on which they had attempted to skate five years before.

The 20th anniversary of the college was celebrated with a production entitled "The Piacent of the Tree." It was based upon the 1899 storybook of the same name. "As a tree planted by the rivers of water that bringeth forth its fruit in season." In the production the Seed was brought to the Spirit of the Hilltop by the Four Winds. The Rain, and the Sun, and the other flowers helped it to grow. As the Seed grew into a tree, its shelter was sought by Maidens of Trust and Trust. As the seasons passed, the fruit ripened, and the tree continued to grow, forcing Leadership and Progress.

Tasty and innovative jazz

by Keith Ritter

Despite the aura of decay that prevails over the world of rock music, the jazz world has continued along the path of innovation and invention it began in the 50's. Last week, I received some particularly interesting albums from Impulse Records, one of the leading jazz labels. One disc clearly demonstrates the strong contributions that John Coltrane made to jazz and how ahead of his time. Trane really was while the other record shows how jazz is not content to build, but also needs to design, as demonstrated in the work of Keith Jarrett.

The double-album set entitled The Gentle Side of John Coltrane is a welcome addition to any collection. When Coltrane died on July 17, 1967, the world of jazz lost one of its leading talents. This album clearly demonstrates the movement contained in the transitions Coltrane made during that time. I would urge any serious jazz collector to obtain this recording.

Another artist whose style is constantly changing is Keith Jarrett. His latest release, Backhand, is curious in that it demonstrates Jarrett's strength in improvisation but also shows his tendency to become inaccessible.

Jarrett's style is much like Ornette Coleman's; influential but rarely imitated. Perhaps this is because Jarrett is a sort of new杰宝 - his shows are selective, his music is good because it shows his momentary difficulties with his style.

Rehearsing Godspell day by day

by Jim Dikan

Godspell, the musical based on the Gospel according to St. Matthew, will be presented here at Harkness Chapel November 3, 7, 11 and 21. A company of students, under the direction of Jim Crabtree, Assistant Professor of Theater, has been in rehearsal for the show for nearly two months.

In the play, various parables are acted out and the teachings of Jesus are dramatically represented. First produced in 1971 at Carnegie-Mellon University under director John-Michael Tebelak, the show has lyrics taken directly from the scriptures. Stephen Schwartz was the lyricist, his shows Pippin and The Magic Show are currently on Broadway.

Rights to college productions of Godspell became available at the end of August, and Mr. Crabtree wasted no time in preparing them. He decided on a larger cast and has "fourteen good people" instead of the usual ten. Godspell was originally created through improvisation, and Mr. Crabtree has continued to work with the techniques the actors play themselves. Each actor then makes adaptations in their characters to bring them to life. "Each character has a great deal to do all the time, and the whole cast is constantly on the stage almost the entire time. Almost everyone has at least one brief solo," said Mr. Crabtree.

He also expressed excitement at the upcoming performances and is generally pleased with and has enjoyed the production. "The music is wonderful and the cast is very strong. I am very pleased with everyone's work on building up to this point. The group is very experienced; they've been in many shows here and elsewhere."

In addition to a fine cast, the actual situation of the production will enhance its performances. The chapel is not only the most logical place for the show - it will also require very little extra scenery. Certain technical innovations have been made there, investments which will benefit future productions. Tickets are on sale now for what promises to be a highlight of the theatrical season this semester.
Charles Wright to read his omissions poems

Charles Wright will read from his poetry on Sunday, November 16 at 9 p.m. in the Harriette Chapel Crypt. The reading is part of the English Department's Coffee Spoon Series and the Connecticut Poetry Circuit.

Charles Wright was born in Tennessee and educated at Davidson College and the University of Iowa. He has lived in Italy for six years—in Verona as a translator for the Army, in Rome as a Fulbright scholar and in Venice as a Fulbright lecturer. He has travelled over most of Europe beginning in Italy by using Ezra Pound's Italian Cantos first as a guidebook, then as a reference book, finally as a copybook, which is the way I began writing poetry too.

Wright is the author of three volumes of poetry: Bloodlines (1974), Hard Freight (1974, a 1974 National Book Award nominee), and The Grave of the Right Hand (1986). He has written two chapbooks, The Dream Animal and The Venice Notebook, which is a frequent contributor to Poetry, which awarded him The Eunice Tiefjens Memorial Prize in 1969. He teaches in the Creative Writing Center of the University of California at Irvine. His poems are collected in The Seminary Fellow for 1975-1976. James Tate wrote of Hard Freight, "Charles Wright is a reluctant, painstaking Craftsman who hones his poems into a succinct and delicate inevitability. They are spare and ominous, populated with absences—the voice of the poems is old, gossiping, fatigued, as much Mediterranean as American."

The Concertation of tomorrow's Feature Flicks, stars Gene Hackman (of French Connection fame) as a professional surveillance operator. In addition to conveying a timely message about the privacy of individuals in the cinema, the film is also a fine vehicle for an excellent characterization by Hackman.

At first, we are amazed by the vast array of gadgetry associated with "eavesdropping for fun and profit." Hackman and his staff are on the job and are recording every word spoken by a couple having a quiet conversation, walking in the park. Not only can their observers pick up their words with such unobtrusiveness and with such efficiency that we begin to fear for comments we overhear made in similar situations.

The plot takes off when Hackman overhears a plot to kill the Executive Director of his boyfriend. The absurd morality becomes evident then: should the listener, who has always remained undescribed by his profession, take action to prevent this crime from being committed? Of course, such a problem is absurd in the first place, as everything Hackman does is immoral. The ensuing examination of his psyche, his justifications and personal code, is far more engaging than the plot of the film as it develops.

The Conversation came in on the heels of the Watergate scandal and was successful largely due to its timing. In another time, it might have easily been a "sleeping," a movie which, despite its quality, is a box-office failure. The sudden revelations of buggings and recordings, however, made it the focus of national attention.

One of the most fascinating and sobering parts of the film is set at a surveillance trade show. A tale of rise of microphones, receivers, recorders and other tools of the trade are displayed and demonstrated. It is truly shocking to see the enormous extent of an industry devoted solely to the invasion of privacy, and we are presented with yet another level of morality, one with which we are all too familiar. The existence of Big Business based on patently unwarrantable activities has been and continues to be one of the ills of modern society.

Since The Conversation is essentially a suspense, the plot and its resolution will not be discussed further. It is enough to say that Hackman does, indeed, become involved in the murder. The viewer would do well, however, to consider this film a warning as much as a mystery.

The poetic risks of Merrill

James Merrill, winner of the National Book Award in Poetry in 1967 and the Bollingen Prize in Poetry in 1973, will read on Wednesday, November 13 at 8:00 p.m. in the Harriette Chapel Library (library). The reading is part of the English Department's Coffee Spoon Series.

Merrill's poetry has been praised by other poets, as well as by critics. In The New York Times Book Review, William Meredith wrote The Country of a Thousand Years of Peace, "The verbal elegance, and the American or Prashant world he draws his people and images from are neither frivolous nor precious. They parallel and support grave statements about the human experience. The artist's obligation to entertain us is fulfilled in a way that makes a constant metaphor, life beguiles us from its darker purposes in just this way, and gives its gifts with the same supple confusion."

On Wednesday, November 13 in Dana Hall, the Connecticut College Film Society will present "Citizen Kane." The 1941 film is directed by Orson Welles, and perhaps one of the most complex and intricate films in the history of cinema. The movie describes the story of Charles Foster Kane; his life, his dreams and the struggle of his college nameless foster child. The film is a classic on every level; as a technical achievement, in its acting, in its controversy and complexity. The movie stars are Orson Welles, Joseph Cotton, Henry Shannon and Agnes Moorehead.

Scholarship dollars threatened

by Dudley Flake

A state-sponsored scholarship program is in danger of being dismantled, and this threat seems to affect the financial aid situations of Connecticut College students, as well as those of other Connecticut private college students.

According to Marcia Pond, the financial aid director, Public Act 551 was initiated in 1970 to secure educational opportunities for private college students with Connecticut residencies. This act was said to be an attempt to avoid the construction of new facilities on already overcrowded state college campuses.

The law created a program with an initial base of $1 million, which was distributed among the eighteen private colleges. The colleges were directed to give 60% of that amount to their financial aid students while reserving the remaining 20% per cent of the colleges' own use.

Vandalism and damage to the new library has been reported. Locks on the doors were broken, tools were stolen and the one column which was marred will cost $120 to repair. Because fresh cement had been laid, the van's footsteps were impressed. Bike thefts continue this semester on campus; four from the Complex, two from Larrabee, and one from J.A., since November 5.

With His Strut", the wonderful fugal section of "Worthy is the Lamb", and the triumphant "Hallelujah!". These sections were by far among the best of the afternoon, along with Mr. Parke's "The Shall break Them", Miss Schwerin's enthralling "How Beautiful Are the Feet of Them!"; and Mr. Foster's exciting aria, "O Ye Nations So Fauriously Raging". It should be noted that the chorus' forcefulness and moving, despite its great lack of voices, and their performance should be highly praised in light of the circumstances it generated.

Aside from the pitfalls of the ill-tuned violins, the concert was a quite enjoyable performance of the rarely completely performed Messiah, and the Connecticut College Chorus came through with a spectacular and personally exciting performance. I honestly await their next concert with impatience and high expectations.

The Connecticut Conference of Independent Colleges which consists of the presidents of the state's private colleges, is currently lobbying for the continuation and possible expansion of the program. Interested students are urged to petition their congressmen to work for the program.

An accident occurred on Monday when a student's arm went through a glass door in Palmer Auditorium which had been broken. He was taken by ambulance to Lawrence and Memorial Hospitals.

Nov. 5: A female student was victim of verbal obscenities and sexual abuse near Palmer Library.

Nov. 3: A 14 year old male was seen exposing himself indirectly near Park. Security was called, picked him up, and his parents were notified.

On the morning of November 2 a door in Larrabee was accidentally broken by a student. The south door was broken later that day and there are no suspects.

In Croeter-Williams, in the hallway in front of the Alumni Lounge, letters have been stolen off of the wall. Windham was vandalized when a student kicked out the glass from the east entrance door.

November 1: A camera and a speedo were found missing from a student's room. The student claims that his door was locked on Friday when he left school, and when he returned on Saturday the door was still locked but the items were gone.

October 31: Halloween Night, one student drove around campus knocking down signs and drove over the bank at the Chapel.

November 6: $40 dollars was stolen from a room in Lamb-Dal. The student's door was locked and the money was left on top of his desk.

The Coke machine in Larrabee was pried open and the money taken from the coin box. In K.B., a separate telephone was ripped out and thrown down the stairwell. There are no suspects.

November 5: At 5:45 a.m., a black male from New London was prowling the halls of Park. He was picked up by Security. On November 9 a prowler was found near Smith and was removed from campus.

The final deadline for submitting Yearbook pictures for publication in the 1976 Kolle is Wednesday, November 19th. After this date no photographs will be accepted. Seniors who did not have their pictures taken by the Kolle photographer, Mr. Langer, in October must submit their personal photograph to Box 821 or Smith 207 by November 19th. No extensions can or will be granted due to a very tight production schedule. All submitted photographs must include the student's name and major attached to it. Questions can be submitted to Bernard McMullan, Senior Editor, at Smith 207.

Flag football draws to a finish; Play-offs will be this weekend

By Steve Price

It’s finally over. The regular season, that is. Four teams have survived to participate in the play-offs. More about them later.

First, there were several games during the last week of the season that was well remembered.

Larabee turned in its finest effort of the year by tying favored Smith-Burdick 7-7. Quarterback Dave Palen sparked Larabee with a tough, tenacious performance that was only matched by Quad’s running back, scoring the tying touchdown in the final minutes. The Quad stunned Burdick 15-14 to knock favored Burdick out of the playoffs. Quad quarterback Steve Carlson scored late in the fourth quarter and then ran for the 2 point conversion to give the Quad the victory.

The play-off schedule begins this weekend with Harkness facing Morrison on Saturday at 1:30 and Lambdin meeting the Quad on Sunday, also at 1:30. The winners of these games will then play in the Super Bowl on Saturday, November 22.

The game between South Division champion Harkness and North Division runner-up Morrison will be a rematch, as those teams met during the regular season. Harkness won that game 49-14, but the score should be closer on Saturday. Several of Harkness’ top players who did not play in the earlier game will be back in action. Harkness’ strength lies in a varied offense, led by quarterback Gordie Milne and halfback Jim Briggs.

In order to close the gap that appeared in the previous Saturday’s game will also be a battle of the best.

Harkness will have to overcome the inconsistency that has plagued them, especially defensively. Morrison was not beaten during the regular season, although they were tied twice. Strengths include a balanced offensive attack directed by quarterbacks Dick Dick and a strong line anchored by Pablo Fitzmaurice. Another plus for Morrison is their running attack. The Quad only scored three touchdowns in the playoffs that has played the other three teams during the regular season. One concern for Morrison is that most of their starters play both ways, another in the performance of the defensive backfield.

Sunday’s game features North Division champion Lambdin against second place Quad of the South. Lambdin had the best record in the league during the regular season, won only that 14-14 tie with Morrison standing in the way of a perfect 8-0 mark. They achieved this distinction despite losing starting quarterback Ted Riffkin with an injury in the second game of the year. Rumor has it that Riffkin will be back for Sunday’s game.

If he returns, quarterback Tom Faller will be back to the backfield to join Bob House, thus giving Lambdin a potent 1-2 punch for offense. Lambdin’s defense, led by linemate Mike Duggan, allowed the fewest points during the regular season. One question mark for Lambdin is the fact that they were only tested once during the season, the game being their only close contest.

Morrison game, Harkness will have to overcome the inconsistency that has plagued them, especially defensively. Morrison was not beaten during the regular season, although they were tied twice. Strengths include a balanced offensive attack directed by quarterbacks Dick Dick and a strong line anchored by Pablo Fitzmaurice. Another plus for Morrison is their running attack. The Quad only scored three touchdowns in the playoffs that has played the other three teams during the regular season. One concern for Morrison is that most of their starters play both ways, another in the performance of the defensive backfield.

Quad during the season 37-4. Quad relies on the passing combination of Steve Carlson to Roberts. A strong defense, which will be tested in the Lambdin ground game. The Quad will have to greatly improve their offense, if they hope to get to the Super Bowl. Their game against Burdick surprised a lot of people, including the Quad team that faces Lambdin Sunday bears little resemblance to the team that Lambdin saw earlier.

Field hockey team plays Final games; 9-4-1 record

By Alison Macmillan

The women’s field hockey team experienced a defeat and a tie last week against two of their toughest opponents. On Wednesday, Conn played their final home game against Yale. Unfortunately, the Lambs fell under Yale’s feet and lost the game 1-2.

Sarah Burchenal once again scored a brilliant aerial attack for Conn.’s lone goal of the game. Conn. also had a few more near goals, but did not have the strength to drive them. Conn. ends the season with a respectable record of 9 wins and 4 losses and one tie.

Gymnastics Exhibitions — loss of tumbling

There will be a gymnastic meet at 7:30 in the gym. The Conn. College Women’s Gymnastics team will perform with the Mystic Gymnastics Club and women’s team gymnastics team. There will be a demonstration of routines on all equipment, group tumbling and a variation on group team.

Changes in Swim Schedule

The women’s swim team will compete in two more races this year. They will race URI on Nov. 19, home and SMU Nov. 20. All other meets were cancelled because the swim team is unable to race competitively due to lack of numbers.

ICE HOCKEY TEAM starts season; Interest and spirit unmatched

by Chris Abbott

As the 1975-76 hockey season begins, avid hockey players ready themselves for the long season ahead. The most impressive thing about the hockey team is the sheer numbers. This year more than fifty players are taking to the ice to try out for the hockey squad. The team will carry approximately three lines and three defense pairs as well as the two goalies. A spare player may be carried in case of injury. Two hard training practices have taken place already as well as a scrimmage against one of the Wesleyan Intramural teams. The practices were at Wesleyan (45 minutes away) and at George School, a private Prep school, a mere hour and 15 minutes away in Newport, R.I.

Training sessions, coached by Eric Birnbbaum and Mark Walsh have been demanding as well as good fun.

Cuts from the team are being worked on now. Seasoned veterans have remarked as to the quality of hockey after watching the freshmen and transfers. One said, “If the quality of hockey continues to rise the way it has this year, Connecticut College will soon be competing with some of the smaller colleges with established hockey teams; all we need now is a rink.”

The team’s first scrimmage took place last Sunday night at Wesleyan. Conn took five lines and four sets of defense, in addition to two goalies. The team having practiced only twice, tired easily near the end of the scrimmage. The score was 4-2 in favor of the opposition.

Conn., coached by Chris Abbott and Mark Walsh. The game stayed close in the opening half hour or so but the lack of scoring time showed in the end of the game.

By Kathy Dickson

The first meet of the women’s swim team was held Wednesday, October 29, against Central Conn. State College. Six women participated — five swimmers and one diver. The Conn. team made a strong showing, capturing three firsts, four seconds, five thirds, and two fourths.

First place finishes were: Leslie Whitecomb, 50 yard fly, 33.4; Kathy Dickson, 50 yard breast, 36.3; Ginny Clarkson, 22.7 points. Second place finishes were: Leslie Whitecomb, 50 yard fly, 33.4; Kathy Dickson, 50 yard breast, 36.3; Ginny Clarkson, 22.7 points.

New spending policies for budget

In response to the question of why the infirmary renovation had been approved in spite of the spending freeze, President Ames said that the need for the renovation had been decided upon when Dr. McKeehan was hired. The President explained, "It seemed so fundamental that the director of student health services should have an examining room." He added that the estimated $700,000 dollars was being spent in accord with the principles of the new physician, who feels that he should not have to examine patients in his office or in a joint examining room.

Last week Mr. Churchill had not been aware that renovation was in progress within the infirmary. He maintained that the senior staff should exchange information more efficiently, but he added that the project was being handled internally through physical plant. Mr. Ames said that Mr. Ingersoll maintains an overview of the college's budget at any given time, and makes his plans with that total amount in mind. Therefore, the details were not an immediate or major administrative concern.

Last year's deficit was due primarily to a short-fall in income from a decrease in tuition, in gifts, and to an overrun in fuel charges and physical plant expenses. Mr. Churchill explained. He said that this year's Federal Government projections of a 30 per cent fuel increase over the next 18 months is being taken into consideration for next year's budget. Mr. Ames said that although this year's budget balance is going to be close, it is "conscious of ways of saving funds."

College Council role faculty, student and administrative committees on development and academics. He feels that College Council should pick up issues not handled by these committees.

Areas of Involvement Debated
Dean Jewel Cobb said that the only way for the council to achieve more importance in the minds of the College Community is to be given more visibility, and this means dealing with major policy issues.

What areas of policy College Council will become involved with is still under debate both within council and outside. At the moment, however, it is still a part of student government and as the "C Book" states, "It shall serve as a liaison between the students, Faculty and Administration in matters of policy. It shall also serve as an arena for discussion of campus life."

Stir up something tempting with Apple Jack.

If Adam and Eve were tempted by only one big, round, juicy delicious apple, think what tempting things can happen with 20 of them! How many whole, tree-ripened apples go into every fifth Laird's Apple Jack? Add a splash of lemon or lime, a jigger grenadine, 2 jiggers Laird's Apple Jack. Shake with ice; strain into cocktail glass.

Big Apple. Pour one jigger Laird's Apple Jack into a highball glass, over ice. Fill with 7-Up. Add a slice of lemon or lime.

Coke & Apple. 1 jigger Laird's Apple Jack over ice in a highball glass. Add coke and a twist. Maybe Adam and Eve didn't do right by the apple, but you won't go wrong with Laird's AppleJack. (Send for your free recipe book to: Apple Jack, P.O. Box 5077, New York, N.Y. 10022)
