Emma Rodriguez

A Major Work

Poems are hard to read
Pictures are hard to see
Music is hard to hear
And people are hard to love

But whether from brute need
Or divine energy
At last mind eye and ear
And the great sloth heart will move . . .

"There are scholars who, looking at the scientific enterprise from the outside, see the huge and ever growing body of factual knowledge only as a collection of fragments, and they cry for integration an; synthesis. If they would come inside, if only for a sojourn, they might see that we insiders are busily engaged in the very activity that they exhort us to undertake; we are building fragments of information into structures of great beauty, comparable as achievements of the human mind and spirit with the greatest works of art and literature. These structures are a major part of humanism. To define science as technology, or as "classified information," as in a certain dictionary, is as misleading as it would be to characterize the Parthenon as calcium carbonate."
J. H. Hildebrand

child development

Child Development has absorbed the attention of philosophers and scientists from the time of the ancient Greeks, as both compelling scientific problems and as matters of great practical significance for the care of children.

Connecticut offers an unusual program in Chinese that "is not just a major but an intense way of life." We in the department, faculty and students alike, choose to live up to that reputation.

"But apart from this contemporary mood, the ideas of economists and political philosophers, both when they are right and when they are wrong, are more powerful than is commonly understood. Indeed the world is ruled by little else. Practical men, who believe themselves to be quite exempt from any intellectual influences, are usually the slaves of some defunct economist."

"It is certain that the educated man in 1984 will speak the language of science. This is not the issue. The issue is something else. Will the educated man in 1984 be a specialist, a scientist or technician with no other interests, who will run his fellowmen by the meansand brutal processes of efficiency of George Orwell's book? Or will he be a statesman, an administrator, a humanist who is at home in the methods of science, but who does not regard them as mere tools to efficiency? The choice between 1984 and an earthly paradise does not depend on the scientists but on the people for whom they work. And we are the people for whom science works."

With their first goal, their dream has become a reality. The Connecticut College Women's Soccer Team has grown from a club sport with only a manager to an inter-collegiate team under the direction of Coach Fran Shields. Through constant effort and long hours of practice, it has truly shown the Camel's endurance on the playing field. The Women's Soccer Team, with the addition of the Rugby Club, and new Sports Complex, has opened the door to a new era of sports at Conn.

dedication

The faculty at Connecticut College is a unique breed: individuals willing to work on such a close basis with so many students for so long. Students are at college for four short years, but dedicated professors give up a lifetime to serve as guidelines for developing minds. This dedication serves to educate our students in keeping with the high quality that people come to expect from Connecticut College. The years of continuous effort have paid off as seen by the success of our alumni. Our faculty are dedicated to be the best they can: both in and out of the classroom. We only hope our dedication, here, is worthy of theirs. To Professors Chu, Lukosius, and Mayhew, we dedicate the Senior Section to your lasting dedication in the year of your retirement.
