FORTÉ.

Mr. Charles left Jane for Fanny Gray. And tho' we think it very odd it happens ev'ry day. A Lady flirt is bad enough, but oh! there's something

Now Jane was not the girl he thought—her turn was yet to come
"When Mr. Charles Tod calls again—John say I'm not at home"
Next day came out—elope they say (twas in the morning Post)
The heiress and coquette miss G—with Colonel Glossop Coste.

Says Charley Tod—"that's rather odd—but I'll go back to Jane"
"Poor foolish girl—she loves me still—and I can soon explain"
"I have the tact—I'll vow to her—I never meant to roam"
The door was open'd—"Sir" said John Miss Frazier's not at home."

Now by Great Western came a youth whom Jane had nigh forget
He wou'd in haste—she gave her hand—and soon they tied the-knot
A note to Charles said "half past 7"—he thought he'd go at eight
He dress'd with care—and soon was there—the Bride said "you're too late"
"The Parson's so particular he did not chuse to wait": "la, la, la.

All belles and beaux a warning take—pray don't despise my song
And flirt when'er your match you find—for flirting in a throng
But if you strive to win a heart—don't think it "rather odd"
If one and all—we hope you'll meet—the fate of Charley Tod.
